Only 50% Of Fraternities Fully Support Greek Week

By Rolfe Neill

Only about 50 percent of Carolina's fraternities fully participated in the second annual Greek Week which ended last night, and one, probably two, refused to join in at all.

In a survey made yesterday afternoon, The Daily Tar Heel learned that the reaction of one president was typical for most of the 23 houses contacted. He said, "Our brothers voted to join in only because the Interfraternity Council passed it. They didn't think it was too hot, but what could we do?"

One house flatly said it was not participating because it didn't "feel like all the fraternities were joining in."

Another house implied it was not joining in. It refused to give information over the telephone. "We're sorry," a spokesman said, "but you'll have to come by the house if you want to find out."

Most fraternities continued to hold the traditional Hell Week even if they did join in Greek Week which was designed by the IFC to do away with the old forms of informal initiation practices.

A pledgemaster in Fraternity Court said his group was following the schedule. "However," he declared, "I think, and the other boys feel, that Greek Week needed more publicity."

Two presidents pointed out the "almost inevitable" conflict in fraternity activities and those set up for Greek Week. "When this occurs, we're following our own plans," added one.

Tuesday's Greek Week project of cleaning Battle Park was sharply scored by a pledgemaster in Little Fraternity Court. "Our pledges turned out to the man. So what the hell. Only about 100 were there in all according to

UP Finishes Greater Part Of Selecting

The University Party has completed all nominations except Legislature seats by choosing candidates for the Publications Board, Student Council, head cheerleader, president of the sophomore class, and Carolina Athletic Association.

Sue Lindsey and Frank Allston were chosen as the nominees for the senior class seats on the Publications Board. Sue is also a doubly-endorsed candidate for editor of the Yackety Yack, while Allston is running for editorship of The Daily Tar Heel.

Aspirants for the junior and at-large seats on the Publications Board are Frank Daniels and Charlie Brewer.

Cyril Minett was co-endorsed as head cheerleader by the UP. He had previously been chosen by the SP.

Jake Froelich and Lew Brown received the party's nomination for the Student Council. Froelich is a candidate for the at-large seat, while Brown is running for one of the men's seats.

Andy Sheveta and Skeet Hester are party nominees for the presidency and vice-presidency respectively of the Carolina Athletic Association.

Eddie Gross was chosen by acclamation to run for the presidency of the sophomore class. He is a member of Delta Psi fraternity.

Nominees for Legislature seats will be completed by the first of next week, according to Chairman Dick Jenrette.

Publicity chairman Frank Daniels announced that there would be a meeting Tuesday night at Beta House to discuss campaign strategy. All UP nominees are asked to be present.

Valkyrie Deadline Extended To Friday

The deadline has been extended to next Friday for campus organizations to enter the annual Valkyrie sing to be held along with the Golden Fleece tapping April 30, Sing Chairman Judy Sanford said yesterday.

Emphasis this year will be placed on beauty, inspiration, and originality in staging. The entrants will be judged on a system which allows 65 percent for music including arrangement, balance, blend, performance, relativity to theme, and musician-ship; 20 percent for originality; 10 percent for staging; and five percent for costumes and props.

Four cups will be awarded, one to the winner in each division: men's dorm, fraternity, women's dorm, and sorority.

The Valkyries will have a lighting technician to help each organization with its staging. There must be a maximum of eight persons in each group, each person an active member of the organization represented. Pantomime will be allowed but no dances or dialogue. Performances may not exceed nine minutes and accompaniment is permissible.

A maximum of $5 may be spent on props and costumes, and only hand props may be used. Any lighting effect is permissible. There is an entrance fee of $3.

Maud Russell To Talk Here

Miss Maud Russell, executive secretary of the Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy, will speak at the Presbyterian Church tonight, at 8:30.

Miss Russell, a graduate of Barnard College and Columbia University in New York, spent 27 years in China as American industrial secretary of the YWCA. She returned from China during World War II.

The appearance of Miss Russell is sponsored by the Chapel Hill chapter of the Women's International League of Peace and Freedom. There will be a question period after the speech. The public is cordially invited to attend.

State's Plays Slate Tryouts

Tryouts for North Carolina's two great outdoor dramas will be held tomorrow morning from 9:30 to 1 o'clock in Memorial Hall.

Directors Sam Selden of "The Lost Colony" and Harry Davis of "Unto These Hills" will be seeking actors and dancers for the plays from candidates from all over the state.

to cover cost of lighting. In addition all song chairmen must check with Judy Sanford before April 15 to schedule a time for rehearsal with lights. All names of songs and approximate cost must be turned in along with the theme and name and address of the musical director before Friday.

'Romeo' Play Goes On Tour For 12 Days

The Carolina Playmakers' touring production of "Romeo and Juliet," directed by Samuel Selden and displayed here last December, will leave the Playmaker Theater early Monday morning by special bus for a 12-day Southern trip.

Harry Davis, assistant director of the group, will be the road manager, and there are seven bookings to date. They open April 2 at Chester, S. C., then on to Columbus, Ga., Montgomery, Ala., Hattiesburg and Jackson, Miss., Huntsville, Ala., concluding the tour with two performances on April 13 and 14 at Johnson City, Tenn.

This is the 43rd touring show in Playmaker history, and has proved to be one of the most successful. The 42nd tour, last February, took out the same Shakespearean drama to 12 cities of North Carolina, and played to packed houses. Critics throughout the state have hailed it as a remarkable contribution toward reviving the road, and thus bringing good drama to cities far from the glimmer of New York.

Tomorrow And Tomorrow

One-Act Plays Premiere At Playmakers Tonight

The curtain at the Playmakers Theater will go up at 7:30 tonight on the single scheduled performance of a bill of three original one-act plays. There are no reserved seats and no charge for admission.

The three plays will be "Tomorrow and Tomorrow" by Richard Hopkins, "From Beneath the Wing" by Reginald Manning and "The Bell" by Emily Crow. None has been staged before, and each is written, directed and acted by students.

The directors, in order of the plays above, are Anne Martin, popular young actress from Cherokee, Bruce Strait of Cincinnati, the boys." Two other pledgmasters had the same general complaint.

Fraternities which called themselves "halfway" participating said their pledges attended the field day and banquet held yesterday and the exchange suppers earlier in the week.

Only one fraternity said it had done away with Hell Week completely. Its president said his group believed "Greek Week is the first major step in getting rid of some of the nonsense which has been carried on around here for years." However, he too criticized the organization of the week's schedule and said there was too much vagueness concerning some of the events.

Pledges Eat Greek Week Annual Feast

A class of approximately 300 fraternity pledges began to breathe easier as they wound up the second annual Greek Week project with a banquet in Lenoir Hall last night.

But the end of Greek Week did not mean the end of pre-initiation practices for most of the neophytes. Informal participation will continue until Sunday, when many of the Greek-letter societies plan initiation ceremonies.

A project of the Interfraternity Council, Greek Week is designed to substitute for traditional fraternity hell weeks, and to promote interfraternity unity, according to Lew Brown, Sigma Chi and Greek Week Committee chairman.

The Week began last Sunday morning with pledges attending Easter morning services in a group. Monday night consisted of exchange suppers for pledges between almost all the campus fraternity houses.

On Tuesday, the third day of the program, the neophytes assisted Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, in the cleaning of Battle Park, a project begun by APO a few weeks ago.

Last night a banquet in Lenoir Hall rounded out the week's program. University Controller W. D. Carmichael was the principal speaker. Other guests included IFC representatives, national officials.

Cosmopolitan Club Extends Invitation

Solons Pass Bill Favoring Dorm Visiting

Also Change Date Of Spring Voting; Amendment OK'd

By Chuck Hauser

The Student Legislature last night overwhelmingly passed a resolution favoring the granting of visiting privileges in men's dormitory social rooms to coeds, after breezing through a constitutional amendment and changing the date of spring elections.

The resolution, introduced by Ben James, inspired more discussion than the other two bills, but passed almost unanimously. There were only two dissenting votes.

There was only one dissenting vote against Election Board Chairman Julian Mason's bill to change the date of the spring general election from Thursday, April 12, to Wednesday, April 11. The reason for the switch was the unavailability of Gerrard Hall as a polling place on the 12th. The latest elections law requires Gerrard to be used.

The constitutional amendment, which passed unanimously, provides for three members of the Student Council to be elected during fall elections, rather than elect all nine members of the highest campus court in the spring.

James' resolution read: "Whereas: Fraternities are allowed to have unchaperoned women students in their houses, and

"Whereas: A similar visiting agreement could easily be applied to dormitory social rooms . . .

"Therefore: . . . The Legislature goes on record as favoring the granting of permission to the women students to visit dormitory social rooms, on the basis of a visiting agreement similar to that now in effect in fraternities."

Author James, Mason and Jim Lamm were named by Speaker Herb Mitchell as a committee to take copies of the resolution to administration authorities and "explain it in the proper manner."

In other business, the Legislature approved the presidential appointment of Charlie Brewer to replace Sol Kimerling on the Student Entertainment Committee, and heard Cood Senate Speaker Kash Davis explain that the Women's Association fund of approximately $2,400 is collected yearly in a separate coed fee from the block fee, and should not be considered a surplus. She said there was some confusion about coed finances resulting from an incorrect statement in The Daily Tar Heel last week.

The Legislature session was the last until after elections, when legislator Bunny Davis, unopposed in his vice presidential race, replaces Mitchell as speaker.

Coeds Are Reminded To Reserve Rooms

Coeds are reminded by the Dean of Women's office that they must make deposits to hold their rooms for next year. Deadline for the deposit is April 9.

Procedure for reserving a room: Pay $6 fee to University Cashier; bring receipt to Dean of Women's office, and complete reservation application.

Town Girls Vote

Members of the Town Girls Association who are members of the YWCA should come by the YW office today between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. to vote for new officers.

Positions to be filled include president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, and program chairman.

Elections in women's dorms and sorority houses were held last night.
