

Dorm Advisors Will Not Be IDC Members

A radical change in the Interdormitory Council and dormitory government has been made recently, it was learned yesterday.

A Dorm advisor will no longer be a member of the Interdormitory Council nor will he be as much of a disciplinarian as he was formerly, according to Ray Jefferies, assistant to the Dean of Students. All advisors are graduate students.

Jefferies pointed out that the new advisor setup was completed this summer in the interests of speed and that an amendment in the Student Constitution would probably be made this fall.

"We feel that advisors should not be in student government because they are paid administrative help," he commented. The purpose of the new plan is to have the graduate advisors act as counselors to the dorm residents and in particular to freshmen," he added.

The advisors will be supervised by William Cupp, a graduate advisor majoring in sociology.

Plans for all advisors to be future personnel workers are being made now. A special training program for the advisors starts Monday.

Jefferies said that the IDC should still be able to continue its efforts toward better dorm life despite the loss of the advisors which number 19.

The IDC holds its first meeting Monday night at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker Lounge 3 in Graham Memorial.

Rendezvous Room Plans First Show

Plans are being made for the first in a series of bi-weekly variety shows, featuring student talent, to be held in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial Student Union.

The shows will be under the direction of student chairman Bob Levi, with the first show tentatively scheduled for October 4.

All students interested in taking part in the shows should contact Bob at the office of Graham Memorial, between the hours of 1 and 6 o'clock. Comedians, tap or other dance routines, vocalists, and similar talents are needed for the student entertainment programs.

Starting this week, the Rendezvous Room will be open each evening from 7:30 until coed closing hours.

married to keep from being drafted or drafted to keep from getting married, and puzzled freshmen sat around wondering why the founding fathers of the University had to stick an arboretum in the middle of the campus. That brings us up to date so now let's hop into the future.

For a pleasant two hours tomorrow afternoon Kaesong, Gromyko, the Atlantic Pact, draft quotas, and high taxes will get shoved to the sidelines as the universe revolves around Kenan Stadium. Forget the 600,000 Chinese massed along the Yalu River! Tar Heels by two touchdowns.

Mrs. Highsmith Is Housemother Of Carr Dorm

Another newcomer to Carolina's campus this Fall is Mrs. Florence Hall Highsmith, who is serving Carr dormitory as housemother.

Mrs. Highsmith is a native of Fayetteville, and is no "newcomer" in the hostess circles. She operated and was former housemother for the Highsmith Hospital Nurses' Home in Fayetteville.

During World War II, Mrs. Highsmith organized and operated the Soldiers Town Home in Fayetteville, which was the first recreation and entertainment center to be opened in the United States for servicemen. The Soldiers' Town Home was in operation preceding the organization of the national USO units, and Mrs. Highsmith received formal recognition for her center from Robert St. John, nationally prominent news commentator.

When asked for her opinion of Carolina, Mrs. Highsmith said, "I think it's perfectly lovely, and I get a thrill when I think of being a real part of it."

Social Rooms Are Finished

All men's dormitories which had facilities for social rooms are now furnished, according to J. S. Bennett, Director of Operations. These include A, C, Whitehead, (Lewis, Graham, Aycock, Stacy, and the lower quad dorms and Everett.)

The dorms were furnished with new furniture or furniture which was used years ago in the dormitories during the summer. Some of the furniture came from Spencer Dorm.

The only dorms that lack social rooms now are Alexander, Old East, Old West, Steele, and the Upper Quad, dorms. Bennett indicated that plans for these dorms to have social rooms would be considered after the new H-Dorm was ready for occupancy.

Some of the newly furnished rooms were used as Ping-pong rooms last year.

Although dorm government leaders have not met in their respective dormitories to consider decoration of the social rooms, there was indication that the new rooms would be fixed up as soon as possible. B Dormitory is the only men's dorm which has a fully decorated social room on campus.

Under the instigation of the Interdormitory Council last year, plans for the purchase of new furniture and the use of old were pushed forward by the University Administration. Dorm leaders are pleased with the new rooms. Residents are already using them.

the Pacific Southwest Area Board of the YMCA.

Freshmen will know Mr. Riebel for his work with the Freshman camp, held September 12-14.

The camp is held annually in connection with the freshman orientation program and aids the men students by discussing questions and problems they will meet in College.

At present Mr. Riebel is working in cooperation with Mr. Shotts, director of the YMCA, in planning a program for the coming year. Activities will cover the four main groups into which the program is divided, which include, personal development, campus and community work, Christian citizenship, and world relationships. Mr. Riebel is also doing special work with the freshmen.

Mr. Riebel and his wife, the former Peggy Royall of Elkin, are residing at 126½ North Street. Mrs. Riebel was graduated from Greensboro College in 1946 with an A.B. in religious education.
