

Old Mags Are Free; Harry Needs Copy

The sheaf of back issues of the Carolina Magazine which puzzled students were glancing over in Graham Memorial's lobby is nothing more than a backlog of old Mags which were accumulating dust in the old Mag office, Carolina Quarterly Editor Harry Snowden explained yesterday.

"They're free to anyone who might want them," Snowden said of the dethroned magazines which date from 1935 up to abolished by a student referendum.

"Perhaps reading some of the material in the Mags written by University students will inspire some to sit down and do a little writing of their own for their only University literary magazine, the Quarterly," he said.

It appears that the magazine, which is entirely self-supporting, and which aims for contributions from the students to fill 50 per cent of the publication, has not been receiving enough manuscripts from the University students.

"The amount of material written by students is negligible," Snowden claims, and goes on to charge that "the writings from a campus, which is recognized as a writers' colony and which has produced such writers as Thomas Wolfe, are not up to snuff."

"We need stories, by students, about 3,000 words long, which can pass on their own merits, and not only because they are student-written," he said.

The deadline for the winter issue, which is scheduled to appear March 1, is Jan. 15. Manuscripts may be bought personally or mailed to the Carolina Quarterly offices in Graham Memorial.

Manuscripts will also be accepted for the Spring issue, slated for publication about May 1. The deadline for the Spring issue is March 10, Snowden said.

Raleigh Cops Asked To Keep Out Of Klan

RALEIGH, Jan. 4—(AP)—A copy of Raleigh's new anti-mask ordinance—admittedly aimed at the Ku Klux Klan—was posted on the Police Department bulletin board today.

Under the ordinance, which was adopted late yesterday by GREENSBORO, Jan. 4—(AP)—Two Ku Klux Klansmen moved into Greensboro in secret today and "made quite a few contacts with some interested people," one of the organizers said tonight.

Tommy Panther, Gastonia garage man, told the Greensboro Daily News that he and Jack Dempsey of Atlanta, the Klans' "imperial representatives" for the Carolinas and Virginia, were "pleased" with their organizing work here today.

The City Council, was a letter by Police Chief R. R. Hargrove. It read:

"Dear fellow officers: Far be it from me to tell my fellow officers what organizations they may or may not join, but I do want to advise you not to join the above organization. I do not feel it is needed in the city, and I think it will cause us trouble in the performance of our duties." Signed R. R. Hargrove.

Several days ago a self-identified Klan organizer, Tommy Panther of Gastonia, said he planned to come to Raleigh soon to try to form a Klan unit.

The idea for the indoctrination of this established university course into the Air ROTC program originated with Col. Byron R. Switzer last May while he was Professor of Air Science and Tactics here.

Upon Col. Switzer's transfer to Duke University, Col. Moorehead and Capt. Sanford revised his original plan to broaden its scope. The revised plan was approved by Air Force headquarters and officials of North Carolina in October.

"I'll finish it just about in time to use during warm weather weekends," he said. Because the mast, which is the only part of the boat he didn't build, is separate from the rest of the boat, he will be able to move it out of Graham Memorial with a minimum of difficulty.

As to the seaworthiness of the boat, shop manager Koral said that since it is made of wood, it will have to float.

Besides Clewis, approximately 20 people have already made use of the shop. Koral says that girls are also invited to use it.

The varsity wrestling team did not fare as well as the other winter teams, winning three, losing four, and tying one match. The grapplers were fourth in the Conference tourney. However, Tar Heel Phil Kemp, 155-lb. champion, was named the tournament's outstanding wrestler, while Oscar Gupton won the 165-lb. Conference title.

Then came spring, and baseball, golf, track, tennis, and other sports that kept Tar Heel fans and Daily Tar Heel sports writers constantly on the run.

Coaches Walter Raab and Bunn Hearn turned out a baseball team that won 19 contests, lost nine, and tied two. The diamonds had a 5-8 record that earned them a second-place tie in the Big Four, while ranking fifth in the Conference on the strength of a 12-8 showing. Second baseman Stan Goodman and catcher Sid Varney made the All-Conference nine, and Varney was chosen second string All America.

Carolina's outdoor track team, coached by Dale Ranson, went undefeated, winning all five of its dual meets, plus the Carolina Relays. The shuttle hurdle relay team set a new record in the Penn Relays, and Bob Kirk won the javelin toss in that meet. Then, in the Southern Conference Championships, the Tar Heels scored 75 points to cop the crown without much trouble. Later in the summer, weight man Bob Seligman showed up well in the National AAU's in Cal.

(Continued from page 3.) to the 13, instead of moving to the 50 where he could have taken it if he had snagged it on the 35. So once again the Tar Heels missed the chance to get into a position where they could pose an offensive threat, and the ball was punted back on third down.

In the third quarter, the Carolinians began moving toward paydirt again, beginning with a beautiful Justice kickoff return from the 15 up to the 32. On the next play the Choo made a first down on the 42. A Hayes to Powell pass and a Hayes slam through the line put the ball on the Rice 36-yard line.

Hayes then passed to Bob "Goo Goo" Gantt, but the play misfired and on the next snap from center Gantt fumbled and lost the ball three yards behind him as Rice tackle Billy Wyman pounced on it. The fumble may have cost a touchdown.

The Tar Heels had what it took. They could have won the Cotton Bowl game. But, as the Rice supporters would be quick to point out, they didn't.
