At Long Last - UMT

The universal military training proposal that Congress is expected to take under its wing within the next few weeks is one that should be welcomed by service-jittery collegians. Although it is coming at a date which makes its passage more or, less an academic act, the proposed legislation will help clear up much of the fog that has beclouded the nation's draftable youth-and that means most of us.

With a long-term period of semi-total mobilization forseeable, a planned program of procurement is a must and such a program is certainly not in existence at the present time. The muddled uncertainty of today's draftable youth makes that fact plain.

The UMT legislation is embodied in what is a near-perfect program of planned military procurement, according to the experts of both Pentagon and Congress. Such a program, we hope, will be the answer to the badly befuddled situation of today. The leaders of the military might of the country owe such a program to those who are ready to serve in defense of freedom and right, but who have, up to now, had to brave a near-intolerable situation of uncertainty and vagueness.

Damnable Political Strategy

Republican Senator Robert Taft's major foreign policy speech in Congress yesterday is an indication of a type of thinking that is dangerous and disappointing, especially when ly fall, the rumors sprang up spoken and espoused by a man whose position makes him one of this nation's leaders.

The tricky technicality is ever with us, especially in the courts of law, but it seems a shame that the government of the United States must spend a few more hundreds of thousands to drearily retrace the trial of Judy Coplon, the duly convicted spy. Especially since the Court of Appeals admits that her "guilt is plain," even while granting her the new hearing. It has been a year and a half since little Judy was grabbed by the FBI as an accomplice of Valentin Gubitchev, the Russian spy who has since been deported. Coplon got tried in Washington, was found guilty, and was handed a 40 months-to-10 years sentence. She was retried here last March, and drew 15 years. She has been out on bail, and since has found romance, and freedom. She married one of her lawyers, and her wedding was described as gushingly as the nuptials of a vestal movie star. I will bet you a buck that Judy never does a day of serious time for treasonous espionage against her country, a thought that is reasonably displeasing in light of our current mess in the East. In a way the woman is an implied accomplice in the murder of young Americans by a Soviet-steered foreign power. Those who betray their homeland implicitly recommend its downthrow by violence. In mother Russia, where her former boy friend is probably dead by now for fumbling, Miss Coplon would have been summarily shot, after torture, for a fifth of her local sin. We nab her with the goods and she gets what? Two trials, with another upcoming, and a fine chance to beat it on technicalities, if public apathy in the face of more serious problems does not allow it to be shelved until forgotten. What, for instance, ever became of Serge Rubinstein's big tax-fraud trial?

The finest of hairsplitting has been used in the decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals, which says that Coplon's arrest without warrant was have the power to arrest without warrant, if the President Joseph Gorman.

CPU Roundtable by Robert Pace

"How to prevent World War III" will be the topic for discussion at the Carolina Political Union meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial. Visitors are welcome to participate in the meeting.

Some people say that we are already in World War III; others insist that there is no war, only police action in Korea.

Students questioned on "How to prevent World War III" gave various opinions. Edwin Clark, 306 Manley, said, "To me Universal Christianity presents the only solution."

Richard Charnock, 39 Old East: "Accelerate our propaganda machine; and procure experts on the peoples of the countries with which we are dealing, and by pooling their knowledge make our policies toward those countries."

Charles Nye, 106 Grimes: "I consider the war already started, and the most effective way to end it would be an all-out offensive against Communist countries through our Air Force and Navy, I consider ground warfare useless because of the manpower advantage of the Communist nations. A complete destruction of their manufacturing centers and port facilities would equalize andor immobilize their now preponderous manpower advantage. Of course I advocate the use of the atomic bomb.'

Kent Jackson, 104 Ruffin: "People who know the facts seem to agree that only Uncle Joe can stop it now. As for us, we had better draw in our necks, stop believing ourselves the sole saviors of the world, and stop beating our brains out against Stalin's non-Russian converts who are supplied by a source which remains invulnerable to our air power so long as we continue our police role. Above all we must beat democracy's drum with the ring and rhythm that Patrick Henry and those boys used."

Curtis Collier, 113 Mangum: "For the UN to resolve not to interfere with eastern countries while they are fighting because after so long their men supplies will give out, they will be weak, and then if necessary, the United States may take over."

The Guest Box

(This is one of several articles about the Communist-dominated Second World Student Congress which was held in Prague last summer. The author, Bill Holbrook, was a member of the three-man observer team representing the U.S. National Students Association at that meeting .- Ed.)

From the beginning of the Second World Student Congress it became apparent that the meeting would be dominated by the thinking of the Soviet world. The first real example of this came illegal. The court points out that the FBI does during the reading of the executive committee report by Congress

America's duty should be well-evident to everyone, and that duty is not only to ourselves, but to everyone in the world who desires freedom. It is a duty to defend truth and right and defy tyranny and injustice-whether it exists within our own borders or in any part of the world. Taft, and former President Hoover in his recent foreign policy address, have both called for a strategy that can only hamper the performance and outcome of our duty as a nation and a people.

Both men have called for a "falling back" of U.S. might to a defense line that is roughly parallel with our own political borders. The political hypocrisy and purely military unsoundness of such a proposal should be evident to all of us.

Certainly no one with a rudimentary knowledge of the abilities of today's military weapons can believe that this country can depend on itself alone to stand off an enemy in control of the rest of the world. For men of such stature and position as Taft and Hoover to ask America to do such a thing is an indication that they have somewhere along the line lost a portion of their good sense, or have decided to play internal politics in a game which involves the people of the entire world. Such seems to be the case.

Fighting And Voting

Governor Kerr Scott's espousel of the 18-year-old vote in his recent speech before the North Carolina General Assembly is another in a long line of calls for the giving of the franchise to the younger generation. Possibly the calls may be heeded in the near future.

And we hope so. There is nothing more valid that can Snavely ,the master of the single be said in favor of the proposal than the oft-quoted cliche, "if we're old enough to fight, we are old enough to vote." It looks like we are going to be allowed to fight. Certainly we should be allowed to vote. The Daily Tar Heel joins in the ever-increasing call for the extension of the ballot to those between 18 and 21 years of age. It is our hope and sincere wish that the General Assembly takes heed of the call and takes the step so long asked and deserved.

Bleeding Bricklayers

We have only a few remarks on the strike of AF of L bricklayers that has fogbound the University construction program. According to our reports, the boys want $2.75 an hour instead of their present rate of $2.50 an hour.

Now it is true that living costs are up, and it is true that bricklaying is not the easiest of professions, requiring some skill and know-how. We are the first to stand for a man's right to just compensation for his labors. Maybe the trowel- dent who held the most unusual men deserve their raise.

All we want to know is-where is the nearest bricklayer recruiting office? Secondly, is there anyone who swants to buy an old, slightly battered editorialist's typewriter? There appears to be gold in them there hardened mudpiles.

tered with another "no." I imagine the hardest decision Charlie Justice ever made in his life was the decision to sign a contract with the Washington Redskins. It was hard to make because he had said so many times that he felt he was too old to play any more ball, and he felt he was repaying a debt to the state which had been so good to him by working with the Medical Foundation. But a man has a lot to think about when he's offered a job that would net him some $50,000 to $60,000 in three years. That's the salary Charlie was supposed to be getting with the Redskins, although the exact figure was never officially announced.

Charlie wasn't being wishy washy when he persisted in saying "no" and then about-faced and turned pro in the fall. He was thinking about his wife, Sarah, and boy, Ronnie, and how much that money would mean toward Ronnie's education and Sarah's comfort in future years. But once again, Charlie has pulled a switch. And again for the same reason

He's always wanted to be a coach. And now he has been offered an opportunity to begin a coaching career under Carl wing and one of the best gridiron mentors in the country. Charlie decided to begin his career of coaching. More power to him

Charlie wants to be a coach.

It's still up to the Athletic Council whether or not he is to be hired. And then approval must be given by the Faculty Committee on Athletics, Chancellor House, and the Board of Trustees. But there shouldn't be any complications there.

That's the story of why Charlie Justice is about to switch jobs again. And he still ranks number one in my book.

Our nomination for the stujob during the Christmas holidays:

subject is likely to escape, but says that Coplon didn't appear to be on the verge of flight. As a result of this, the purloined documents, in her handbag are not admissible as evidence.

The court also holds that FBI wire taps, forbidden by Federal law, were possibly instrumental in indicating La Belle's guilt. At least, the last court that tried Miss Coplon failed to prove that the wire tap did not 'lead' to any part of the evidence on which this saddle-shoed Mata Hari was convicted. This is a cute quibblerabout like saying that a machine-gun killer is reasonably innocent because he did not personally invent gunpowder.

"The conviction must be reversed," the Court of Appeals says, "but we will not dismiss the indictment, for the guilt is plain . . ."

No legal eagle, I, it is tough to see how the country can lick Miss Coplon with this history, since the basic evidence is founded on an "illegal" arrest, thereby nullifying the worth of the documents she had tucked away between the lipstick and the mad money.

So long as the accusing finger of wire tap, for additional evidence, is pointed at this fair flower of democracy, she owns a beautiful out-much as if she had thrown the gun in the river and shipped the corpus delicti to a maiden aunt in Tibet.

So the bet is Judy beats it, despite the guilt, despite the sinister intent on collusion with an avowedly enemy power. This is America, the home of the more-than-even-break, and I still think they oughta shot her.

The first reference of the war in Korea set off a huj stration. At the mention of the North Koreans, the Congress delegates-most of whom considered the United States and South Korea as aggressors-broke out into clapping and rushed to the members of the Korean delegation, lifted them on their shoulders and handed them bouquets of roses.

At that point the entire North Korean delegation, armed with roses, was carried on the shoulders of students through the convention hall amidst chanting and the play of floodlights.

As the Koreans-some of whom were in uniform-passed the desk where Robert West of the NSA observer delegation was sitting, they shouted slogans of defiance at him.

It was only after more than 20 minutes of demonstration that the delegates returned to their seats and Gorman was able to go on with his report.

Perhaps this would be a good place to explain who attended the meeting. The International Union of Students stated in its official report that a total of 1,036 delegates, observers and visitors were accredited. These represented 135 student organizations from 78 nations

The official American delegation was composed of people picked by the Committee for International Student Cooperation (CISC). They were granted 12 voting delegate positions and should be distinguished from the NSA observer delegation. The CISC was founded by a small group of IUS proponents after the suspension of IUS-NSA negotiations.

This organization has acted as the distribution center for IUS literature and has served as the nucleus of the "American Sponsoring Committee for the Second World Student Congress." From the speeches made by the official American delegation, the NSA group would observe that the delegation was composed of Sovietline students.

Similar left-wing organizations were also present from Great Britain, Canada and the Union of South Africa.

Need For Security by Paul Barwick

It is not too difficult for us to see that there is a great need for some means of security throughout the world today. But, the big question is, "Where does this security lie and how may we as citizens of the world and America find it?" Usually, there is an answer to every question, and there's one to this one. Actually, the solution to the problem is so close to us that we have overlooked it in all the existing confusion. The answer: A belief and faith in God.

However, religion is not a popular thing today. The majority, it seems, agrees it's all right for Sunday, but when Sunday is over, we don't care to mention it. Why? It's unpopular and doesn't fit into today's society and business. If in the course of a conversation, one mentions anything about "religion," someone, or the group as a whole, takes it upon himself to dismiss the subject from the conversation. The attitude of "Religion is a secondary problem today-if we have a minute to spare, we'll consider giving God a portion of our 'spare time'" seems to dominate our thinking.

As each day passes, we seem to get farther away from the essentials of life and happiness. Even in dealing with everyday problems we have to have a sense of security before we can accomplish anything. The same thing is true in giving our minds a feeling of security. We can have this security by building up a strong faith in God and realizing that He is the Omnipotent. "Faith." Just what is "faith"? "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." There are several things world today which we accept as having e and existing, but they haven't been prov fact yet. Our "faith" is so strong in man th will believe almost everything he tells us is exactly the same principle, so why car accept it and put our faith in God?

We can build our faith in God through er. But, do we know how to pray? Some have never prayed, because we didn't thin we needed any help from a higher power man. A person doesn't have to get down his knees to pray, but he must call on God the depths of his heart. Whether we are w down the street, sitting in our chair, or knees, to pray and be heard by God, we pray in sincerity.

We must realize that we are rapidly : into a low state of mind that is causing This fear is being brought about through of security, and we can find that securi putting our faith in God. We must have a plete faith in God. Not a faith that sui convenience.

Let's start carrying God with us day h Let's not be ashamed to mention religion friends and not be ashamed to pray. So will be out of college and directing the of America. If we start building our faith while we are learning and young, we w better fitted to direct America, for we will with us a fear of God which will not sink. Remember! "The fear of the Lord instruction of wisdom."
