Liz Hazlett is shown as she paraded before the judges' stand during the Daily Tar Heel-sponsored "Miss Candlelight" beauty contest held in the Playmakers Theatre last Thursday night. Enhanced by her beauty,

'PH' Jinx Scores Again . . .

Pat Hines Is Latest Queen To Boast Winning Initials

By Arnold Schulman

When Pat Hines was selected "Miss Candlelight" last week campus followers of local jinx were not surprised. "She couldn't lose," one stated dogmatically. "Her initials are 'P. H.'"

Recent arrivals at the University not yet acquainted with local initial-magic may be surprised to discover that the last four Carolina beauty queens had names beginning with the significant "P. H."

Hole No. 1

It all began when Pat Hole was selected Yackety Yack queen last year. Then followed Pat Hackett as winner of the Sadie Hawkins day Daisy Mae contest, with Pat Harry carrying on the tradition as "Hubba Hubba girl" last February.

Students with 20-20 vision, however, attached no hoax to "Miss Candlelight's" selection, attributing her victory entirely to her perfect "36" figure and genuine "Colgate" smile.

Twenty-two-year-old Pat Hines, from Charlotte, has often been accused of talking like a damn Yankee, but statistically speaking she is both a Tar Heel born and bred. Except for the two years she lived in Florida and her brief trip to California she has never left the North State for any length of time. She would like to move to California now, she said, but husband Bob Hines has other ideas, preferring North Carolina.

Knot Tied Last October

Pat was married last October in Miami. Her husband, an ex-ensign, was stationed there, and before going overseas they decided to make the knot final.

The most exciting event in her life, she said, was her flight across the nation to meet husband-Bob coming home from destroyer duty in the Pacific. Those 30 days together, "Miss Candlelight" said, spent in California and on the trip across country were without a doubt the happiest she has ever known.

Parker, Thurber, Sinatra, Too
She likes Dorothy Parker, James Thurber, and claims she can enjoy Frank Sinatra without swooning. Football is her favorite sport; music her hobby.

Pat is an only child but her husband insists that she isn't spoiled. She is registered for school in the fall as a special student taking courses in music and psychology. She wouldn't consider a career as a model or actress, she said emphatically. She only wants "to be a good wife."

Kind-Hearted Landlord Wanted
She and her husband have decided to have five children, when conditions are appropriate, but for now the big difficulty is finding a place for the two of them to live in the fall. "Won't some kind-hearted person please find an old attic somewhere," she pleaded in desperation. "We started off trying to find an apartment, but now we're desperate. Any old room will do."

Connoisseurs of pulchritude have been quoted to say that local landlords could do much worse.

KEEPING TABS

hours, the lost weekends, and the multitude of cinematographic laboratories?

I told Mom that there was a great deal I had accomplished. I read many things which I didn't think I would read. I studied more than I thought I would in the only cool hours I could find (between one and three a.m.). But still, there was a great deal that I hadn't done. There was a lot of studying to be accomplished before I could call myself an "educated man." But, even as I wrote home a cool breeze came blowing through the window and I decided that it would be easier to save my time and effort and wait until I got home. Then I wouldn't have to write my summaries of the summer, but could tell them in person to the folks. The letter was consequently cut short, and the listlessness has carried over until it was time to do a column today. I wonder if the folks will understand. I wonder if you understand?

is expected to be greatly augmented in the near future.

"Our new photographic laboratory will provide Carolina with an invaluable service heretofore lacking. It will give students here a central place with ample facilities where they will be able to develop their photographic abilities. Furthermore, the negative file to be set up will contain all negatives made here and will readily be of service to all departments for educational use," declared Milner.

yet been set definitely, but that the price would not exceed $7.50 for the entire set of dances.

Tickets to the dances will be put on sale by the Order of the Grail in October.

Dorsey last played here for the May Frolics in 1942. His appearance for the Duke weekend this fall will be the social highlight of the quarter. He will play for dances Friday and Saturday nights, giving a concert Friday afternoon.

Informality Is Change

The announcement that the dances will be informal is a change from previous dances of this type, which have usually been formal in the past.
