Sound And Fury '50 Grand' Opens Tonight In Memorial

Curtain Time Is Scheduled At 8 O'Clock

Musical Comedy To Be Presented For Three Nights

When the curtain rings down on the last act of "50 Grand" tonight, parents will no longer be able to make fun of present day college customs.

For tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall Sound and Fury will turn back the pages of time and give students an inside view on the way their parents laughed, loved and lived when they were in college.

The love will be taken care of by Bill Rogers and Wilma Jones, who will play the part of the romantic couple. Jane Milligan and Jim Mills will handle the laughs, and anyone who knows Mills knows that laughs is a mild word, if he has anything to do with it.

The show, which has five acts, will give a running account of college life during the last 50 years. The four leads will be in each act, but will remain at the college age no matter what period the act concerns. Each act will be about a different ten-year period.

In addition to the chorus singing, dancing and acting there will be several specialty numbers by people who are well-known entertainers not only on the campus but throughout the state.

Mary Jo McLean, graduate entertainment director of Graham Memorial, and popular dancer, will do a specialty dance number. Those who like her may want to join her tap dancing classes which she conducts in the Rendezvous Room four afternoons a week.

Barber shop quartet singing will be done by the Harmoners, winners of the Horace Heidt Talent Show in Raleigh last Thanksgiving. Composed of Lanier Davis, Dick Smith, Jack Clinard and Milton Bliss, the quartet has given performances all over the state.

Also contributing to the singing will be Jack Prince, who will warble a few old-time ballads.

The show was written by the Sound and Fury scriptwriting team.

Tickets will be on sale at the door tonight and in the Y tomorrow. All members of the cast will also sell tickets.

"50 Grand" is as close to the pre-war shows that Sound and Fury used to give as any we have given in the last few years," publicity Chairman Vestel Taylor said.

MIKE CASEY (left), graduate assistant in the University's Dept. of Dramatic Art and writer of the new full length play, "Angels Full Front," is shown going over the script with Harry Davis, associate director of the Playmakers. The play will be given its premiere in the Playmakers Theatre Tuesday night at 8:30. Davis is directing the production.

Premier Approaching; Author Casey Is Jittery

By Mark Sumner

The Fates are converging on Francis M. Casey, author of a new play, "Angels Full Front," fourth major production of the Carolina Playmakers this season and their 41st touring show.

Playwright Casey will be a bit jittery the next few days, and little wonder. A great deal will be at stake when his first full length play is given the premiere of six-night try-out run in the Playmaker Theatre Tuesday night at 8:30.

Waiting for an opening night verdict is not an entirely new experience for Casey, a graduate assistant here at the University and former drama instructor at Williams College, although it is the first time he is the responsible author.

"The first time I went through this," he explains, "was with the premiere of Peggy Lamson's

Elis Give Interesting Answers To Poll On Yale Problems, Scholarships, Sex

Special to The Daily Tar Heel. NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 23—Virgins and other forms of sex provoked some interesting answers on a request questionnaire answered by Yale men.

In a survey conducted by the yearbook, The Banner, more than 1,200 Elis put down answers to questions ranging from athletic scholarships to Dr. Kinsey, Jr.

Only four of the 33 queries pertained to sex, but they wrought the most interesting answers.

Forty-nine per cent of the Connecticut boys replied yes to the question of whether they had had sexual intercourse. The other

Planning Head Tours Canada, Makes Report

Steady Program Of City Planning Is Needed—Parker

A continuous urban and regional planning program "with professional help supplied on a permanent basis will provide the only sure means of achieving results from the planning process," John A. Parker, head of the Department of City and Regional Planning, reported yesterday after an extensive survey of Canada's planning program.

Parker made the report before the annual meeting of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada at Winnipeg.

He made a study of Canada's planning agencies and universities in Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, London, Winnipeg, Regina and Vancouver. The study was made at the request of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation of Ottawa.

Canada's largest cities, Parker told the Canadian architects, "are placing responsibility for planning with permanent planning staffs rather than with consultants."

Planning in medium-sized cities is supervised by consultants and with a few notable exceptions is largely of the "blue-print" variety. Several provinces support provincial town planning agencies which provide technical assistance to small communities.

"Due to inadequate appropriations," he explained, "these agencies are able to do very little in the way of providing assistance in the development of comprehensive plans."

"Planning activity in the small community would be facilitated by inservice training courses in municipal administration for local officials."

Parker said that "experience in the United States indicate that the package plan is a questionable investment for the community. A continuous planning program with professional help supplied on a permanent basis provides the only sure means of achieving results from the planning process."

Dr. Tyree Will Give Liquid Air Show

Dr. S. Y. Tyree, chemistry professor, will give a Liquid Air show Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the main lecture hall of Venable.

The show is being sponsored by the Physics Club and Physics Department. The Public is invited.

Connor Dies; Funeral Set 3:30 Today

Hemorrhage Fatal To Noted Writer, Former Professor

Dr. Robert Digges Wimberly Connor, distinguished University historian and former United States Archivist, died in Durham's Watts Hospital at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. He was 71 years old last Sept. 26.

Dr. Connor was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage at his home here Tuesday night.

Funeral services will be held in the Episcopal Church at 3:30 this afternoon with the Rev. David Yates officiating. Burial will be in Chapel Hill cemetery. Active pallbearers will be Dr. E. McG. Hedgepeth, Dr. W. Reece Berryhill, Dr. W. G. Morgan, Dr. W. B. Abernethy, Dr. James L. Godfrey, Dr. Hugh Lefler, Grady Pritchard, and A. G. Rogers.

Connor, former head of the United States Archives and the University History Department, joined the University faculty in 1921 as a Kenan professor of history and government. He graduated from the University with a Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1899, and did graduate work at Columbia.

He was noted as a historian and was organizer of the North Carolina Historical Commission, and was author of "North Carolina—Rebuilding An Ancient Commonwealth," considered by historians as one of the finest histories of the state.

He was appointed United States Archivist by President Roosevelt in 1934, returned to the Craig chair professorship in 1941. He received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from the University in 1936.

He organized the State Historical Commission while serving as secretary of the Educational Campaign Committee of the state state Department of Education from 1904 until 1907. In 1912 he was president of the state Literary and Historical Association.

Before joining the University faculty, Dr. Connor served on the Board of Trustees from 1913 until 1920. He was president of the General Alumni Association for three years.

Connor was born in Wilson in 1878, son of Judge Henry Groves and Kate Whitfield Connor. He married the former Sadie Hanes of Winston-Salem while teaching high school in Winston-Salem from 1899 until 1902.

While at the University, Connor was editor of the Daily Tar Heel, yearbook and of the Carolina Magazine. He was a Phi member and SAE of fraternity.

Sigh Of Relief

Cavalier Owes Library $190 For Tardy Books

Special to The Daily Tar Heel. CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 25—College overdue book fines are a far cry from the one cent per day charged in small libraries, but Delta Kappa Epsilon John Grant of Chattanooga thought the millenium had arrived when a card from the University of Virginia Library informed him he owed $190 in back fines.

The librarian told him he was being charged $5 per day for a total of three books which he checked out during last semester's final examinations.

Grant found out his mistake. The books he withdrew from the library were of a special reserve list in the reference room, and the stiff fines always accompanied them on their overdue trips from the buildings.

Actually, Grant only owed $100 in fines when he first received notice that the books were overdue. The sum hit $190 by the time he got down to the library to find out what was going on.

There was an escape hatch for the unhappy Cavalier, however. A standing library rule specifies that the maximum fine that can be charged to any one person at one time is $25.

Wiping the sweat off his brow, John Grant hauled out his checkbook and fountain pen with a sigh of relief.

Pix Contest Ends March 3

All entries in the Graham Memorial Salon must be turned in by Friday, March 3, Dick Swartz, manager of the Graham Memorial darkroom, said yesterday.

The pictures may be either 8 inches by 10 inches or 11 inches by 14 inches and must be mounted on 16 inch by 20 inch photography board. A small border should be placed around the photograph after it is mounted.

The formal opening of the salon will be March 4 at 4 o'clock. From 4 to 5 o'clock Graham Memorial will give a reception during which the winners of the contest will be announced.

The winning pictures as well as those which receive honorable mention will be featured in the Georgia Tech Salon.

In Philippine Monsoon

Arthur Loesser Plays Through Roaches, Bats

In his many years of touring throughout the United States, Europe, and the Orient as a distinguished concert pianist, Arthur Loesser has had at least one experience which should condition him, the Student Entertainment Committee thinks, to face an unpredictable student audience here at the university next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall.

Loesser, it seems, once played right through a monsoon on the Philippine Islands. That novel recital when Loesser assisted violinist Mischa Elman many years ago in Manila always gets the pianist's nod unhesitatingly as the worst concert in which he ever participated.

No Students Yet In Race, Says Prince

Party To Select Seven For Court, Four For Board

The Student Party will nominate its choice for secretary-treasurer of the student body tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Graham Memorial, Chairman Bill Prince said yesterday.

So far no candidates for the SP endorsement have appeared, Prince said. Other nominations to be filled at tomorrow night's meeting are seven Student Council posts, four Publications Board seats, and all Student Legislature positions that have not already been filled.

Prince said that the meeting has been moved up one hour (from 9 to 8 o'clock) in order to give the SP members ample time to complete the agenda.

Prince called a meeting of the Steering Committee for 7 o'clock tonight to prepare business procedure for future meetings. He said that a special meeting will probably be called for Tuesday night.

John Harris, chairman of the Policy Committee, said his committee will meet in the Student Government Offices at 4 o'clock Thursday.

Dukes Slate GM Concert For Tonight

Hillbilly music will echo from Graham Memorial tonight when Jeeny and Jimmy Duke and Wanda Saylor present a concert in the main lounge at 8:30.

Billed as "The Dukes of Carolina" the trio will present many of the numbers that they have made popular at such places on campus as the Vet's Club and at private parties.

Although Jeeny and Jimmy have already entertained frequently on the campus, this is Wanda's first program here. Before Jeeny was married, the two sisters often performed together. Lately, however, they have been unable to combine their talents.

Wanda is now a featured entertainer over radio station WTK in Durham, and Jeeny form a musical team with her husband.

Tonight Jimmy will be featured on the bass, Jeeny will play the guitar and Wanda will play the accordion. The program will contain popular music as well as hillbilly selections.

Parker Services

Special to The Daily Tar Heel. FARMVILLE, Feb. 25—Tentative funeral services were set today for Roland B. (Pete) Parker, 49, former Dean of Men at the University of North Carolina, who died in an El Paso, Tex., hotel Wednesday of a heart attack.

Funeral is scheduled to be held in the Farmville Presbyterian Church at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. The body is now on the way from El Paso.

Parker, a Farmville native, was connected with the Educational Division of the War Department, working out of Fort Bliss, Tex.

House Visits

Chancellor Robert B. House and Extension Division Director Russell McGurman were among representatives of the University attending the inauguration of Dr. Dennis H. Cooke as president of High Point College.

Dr. Gordon Ellis, professor of education in the University represented Iowa State Teachers College at the inaugural.

Dr. Ellis is a former student at Teachers College who returned to serve as dean of men there. He received both his master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Wisconsin.
