Best Georgia Team In Years Will Meet Tar Heels Today; Winless At Hill Since 1933

UNC Slight Underdog To Bulldog Eleven

By Bill Peacock

An angry Georgia football team, reportedly the best Bulldog eleven since the Trippi-led team of 1947, arrived here last night confident of victory in the annual rough-and-tumble game with the Carolina team. The game will start at 2 p.m. today in Kenan Stadium.

A capacity crowd of close to 45,000 fans, including a good number of Georgia rooters, are expected for the game. The game is being rated a toss-up with perhaps the Bulldogs given a one or two point edge.

The Georgians will be looking for their first victory in Chapel Hill since 1933 and Coach Wally Butts will be trying for his first win over the Tar Heels here. Down in Athens, Ga., there is a feeling the Bulldogs finally have the backs to go with their stalwart line and will come up the first Georgia victory over Carolina since the 1948 Sugar Bowl.

Wally Butts is afraid that the depth of the Carolina team might be too much for his boys, especially since he has had some injury trouble in his defensive team. Consequently, some of the players will be called on for double duty, which could give the Tar Heels some advantage in the last quarter.

Otherwise, the picture is quite bright for Butts. He has two fine breakaway backs in Zippy Morocco and Lauren Hargrove, a good plunging fullback in Dick Reber, and an adequate quarterback for his T-formation in Zeke Bratowski. Morocco and Hargrove were there last year, but Bratowski seems to be the key to the offense.

The sophomore star beat out experienced players like Billy Grant and Mal Cook to take the job. Last week as the Bulldogs trampled George Washington, he threw only a few passes, but they were accurate and he handled the ball well.

The Bulldogs have an old Carolina weapon which they hope will work to their advantage. It is the double safety and in Hargrove and Morocco they have the personnel to make it work. Another fine Georgia back is Fred Bilyeu, whose specialty is outside running. This strength in the backfield gives the Georgians some advantage here.

The Georgia line, always big and rough, will be a real match for the Tar Heel line, and the game could easily turn into a battle between the lines. The big man in the Bulldog line are Bill Yalvington and Marion Campbell, both tackles.

Probable Lineups:
Georgia: DeCarlo, Anglin, Spadino, McCaughey, Yalvington, Peacock, Bratowski, Morocco, Hargrove, Bilyeu.
UNC: O'Brien, Ruffin, Yarbrough, Miketa, Gruver, Higgins, Walsler, Hesser, Williams, Gantt, Wiess.

Officials: Referee, David Kaufman (John Hopkins); Umpires, CHE Norvell (Southeastern); Linesman, L. S. Pierce (Davidson); Judge, Jim Hitchcock (Auburn).

Like Georgia, Carolina has an improved team and the game figures to be much better than the 0-0 tie last year, which was marred by poor play. The Tar Heels did well last week in their surprisingly easy victory over (See MOROCCO, Page 3)

Students Give Opinions On Controversy

By Staff Reporters

Opinions were flying hot and heavy—some with names attached and some without.

But most of all students asked for their views on the refusal of the University to allow a Negro law student to sit in the UNC cheering section during football games took an interest in answering.

Here are the replies:

Ben James, independent candidate for SB president last year: "I disagree with Bowers' statement except for the portion about House. I believe that Bowers was voicing an opinion of only the minority of the students. House, in his action, is abiding by an unwritten law here in the South that is often as powerful as written laws."

The University Party's candidate for president last year, Dick Penegar: "I disagree with Bowers statement. House should have asked an opinion from Bowers before announcing, but the Chancellor is following both the requirement by law for providing equal educational facilities for Negroes and also the Southern law of segregation."

J. L. Miller: 412 B: "I have no objection to the Negroes sitting in the student section, however, I think they are seeking their rights the wrong way. Non-segregation is a coming thing, anyway."

Bill Venable, 218 Stacy: "I am in complete agreement with Henry Bowers on all points."

Coyt Wright, 5 Pettigrew: "Negro students go to school here with us, why shouldn't they go to football games with us?"

Charles Kuralt, 10 Battle: "I agree with Henry that 'It has long been accepted here that all forms of extra-curricular activities are a vital part of the educational process.'"

Linda Shults, 307 McIver: "I don't see any reason why they (Negroes) shouldn't sit with us, because they have been admitted to the University as students and should therefore be allowed to participate in all activities."

Ann Gowen, Alderman Dorm: "I think this whole situation will affect the surrounding states. If it had no publicity it would have been better."

Peggy Keith, ADPi: "Most students agree to admitting Negroes, but I don't think they want to socialize with them."

R. A. Phillips, Sigma Chi: "I'm indifferent."

Conference Group Suggests Ending Bowl Games, Off-Season Practice

Legislature Unseats Six From Ranks

The Student Legislature lowered the boom Thursday night.

Six legislators, both SP and UP, were unseated in a surging revival of legislative conscience. The students ousted were Bill Bostic (UP), Dick Schwartz (UP), Paul Barnes (SP-UP), Dub Graham (SP), Al Perry (SP), and Gene Hardin (UP).

The unseating of the six was almost automatic . . . at least according to law. The Legislature's by-laws state that "if a Legislator shall be charged with two unexcused absences . . . the Chairmen of the Rules Committee shall in writing notify the Legislator . . . and shall present . . . a motion to unseat the Legislator for non-performance of duty."

The Legislators in question were found guilty of two or three unexcused absences each. One of those receiving the boot was quoted as saying "I didn't know I had to go to the damn' things."

And only 22 of the 50 Student Legislators were present at last night's session. Some of the 50, however, are not in school this quarter.

In the same session, the lawmakers passed a resolution presented by Jim Lamm (SP) to amend the Constitution. The proposed amendment would make dorm advisors ineligible to sit on the Interdormitory Council. The action was taken in accordance with a South Building request. This amendment will appear on the ballot in fall elections.

The legislature also was promised a report on the third meeting from Thursday night. The committee's report, commonly expected to be explosive, will concern the tutorial system and quiz files.

The lawmakers confirmed the appointments of Julian Mason (SP) and Fred Coker (SP) to fill the vacancies left by Mel Respass (Ind.) and Ralph Waddell (SP), respectively. The governing body also confirmed the appointment of Allen Tate as chairman of the Campus Chest.

Because of conflicts, the legislature will not meet again until October 18.

Game Coverage

Color stories by Ken Barton, and Walt Dear, locker-room story by Tommy Peacock plus the complete story on the Carolina-Georgia game will be seen in tomorrow's edition of The Daily Tar Heel.

Picture coverage will be given by Ruffin Woody.

Overheard in a local beer-hall.

"Hey, Sam, got change for a nine dollar bill?"

"Sure," replied Sam drawing his hand from his pocket. "Here's three threes . . ."

Ask Freshmen Be Barred From All Varsity Sports

It looks as if bowl games and off-season practices may soon be things of the past for Southern Conference athletics.

Meeting yesterday morning in the faculty lounge of the Morehead Planetarium, 13 of the 17 presidents of the institutions comprising the Southern Conference went on record as stating they would instruct their delegates to the Southern Conference meeting in December to vote against allowing any college in the conference to accept a bowl bid.

Clemson gave the only negative vote. Three other colleges declined to vote.

The body voted unanimously that off-season practices for any collegiate sport should either have definite limitations or should be eliminated.

Also, it was the feeling of the presidents that the present emergency does not justify the use of freshmen in varsity sports, and that beginning September, 1952, freshmen should not be allowed to participate in them.

The decisions reached in this meeting are not conclusive, it was pointed out by Gordon Gray of the Greater University of North Carolina, who presided, but it was his "guess that in view of the overwhelming votes," the results of the meeting would carry considerable weight.

Limitation of off-season practices was in part an adoption of a resolution read by Wallace Wade, commissioner for the Southern Conference, which was adopted by the National Council of Commissioners in its July meeting.

The meeting also supported a proposal to return to the old rule concerning the eligibility of transfers to participate in athletics which was changed in the spring meeting of the conference.

As the rule now stands, transfers into the conference who participated in varsity sports at colleges outside the conference can play the same sport at his new alma mater only after one year's residence there. Transfers within the conference are ineligible indefinitely.

Under the old rule no transfer from within or without the conference is eligible to play at the school to which he transfers.

Gray inferred that this was not on emergency meeting, stating, "This is no fire alarm session." He said that it was not caused by any of the sports scandals of the past year, and nothing of that sort is anticipated in this conference.

The former secretary of the Army further told the presidents "to act for the good of the conference and the comprising institutions, and not be guided by what other conferences are doing."

In general, the presidents seemed pleased over the results of the meeting. On the other hand, Dick Herbert, sports editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, commented, "I wasn't in on the birth of the Southern conference, but it sure looks like I'm here at the death."

In addition, the meeting requested that delegates at the conference be limited to the presidents of the individual institutions, members of the administrations, or bona fide faculty member whose primary duty in his institution is not athletics.

It was pointed out that this would eliminate coaches, athletic directors, or members of their staffs from casting the one vote allowed their institutions.

The only proposal on the agenda on which no action was taken, or in other words was disapproved, was one which would have deleted a phrase of the new constitution of the conference which prohibits freshmen athletes from holding jobs.

Wade explained the purpose of this rule is to restrict a coaches bargaining power for a freshman prospect by promising him a better job than another coach could.
