

Foreign Troupes To Make Two Appearances At Hill

The Carolina Playmakers, in line with their policy of bringing to the University each year professional theatrical troupes of unusual quality, will this season sponsor the appearance of Touring Players, Inc., and the London Repertory Theatre.

Both these companies, working jointly as the Anglo-American Tour, will exchange visits in the United States, England and the continent.

Touring Players, Inc., will present "Trio—An Evening of Three Plays With Music" on March 8. This group is composed of experienced theatre people who describe "Trio" as a program of three representative American plays, in an evening of drama and American folk music.

On April 12 the London Repertory Theatre of England will present Ben Jonson's classic comedy, "Volpone". This will be a rare opportunity for theatre-goers since Jonson is seldom performed in this country by companies of the calibre of the London group.

The exchange visits between these two companies is being arranged by the State Department and have been hailed by the American National Theatre and Academy as an important step toward future international exchanges.

HOLDERS of the Playmaker season ticket will receive first choice of seats for both productions. These tickets are on sale now at

Booze Sends UNC Student To City Court

A number of University students who were found by the Chapel Hill Police Department to be illegally in possession of tax paid whiskey in front of a local restaurant last Friday and Saturday were told to pour out their whisky or come to court. Only one came to court.

Policeman D.R. Roberts said there were so many offenders that it was impossible for the policemen to leave the streets. Thus the students were told to pour out the stuff or be arrested. Only K.E. Lewis, Sigma Chi from Beaver Pennsylvania, didn't pour out his whiskey, Roberts said.

His case was the only one tried in a special Tuesday night session of Chapel Hill Recorders Court. Other cases had to be carried over to the next court because the principals failed to appear in court or their lawyers had the case bound over.

Student Lewis was found guilty of having illegal possession of whisky, but was found not guilty of illegally displaying whiskey in public. He was fined the costs of court.

the Playmakers' business office in Swain Hall on the campus. Mail and telephone orders are accepted.

Survey Completed

Miss Lucile Kelling, professor of library science here, recently completed a library survey in Asheville.

Focal points in the survey were the reference collection of the Pack Memorial Public Library and the Sondley Reference Library. Miss Kelling made recommendations for the future development of reference services in Asheville.

Lab In Caldwell Y Offers Aid In Romance Languages

By Joe Raff

You romance language students looking for better ways to learn your subject, might try walking into Caldwell Y some afternoon between 2 and 5 p.m. or in the evening from 7 to 9.

Not only students are invited to the foreign language laboratory, but also faculty members, folks just interested in brushing up on a language, passers-by, and just anybody who has a notion that they want to learn.

The lab, which has continually been expanding its programs each year, is available to the student who wants help with his lessons and the individual desiring to study a romance language.

As a method of study, educators say that past experience has proven that use of records in foreign languages is profitable to students. Countless records are available in the lab for the student to study and enjoy. All exercises for French, Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese 1, 2, 3, 3X, and 4 are on hand for the student interested in increasing his proficiency in his language.

Aside from the academic aspect of the lab, there are a great many opportunities for study of the culture of a foreign country. "Voice of America" records can be heard as well as the "Tres de Pancho," a Latin American trio of rumba-playing and Southern hemisphere jazz.

Both wire and tape recorders are available and several three-speed record players are there to be used by anyone interested in delving into the mysteries of a foreign language. A short-wave receiver may also be utilized by those who want to listen to radio-soap-operas from France and their favorite Spanish disc-jockey.

A program for enlarging the department has been underway for some time now. Dr. S. A. Stoudermire, head of the romance language department, explained that wider use of the laboratory system should be brought about. He illustrated that in this age of highly accelerated travel and communication it was necessary for the enlightened individual to know his neighbors. "The world is growing smaller and smaller, and it becomes all-important that we understand our foreign friends," he said. The laboratory method is the best way of learning about them.

Two New Faculty Members Added

Two new faculty appointments were announced here this week by Chancellor R. B. House.
