Library Sets Official Date For Opening

The new date for the official opening of the addition to the main library at the University of North Carolina is Friday, February 29, 1952, according to Charles E. Rush, Librarian.

The opening date, originally set for October 12, was delayed because of the scarcity of materials and delays in their delivery, Rush explained.

Rush said that the more formal part of the opening program will emphasize the role of the Library in the successful operation of the American university.

This will be followed by an informal discussion of the relation of the library to teaching and research, a reception, and an inspection of the more than doubly enlarged building.

In the late fall, Rush said, books and manuscript materials will be moved and all service departments will be installed in their new or remodeled quarters.

By February, he said, "we hope to be settled and operating fairly smoothly, in order that visitors may note particularly the interrelationship of departments with the bookstack, and special facilities for research and authorship, and the expanded areas for study."

Morehead Visitors

More than 305,000 people have visited the beautiful Morehead Planetarium building and witnessed the Planetarium shows since it was opened at the University of North Carolina in the spring of 1949. The Morehead Building, which cost $3,000,000, was the gift of John Motley Morehead, member of the University class of 1891, an internationally known industrialist, engineer, scientist, philanthropist and former Minister to Sweden. The Planetarium is the sixth in the country and the only one connected with a university and the only one in the south.

Curious Crowds Cheer Colorful Card Stunts

By Jody Levey
A bright blue and white "hello" got this season's card stunts well underway at the game last Saturday.

"The stunts went off very well," Jo Grogan, president of the Card Board, said yesterday. But she advised students in the card section to listen more carefully to announcer Bob "Okie-Doke" Green.

Marking the Greater University Day theme were three stunts symbolizing each of the three schools composing it. The State stunt was depicted in red script while the one for WC showed a girl in a yellow bathing suit. Fourteen stunts are planned for the Georgia game next Saturday, according to the Card Board president.

The Card Board is an individual organization which was started four years ago by Norm Sper. Now it has approximately 60

Farmer Kills Wife; Jury Of Six Agrees

Press Institute Meets At UNC

The 10th annual North Carolina Scholastic Press Institute will be held in Chapel Hill Friday and Saturday, October 5-6, it was announced here yesterday by Prof. Walter Spearman of the School of Journalism, director of the Institute.

Several hundred high school editors and staff members of newspapers and yearbooks are expected to attend, he said.

Sponsored by the School of Journalism and Extension Division of the University, The Daily Tar Heel, and the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction, the Institute is held each year to give high school students a chance to improve the quality of their publications.

The full program of the Institute is being worked out by the executive committee, which includes Barbara Dearing, Raleigh, president; Pat Beachum, Wadesboro, vice-president; Martha Hadley Greenville, secretary, and Ted Kramer, Hickory, treasurer; Miss Dorothy Hollar, High Point, adviser for yearbooks; Richard M. Parker, Raleigh, adviser for newspapers; E. R. Rankin of the University Extension Division, and Professor Spearman.

Among the topics to be discussed will be "How to Make Your Paper Look Attractive," "How to Make Your Editorials Effective," "How to Make Your Sports Writing Lively," "How to Make Your Columns Appealing," "How to Sell Ads Easily," "How to Make Your News Stories Readable," "How to Make Your Yearbook Represent Your School," and "Yearbook Procedure."

Another Shooting Is Reported Here

The father of six grown children who admitted the slaying of his wife Sunday night but claimed he aimed for a man in the same room, was being held without bail in the Orange County Jail in Hillsboro yesterday.

Rufus "Baby" Tuck, a 29-year-old Chapel Hill Negro, was in fair condition at Lincoln Hospital yesterday where he was brought after staggering 170 feet before collapsing from Rudolph Cotton's home here. Cotton shot Tuck with a shotgun, hitting him in the eyes, arms, and chest. He was found by police after a three hour manhunt.

Chapel Hill police first heard of the slaying when Sparrow's son reported the death at about 8:30. Ira A. Sparrow, 67-year-old farmer confessed to sheriff's deputies that he killed his wife, Rhoda, 60, with a blast from a single barreled shotgun but asserted, "Reckon I shot her all right, but I was shooting at a man in the room with her." The woman was found sprawled across her bed in a rear room of a frame farmhouse five miles north of Chapel Hill in the Mount Moriah Church section.

The slaying was the second time in less than a month that death struck in this area. Miss Rachel Crook, a fish market operator here, was found dead near the New Hope Presbyterian Church on August 29, slain by a blunt instrument.

Police said that Sparrow came upon the man and his wife after coming into his house from feeding the livestock and milking the cows. Mrs. Wade Whitfield, a daughter, and her husband who live in a separate apartment in the house were out at the time.

The shot was at point-blank range, powder burns on the woman indicated. The man with Mrs. Sparrow was unidentified and no sign of him was found by police.

Members of Sparrow's family, who live nearby, were attending the Ephesus Church in Durham County when they heard of the death. Tommy, Sparrow's son, and Whitfield, were the first to arrive at the family home.

Sparrow greeted them by saying, "I killed your mother." He was standing in the yard with the loaded shotgun. The two rushed to the bedroom and then left to get police. Deputies Frank Maddry and Albert Pendergrass returned with them and arrested Sparrow. He offered no resistance.

A coroner's jury, empaneled at the scene of the slaying by Coroner Allen H. Walker, deliberated for two hours and questioned members of the family. The jury then declared that Mrs. Sparrow had been shot by her husband in the head. Jury members were all nearby residents.
