In Court

Two students were tried for traffic violations in Tuesday's session of Chapel Hill Recorder's Court.

John L. Bitter, Jr., Asheville, 102 Aycock, was found guilty on four counts, reckless driving, hit and run, driving without lights, and damage to property. Judge John Manning charged him $25 and costs.

Student Wilmer P. Gregory of Chapel Hill was charged $30 and costs for passing on a hill and speeding 65 miles per hour in a 40-mile zone.

Entries for the tourney may be turned in to the Student Union office up to Monday noon. Actual play starts Tuesday. The preliminary rounds may be played on any tables on campus but final contests will be scheduled for the GM lounge.

Extra tables for the tourney are available in the Rendezvous Room. Rules of the US Table Tennis Association will be followed for all disputes.

Rathburn emphasized that all students are eligible for the meet. "Last year coeds seemed to feel that they were not eligible," he said. About 20 entries played last year.

Further details on the meet will be announced shortly, he concluded.

Free Beer Is Offered In Rathskeller's Plan

Beginning next week, the Rathskeller will honor individual campus fraternities, dormitories and other organizations on three days of the week—and honor individual members of those groups by giving them two free beers each.

Owner Ted Danziger, in announcing the new policy yesterday, said, "there will be no service, cover or other charge for the use of the place. On these honor nights the Rathskeller will be open for business as usual to all students in addition to its guests."

Organizations accepting Danziger's offer must make way with the free brew before 7:30 p.m., Danziger added.

"Since there are not enough nights left to honor all campus organizations," he stated, "it will be left up to individual presidents of the interested organizations to contact me and arrange for a night on the first come, first served basis."

Nights set aside for the free beer affairs are Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays.

Located midway in the business block of East Franklin Street, the Rathskeller is noted for its atmosphere.

(Continued from page 1) the jurisdiction of the Women's Council in trying her case. The Student Council ruled in her favor, holding that violations of House Rules must be tried by the House Council concerned as required by the Student Constitution. The Women's Council trial was voided as being unconstitutional.

A coed who returned to her dormitory several hours late following an out-of-town trip was sentenced to a period of probation by the Women's Council. She appealed to the Student Council on the grounds that her sentence was too severe. The upper court rejected the grounds as invalid and upheld the decision of the Women's Council.

In other action during the year the Student Council declared unconstitutional a law passed by the Student Legislature making it an Honor Code offense to use student government telephones in Graham Memorial for personal reasons.

At the request of the chairman of the Elections Board, the Council ruled on the status of multiple nominees for student government offices. The campus supreme court held that only one person may be a candidate for a single office unless provision allowing more than one person to run on the same slate be made.

At the request of Attorney-General Dick Murphy the Council issued a statement of advisory opinions concerning applications of the Honor Code in connection with the maintenance and use of quiz files and laboratory assignments.

Two students were removed from probation by the Council after the court determined that the students had complied with the provisions of the sentence of probation and were qualified to be reinstated into full student rights.

At the request of Coed Senate Speaker Kash Davis, the Council interpreted Article I, Section 8, of the Constitution stating that the dormitory house president shall represent the first 100 residents of her dorm. An additional representative was authorized when the population of the dorm reaches a number above 150.

(Continued from page 2) than our American troops have. Especially since it would please the Nationalists, hurt the Reds and ease the pressure in Korea. But Truman said no.

MacArthur did not violate orders from Truman and the JCS by actually doing any of the things he thought should be done. All the General did to warrant being "fired" was to speak out.

MacArthur is a military man, an expert on Asian affairs. He saw the threat to America. He could point out the impending tragedy publicly or he could confine himself to confidential reports, knowing they would be suppressed as was the Wedemeyer Report. The General had a duty to his commander-in-chief, Truman. And a greater duty to the people of his country.

He spoke out. He could not help but know he was using his own military career, but his message is too important and his sense of duty to his country too great to have allowed him to keep silent.

Truman has gained nothing personally, militarily or politically by firing MacArthur. The nation has lost momentary prestige and a semblance of political unanimity. Truman's foreign policy, if continued, leads to national and world-wide disaster.
