Carpenters' Strike Holds Up Building

By David Buckner

Although construction work on the University's $20,000,000 building program has reached a near standstill due to the present A. F. of L. Carpenters' Union strike in the Durham-Chapel area, architects are rushing to complete plans for two new structures.

It is hoped that plans for a psychiatric wing for the new teaching hospital and the south wing of the medical school building will be prepared within the next two weeks.

Meanwhile contractors are assembling materials in the Medical Center area on Pittsboro road in order to begin construction of the $325,000 medical school north wing as soon as the strike ends. Also to be built is an obstetrical portion of the hospital and a 100-bed tubercular hospital.

Striking carpenters yesterday studied a proposal made by Federal and State mediators for settlement, but in the end came up with one of their own.

A spokesman said no meeting has been scheduled between representatives of the union and contractors, but added that the new proposal might be made through Seth Brewer of the U. S. Mediation Service.

Brewer, however, is reportedly in Winston-Salem at the present for a labor-management meeting in the McLean Trucking Co. strike.

The TB hospital, which will cost approximately $1,100,000, will be administered jointly by the University and the State's tubercular hospital system of which it is actually a part.

The obstetrical clinic will consist of the present third (top) floor of the Infirmary and a new fourth floor with corridor connections with the main hospital.

The hospital itself is expected to be ready for use by April, the dental school by next September, and the medical school operating on a four-year basis in the fall of 1952.

Exactness of these dates, however, depends upon the length of the strike, governmental action. (See "Building" Page 8)

SP Meets Monday

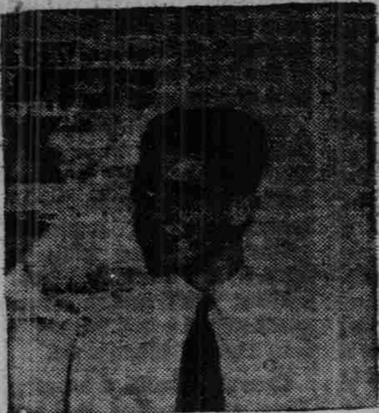

The Student Party will hold its first meeting of the new school year at 8 o'clock Monday night in Roland Parker Lounge of Graham Memorial. Julian Mason, party chairman, announced yesterday.

This meeting is especially for new students, he said, and extended a "perpetual welcome" to anyone interested in better student government.

President of the Student Body Henry Bowers, Coed Senate Speaker Joan Page, National Students Association Chairman Barry Farber, and other SP members will be on hand, according to Mason.

Mason extended an invitation to everyone and requested them to bring a friend.

Dick Murphy Now Member Of UNESCO

DICK MURPHY

Carolina has a student in the United Nations.

Genial Dick Murphy, the University's former student attorney-general, was elected this summer by the National Students Association to a three-year seat on the United Nations Economic, Social, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

The appointment was made at NSA's annual national convention Aug. 31 at Minneapolis, Minn. Murphy was among the six delegates from the University.

Murphy, a graduate history student from Baltimore, has served as regional chairman of NSA. He has been prominent in campus activities here since he entered Carolina in 1947.

Murphy will attend UNESCO's three annual meetings, and after the first year he will be eligible for committee appointment.

He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the Order of the Golden Fleece.

Dating Problems

Quotation from the Freshman Counselor's Handbook: "The 'dating problem' can be explained in terms of the woman shortage and the age difference without aspersions to the coed personalities."

"Beat State" Pep Rally Set For Memorial Hall Tonight

Enrollment Set At 5,550; Last Year's Figure—6,864

Enrollment is down some 1314 students from last fall's total of 6,864, the office of the Director of Admissions announced yesterday.

The new figure is set at around 5,550, including about 800 coeds and 115 foreign students. Altogether the foreign students represent 31 different countries.

Club Host To Orphans

The Monogram Club will entertain as its guest tomorrow 40 students from the Methodist Orphanage in Raleigh, according to Frank Allston who is in charge of arrangements.

Club members will meet them in the morning, give them refreshments, and take them into the game, he said.

This performance will be repeated for both the Georgia and South Carolina games with approximately 40 orphans each time from state orphanages.

"It is a continuing policy of the Monogram Club to use this as its initial activity each year," Allston said.

Phone Troubles

The phone system has gone on the blink again in The Daily Tar Heel office.

It is possible to call the number and hear the number ring, but the members of the staff are unable to hear the person calling. Also members of the staff cannot call from the phones in the office.

The phone company says it will be some time before they are able to fix the phones. So, drop by the office instead of calling.

But the real news was in the way registration was handled. Director of admissions Roy Armstrong credited the smoothest registration in at least a decade to a plan worked out by Ray Strong of the Admissions office.

For the first time in years the registration personnel sat at their desks with nothing to do. Strong's plan was to group students into a time schedule for registration, thereby eliminating much of the waiting in lines.

As the students came into Woolen Gym, they were handed a map of the whole works, showing the route to be followed through the maze of tables, typists, advisors, checkers and cashiers.

The ratio hasn't changed much, however. This year's Coed enrollment is approximately 800, a drop of some 129 from last year's 929.

One student, Joe College in white bucks, and grey flannels and blue sweater had this to say about registration. "Sure, it's easier than last year, but hell, so is digging ditches."

Mom Pleads For Son; He Went To Duke

Students overheard a desperate mother pleading with University authorities yesterday about her son.

The son, it seems, had been to Duke for three days as a new student and was mystified. He wants to transfer to Carolina. Admissions' officials were unavailable for comment, but there was an indication that the former Duke student would be accepted here.

Coach Snavely, Team Captains To Be Present

South building's bell will peal between 7:15 and 7:30 tonight to set off the University Club sponsored "Beat State" pep rally in Memorial Hall.

The feature attraction of the affair, scheduled to begin at 7:30, will be a talk by Coach Carl Snavely. Team Co-Captains Joe Dudeck and Bob "Goo-Goo" Gantt are also going to be on hand to aid in boosting the Carolina spirit for the Tar Heel's first game of the season.

Head Cheerleader Cyril Minett will introduce his new cheering squad to the student body at this year's initial rally. The University Band will also be at Memorial Hall the occasion.

The Carolina cheerleaders journeyed over to the campus of Woman's College in Greensboro last night to hold their annual pre-game festivities for the Greater University Day week end. State's cheering team was also present. Eight hundred WC girls will come to Chapel Hill for the State-Carolina game Saturday afternoon.

University Club President Duffield Smith announced yesterday that "Beat State" buttons and "Carolina Blue" hats will be on sale all day today and tomorrow morning in the "Y" Court.

"I hope that all the students will be sure and obtain their buttons and hats, and be on hand for the rally to give the Carolina eleven a big send-off for the season."

DTH Staff Meeting

The staff meeting for THE DAILY TAR HEEL originally scheduled for 2 p.m. Tuesday has been rescheduled for 4 p.m. the same day—two hours later. Editor Glen Harden announced yesterday.

This is being done, she said, in the hopes that it will eliminate the conflicts with labs at the original time.

A call was issued for all types of help—in news, sports, and the business staff. All interested should be present for the meeting Tuesday which will be held in the Roland Parker Lounge No. 2 in Graham Memorial.

The editor also announced that the absolute deadline for news and announcements is 3 p.m. the day before publication, except for that of Sunday's edition which is 10 a.m. Saturday.

Kitchen Becomes Cave; Last Word In Atmosphere Under Franklin St.

By O. Mac White

There are all kinds of places to drink beer in Chapel Hill.

You can drink beer uptown or downtown, inside or outside, in trees or on the ground. Now you can drink beer under the ground.

Opening Tuesday is Ted Danziger's new addition to the Rathskeller—the Tavern Cavern.

Last year a cold uninteresting kitchen, this undermined section of the business district has been transformed into a first class grotto complete with skeletons, miniature stills, spider webs, and dripping water.

"In Europe," says Danziger, "people use the catacombs or grottos for eating and drinking places as well as the Rathskellers under the city halls."

This is not just another beer joint, however, Danziger points out. No stags are allowed. The place is to be reserved for couples, groups, and private parties.

And it is not primarily a drinking place either, he says. It is planned to have the finest food for miles around served in the Tavern Cavern. Specialties will be authentic, unabridged, absolutely genuine Italian spaghetti, Chinese barbecued spareribs, chickens, and steaks.

It will also be a place of education. On request, wine will be served with meals. The purpose of this, says Danziger, is to educate the tastes of Carolina students to the delicacies of the fermented grape.

"Also," he says, "this year the Rathskeller will be the only place that I know of in the United States that has apple cider on tap"

The idea and design of the Tavern Cavern Danziger and wife claim for their own, but the work in constructing place was done by Mrs. Anne Garson, who just this summer received her masters degree in creative art from the University.

The Tavern Cavern will be open from noon to midnight every day, and meals will be served from noon until 8:30 p.m. From that time until midnight sandwiches will constitute the menu.
