Men's Council Cases

The following report represents cases held before the Men's Council since our last report through the Daily Tar Heel. It is the policy of the Men's Council not to publish the names of the students called before it for violation of either the Honor code or the Campus code. However, it is the desire for all students to be familiar with the action taken on the violations of the Honor system. The genuine interest which you manifest in your Student Government and your ideas on these reports are most important. The Men's Council meets every Tuesday night at 7:30. You should feel free to call on the council concerning all aspects of student government and especially the interpretation of the Honor system.

These cases are indicative of the variety which come before the council and emphasize the importance of having a flexible system of student government which can give a real meaning and experience in personal and group honor and integrity.

Three students in the same class were reported by their instructor for a possible violation of the Honor code. The basis for the report was similarity of quiz papers. The three students appeared before the Men's council and a thorough investigation of all the aspects of the report, was made.

ACTION: The three students and the case were dismissed. The basis of this decision was that the council did not, in its investigation, believe that proof of violation was present.

A University student was apprehended by the Chapel Hill police for creating a public disturbance in the business district of the town. The disturbance involved very ungentlemanly conduct. The student was called before the council, and his obligation to the Campus code, his University, and his fellow students along the lines of personal conduct was explained to him.

ACTION: This student was placed on University probation indefinitely. During a football game held here during the fall quarter, a student attempted to inhibit a local policeman from performing his duty of stopping a disturbance caused by several other students. This student was called before the council and he stated that he had been drinking and that he did not fully realize what he was doing when he bothered the officer. The local court had fined him for the act.

ACTION: The student was placed on University probation indefinitely.

Two students were reported to the council for a possible violation of the Honor code. On being summoned before the Men's Council, one of the students admitted that he had received help from his neighbor in the quiz. However, the other student denied having given the aid. The facts of the case brought out that the papers showed the presence of cheating. There was direct testimony that both men were equally guilty.

ACTION: Both students were found guilty and were suspended for an indefinite period of time. One of the students appealed the case and the Student Council sustained the action of the Men's Council.

A student who had been suspended early in the fall quarter requested that he be allowed to reenter the University in January. The Men's Council did not feel that this former student had served a suspension of sufficient length in line with the violation which caused his suspension.

ACTION: This student was denied the right to reenter the University at this time.

During exam week of last quarter a student was reported for violating the Honor code. The student had taken a fellow student's lab report, changed the name to his own and had handed the report in as his own. This is a clear case of a student receiving credit for work which he has not performed. Although this case was reported during the middle of exam week, the council felt that this direct violation merited strong action.

ACTION: The student was given an F on the course and he was suspended indefinitely.

Two students who sit near each other were reported for a possible violation of the Honor code. The violation, as reported, occurred during their exam on a course which they took together. They admitted that they talked during the exam, and that they did talk about the exam. There was no apparent collusion between them in the answering of the question on the exam. They also stated that they did not use any help during the exam, although they did discuss the exam. Both students knew that their act represented a violation of the Honor code.

ACTION: Both students shall be given an F on the course and both shall be placed on University probation indefinitely.
