a Gamecock pass and racked back to the SC 25, Coach Carl Snavely still didn't have the steam worked up in his single winged boiler. Four plays later the Tar Heels ended up 13 yards further back than they had started.

Then suddenly the South Carolinians, who had lived up to the game part of their nickname, set out to prove they had their offensive power cocked to boot. The result was ten plays which covered 62 yards and the Tar Heels with a certain amount of apparent gloom. Two passes amassed the majority of the yardage. One John Boyle hit one Harry DeLoach for 20 yards and then returned some six times later for an encore.

The latter action drew the greatest of applause from the South Carolina stands and cries of more, more. As Boyle established aerial contact with end Roger Wilson who took the ball aboard on the Tar Heel 20, survived knocks on the 18, and set off on a pleasure cruise of the North Carolina goal line.

Gamecock Bill Killoy and Tar Heel Egbert Williams having exchanged successful extra point barrages, the game stood tied at 7-7 and before long the two teams left the field for the half time intermission.

Upon their return the Tar Heels seemed to have developed a greater interest in the whole proceedings. After dallying around a bit longer just to keep their hand in at such a practice, the visitors finally got the air service running back on schedule and ended up with a touchdown for their efforts.

Mr. Justice, running, passing and kicking fame, tried the middle method, a beautiful 30 yard endeavor which sailed up to and into the arms of Weiner. That put the ball on the South Carolina 23 and from there, The Tar Heels walked on home, Hayes ravishing his way to the 14 on the first of four runnings plays, and Sherman, going the last 12 on another reverse, like a man suffering from the blind staggers. The Gamecocks hit him, but not that hard. It went down on the records as a nice piece of running and on the scoreboard as six more points. Williams made it seven.

There minutes later the Tar Heels were back at it. It was nothing but another chartered flight of the Justice-to-Weiner combination which covered 55 yards and left the ball just three yards short of the end zone. Weiner was half tripped by Steve Wadiak on about the 10 and tripped again over the five yard line. That cost him a touchdown, but Billy Hayes cashed the chips in two plays later, bucking over Tar Heels, Gamecocks and the goal line for the third score for North Carolina.

Trailing many points, the Gamecocks took to the air in attempts to return to a sociable point on the scoreboard, but the game all but petered out to a finish. The Tar Heels got another score near the end when Skeeter Hesmer grabbed a tipped Gamecock pass and skipped back to South Carolina 22. Justice and Dick Weiss ran it over from there, with Weiss going the last eight yards up the middle, carrying two free riders to boot. Williams made it four for four.

A 70-yard pass play gave South Carolina their last six points and left the home team with something of a sweet taste in their mouth. Boyle threw it, Jim Pinkerton took it in all alone on the Tar Heel 45 and headed off in the direction of the downtown shopping district. That finished the afternoon.

Kenny Powell seemed to be the only major Tar Heel injury of the day, and locker room reports following the game lead most to believe he would be ready for Wake Forest next week.

Georgetown Clips Wake Forest, 12-6; Last Minute TD

WAKE FOREST, Oct. 8—A fighting Georgetown team scored in the last 65 seconds of play on a pass from Billy Conn to Bill Resch to hand Wake Forest its third straight loss, 12-6, here today in Grove Stadium.

The curly headed Conn took the ball on the six and ran to his right where he stopped and pitched to Resch in the end zone. Tommy Hardiman set up the touchdown by intercepting an Ed Kissell pass on the 43 and returning it to the 24. Wake Forest was penalized from there to the 9 for unnecessary roughing and Dick Barba carried to the six, where Conn passed for the winning td.

The Hoya's, three touchdown sloppy Wake Forest play and underdogs, took advantage of the turned a fumble on the first play of the game into their other touchdown. Tackle Bob Fortunati scored by falling on teammate Barba's fumble in the end zone.

Wake Forest put across its on a pass from Ed Kissell to Jim only tally shortly before the half Duncan. The touchdown climaxed a short drive from the Georgetown 25 after a poor punt by Lou Surman.

Although the Deacons outgained Georgetown throughout the game fumbles and the inability of the Wake Forest passers kept them from winning.

Raschi To Go
Stengel announced he would pitch Vic Raschi tomorrow. Raschi, who lost to Roe 1-0 in the second game of the series, had a 21-10 record during regular season play. He is a righthander.

Newcombe, who was pitching with only two days' rest after his brilliant but losing effort on Wednesday, didn't have what it took to halt the Yanks today. The first two men to face him hit safely, and he sweated through a bad 20 minutes before he retired the side.

The walls fell in on him in the fourth when Bobby Brown, the day's slugging hero, pounded a drew a walk on four pitches and Cliff Mapes delivered his first hit of the Series, a bruising double into the left field corner which counted both Yanks.

By the time Gene got the pellet back in play, three Yankee runners were across and Brown was sitting triumphantly on third.
