DUKE-CAROLINA AFTERMATH: The broad smile that lit up the face of Carl Snively with the blowing of the final whistle in Kenan stadium Saturday afternoon was as wide as ever yesterday, but the silver-haired Dutchman was thinking in terms of bowl bids and Virginia "T" formation plays instead of just the victory over the Blue Devils.

With the Rose Bowl and Orange Bowl signed and sealed, what with Rice closing the deal yesterday to play Tennessee, the big bowl in question now is the Sugar Bowl classic in New Orleans. And the Tar Heels are being mentioned as one of the top choices to play the Georgia-Georgia Tech winner, that is if they defeat Virginia Saturday.

"We have received the usual greetings and feelers from several of the bowls," Snively said yesterday afternoon, "but there is nothing tangible. I'm of the opinion that neither of the contestants in the Sugar Bowl will be decided until after Saturday's game."

Another question is being asked, and that is whether Carolina would accept any bowl bid or not. That is a hard question to answer, but Snively is of the opinion that the Carolina officials would be favorable to one if the team voted for it. However, the Tar Heels aren't letting bowl talk interfere with their intentions this Saturday, for from all we hear they are thinking only of Virginia and of beating the Cavaliers in the traditional battle.

Our own personal opinion of the bowl lineups are a little unfounded, or at least without too much qualification, but from all reports and indications, we believe that Carolina, providing the Tar Heels get by Virginia, will meet the Georgia Tech-Georgia winner in the Sugar Bowl. But we share Snively's opinion that nothing will be decided until after the games Saturday.

It all remains for time to straighten out, but how long a time we cannot say.

Another Southern conference championship became the property of Carolina yesterday afternoon, but not without some anxiety. (The meet went to the Tar Heels by a score of 33-34 over second-place Maryland.)

"We were plenty scared there for a while," puffed Coach Dale Ranson yesterday following the meet. "I was out on the trail and saw the strong bid Maryland was making, and it caused me no end of worry until the final tabulations were made. I think special credit is due Jack Milne, for his position was one we really needed and we were doubtful as to how he could do. The boy hasn't even run since the IC4A meet because of a bruised heel, but he went out today despite the handicap and came in third."

Jimmy Miller, the Tar Heel Harrier captain, came in first and established a course record to lead Carolina to the victory, turning in the exceptional time of 20:00.3, 8.7 seconds ahead of second-place Jimmy Davis of Duke. Mark Burnham, a top notch Carolina runner, ran into a little trouble, passing out on the course but recovering to finish 13th. He collapsed again at the finish line. His never quit attitude is also to be commended, as is the entire operation of the Tar Heels, who have been beaten only in the IC4A running this season. The Ransons meet Virginia Saturday between the half of the football game.

A familiar face was around for the Carolina-Duke game Saturday, and it was none other than All-American guard Jim Jordan, a star of the Ben Carnevale-coached White Phantoms basketball team last season. Jordan, now at Kentucky following his discharge from the navy, has been suffering from leg trouble, however, and thinks he may not do any playing at all this winter. "I haven't practiced for nearly a month," Jordan said, "and I'm afraid my playing days may be over. Things sure look good around here, and it's good to be back, even if only for a visit." . . . Duke didn't get past its own 38-yard line after its touchdown Saturday, made minus seven yards net rushing and five yards passing. A credit indeed to the Tar Heel line.

Charlie Justice has a good chance to finish as high scorer among Southern conference eleven if he can tally a touchdown or two this week. At present the Carolina Express is tied with Jack Cloud of William and Mary, both having registered nine touchdowns in nine games for a total of 54 points. Leo Long of Duke is second with 42 points, made on seven touchdowns. Carolina's Billy Myers is tied for sixth place with 36 points along with Rock Brinkley of Wake Forest, and can jump up with Long by scoring one touchdown this week.

We had a "flat" day of predicting this past week, at least personally speaking, even though we called the touchdowns correct on the Carolina-Duke skirmish. Bob Goldwater and Jim Pharr led the Daily Tar Heel predicting field this week with 17 for 20, Bill Woestendiek was second with 16 for 20, Fred Flagler and yours truly fell to 14 for 20, and George Stirnweiss negotiating 13 for 20 to round out the picture.

The standings:
Irwin Smallwood	140	103	37	.736
Bill Woestendiek	140	102	38	.728
Jim Pharr	125	89	36	.712
Bob Goldwater	140	99	41	.707
Fred Flagler	125	88	37	.703
George Stirnweiss	140	97	43	.693

Shades of Duke-Carolina Classic . . .

Two bits of action from the 22-7 triumph of the Tar Heels over Duke here in Kenan stadium before 40,000 fans last Saturday show Charlie Choo Choo Justice just before being tackled on a punt return and Jack Fitch jumping high into the air to snag a Justice pass good for 31 yards. Fitch's pass catch started the drive that finally ended in the winning touchdown, Fitch going over from the two on a double reverse.

Carolina Cops 33-34 Victory Over Maryland

Miller Takes First In Four-Team Field

By Morty Schaap

The Carolina harriers annexed the Southern conference cross-country crown by eking out a 33-34 victory over the Maryland team. The triumph was scored over a four-team field yesterday afternoon over the Carolina four-mile course.

Jimmy Miller, Tar Heel captain, paced the field and won decisively over Jim Davis of Duke in the time of 20:00.3. This time knocks almost 23 seconds off the course record.

Stirling Kehoe of Maryland took an early lead but before the runners had passed the football practice field Miller and Alvin Smith of Carolina had moved up front. At the one-mile mark the Tar Heels had Smith, Miller, Burnham and Magill in the lead. At the 2 1/2-mile point it was Miller and Davis of Duke followed by a group of four Maryland men and four Carolina men.

Deadmen's Hill proved the falling point for the Ransons as Smith, Burnham, and Francis all fell back while the Maryland team moved right up on the heels of Miller and Davis. At the top of the hill and heading into the stretch Jack Milne moved up into the third spot on Davis's heels.

Dorm, Fraternity Teams Vie for Grid Titles Today

Chi Phi No. 1 Gains Yellow Loop Crown In First Day of Volleyball Competition

The campus all-star tag football game will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock on field No. 6 between all-star aggregations from the dormitory and fraternity leagues.

The players were named to the respective squads by the team managers and football officials. Lewis Dorm, the winner of the All-Campus crown, has four men on the dormitory team while DKE, the fraternity winners, placed three players on the fraternity club.

The Chi Phi No. 1 unit copped the fraternity yellow loop crown in volleyball yesterday in the first day of competition, tallying 13 points in roundrobin play. Sigma Nu No. 1, Phi Delta Theta No. 1, Sigma Chi No. 6, Phi Kappa Sigma No. 1, St. Anthony and Phi Gam No. 1 followed in that order.

Tomorrow evening the intramural department has planned a sports carnival starting with the badminton club meeting at 7 o'clock. At 7:45, wrestling runoffs for campus championships will be held. Boxing exhibitions by the varsity squad and challenge matches in table tennis will also take place.

Jayvees in Finale Thursday

Although their varsity brothers had a break from grid drills yesterday afternoon, the Carolina jayvees squad started a week of rugged practice for their last tilt of the season, a Thanksgiving clash with Coach Ralph James' Purple Panthers at High Point.

The junior Tar Heels sport a record thus far of three wins, a tie, and a loss. The High Point eleven have a string of five successive victories and were undefeated in competition outside the North State loop.

Scott Issues Call For Frosh Cagers

A call for candidates for the freshman basketball team was sent out by head cage mentor Tom Scott yesterday, and all men interested should report on the Tin Can floor this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Frank Murray, a physical education graduate student, has been named to pilot the yearlings and will take over the reins of head coach at the start of drills today.

Any freshmen may try out for the team, even if he was cut from the varsity squad earlier in the quarter. Coach Scott made it clear that the purpose of the team was to develop promising young players for further years.

The Tar Babies will open their season early next month when they meet the Bulldogs of Durham High School. A tentative schedule of seven or eight other games has been arranged and more are expected to be added.

Vols Meet Rice In Orange Bowl

Miami, Fla., Nov. 25—(UP)—It's going to be Rice against Tennessee in the New Year's Day Orange Bowl game in Miami, Fla.

Rice, coached by Jess Neely, has lost only to Louisiana State and Arkansas this season. The Owls close their regular schedule Saturday against Baylor. A win will give them a tie with Arkansas for the Southwestern conference championship.

Coaches Crowell Little and Tuck McConnell are depending on the offensive play of Max Spellman, Chunk Simmons, and Gus Purcell to pace the Tar Babies against the Panthers Thursday.

The High Point attack is led by big Glenn Painter, pile-driving full-back from Asheville, who is third highest in scoring in the North State conference. Painter tallied three touchdowns against Wofford in the Panthers' last game of the regular schedule.
