Tar Heels Arrive In Texas

Drivers Strike Here; Seek Wage Boost

The cement mixers around Chapel Hill won't be going "putty-putty" for a while. Construction on the addition to the chemistry building and the medical center and hospital has been halted by a strike of the drivers of the cement mixer trucks. They have been out since Thursday.

According to a report from the Constructors Supply Company of Durham, the drivers are striking for a wage boost. They have turned down an offer from Alastair Muirhead, owner of the company. His offer was based on what he thought would be an acceptable increase to the Wage Stabilization Board.

House Is Phi Speaker

J. Albert House, University of North Carolina student from Hobgood, has just been installed as Speaker of the Philanthropic Assembly, one of the University's two debating organizations. He succeeds Ham Horton, Jr., Winston-Salem.

Other new officers installed at ceremonies this week include Robert Pace, Morrisville, speaker pro-tem; Solomon Cherry, Roxobel, parliamentarian; Kent Jackson, High Point, critic; Robert Gorham, Rocky Mount, sergeant-at-arms; Jim Fouts, Lexington, clerk, and Franz Roberts, Hillsboro, treasurer.

Smokes Are Free

If You Roll Your Own, You Don't Have To Buy It Now

By JODY LEVEY

Are University students going tobacco wild? The fragrant odor of tobacco—unsmoked tobacco—invades every building. The question is whether its chewing tobacco, cigarettes, or snuff. Nope, just tobacco stems. Everywhere.

Nowadays the campus is literally covered with tobacco. Not just cigarette stubs or empty packages—this is the real thing. Tobacco stems, plain ordinary tobacco stems, blanket the University from stem to stern.

No, the University isn't planting or growing tobacco. The brown stuff was given to the University by two Durham tobacco firms, says J. S. Bennett, director of operations. Chuck Erickson, assistant director of athletics and golf coach, originated the idea of using the stems on the golf course several years ago. The experiment was a good one and this year the stems are being spread over the whole campus.

Those brown brittle sticks have terrific potentialities. They offer protection from the cold in winter and are supposed to be nu-

'Rope Texan Steers,' Say 50 Fans To Team

AUSTIN, Texas—The Tar Heels readied for their important contest with the Texas Longhorns here, and an 850 name telegram containing words of cheer greeted them.

It read:

"WE'RE WITH YOU ALL THE WAY, KNOWING YOU'LL BE MAKING SHORTHORNS OUT OF THE LONGHORNS. JUST ROPE THE STEERS AND ADD A LOT OF TAR. SORRY WE CAN'T BE WITH YOU AT THE GAME BUT WE'LL BE CHEERING YOU ON BACK HERE. LET'S GO CAROLINA."

Included in the list were University administrative officials, prominent citizens from town, and students.

Last year the team received a telegram at South Bend for the Notre Dame game. The message had 2800 names attached to it.

In Chapel Hill, University Club President Duffield Smith asked students to appear in front of Woollen Gym, at 4:30 Sunday afternoon to greet the team after its return here. "We want the team to know we're behind them whether they win, lose, or draw," he said.

Several students are planning to greet the team arriving at the Raleigh-Durham airport about 3:30.

At least 800 Carolina fans from back home will be on hand for the game. Local Texas alumni associations will also be in attendance.

Exhibit To Open Tomorrow

Opening the fall series of exhibitions at Person hall art gallery will be the works of Robert Howard, visiting professor of sculpture of the University of North Carolina.

On display from October 6 to October 28, Howard's exhibition will include sculpture in cast concrete, metal, terra cotta, and ceramic, as well as oil paintings, watercolors, drawings and a print.

Howard, who studied at Phillips University in Oklahoma before his three years' service with the Army, received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Tulsa and studied under Ossip Zadkine in Paris before coming to Chapel Hill.

Howard, his wife, and small son, David, who was born shortly after arrival in Chapel Hill last winter, are living in Glen Lennox.

Book Exhibit On Display In Library

An exhibit of 50 books selected by six name publishers and manufacturers is now being shown in the library building. The exhibit is sponsored by the American Institute of Graphic Arts and will remain on exhibition here until October 28.

Ogg, director of advertising for the Book of the Month Club and chairman of Fifty Books' committee, observed, "The books are to demonstrate to the public the principles of superior book design and manufacture. This 29th Annual Exhibition is considered the most exciting cross-section of American book design and production ever assembled in the United States."

The books were chosen from a group of 519. They were judged on physical qualities and relationship between design and contents, the editorial content being judged only in so far as the design and typography conveyed the spirit of the book and the intent of the author.

The exhibition covers a variety of books. They include anywhere from a $.55 paperbound volume to a heavy encyclopedia priced at $25.

The exhibition is sponsored in an effort to raise the level of American book design and production. The books are now touring the United States and part of Europe.

3 New Faces In Lineups; Will Use 'T'

By ZANE ROBBINS

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 5 — The football Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina arrived here last night and held a brisk one-hour workout this afternoon at Texas Memorial Stadium where they will meet undefeated Texas at 2 p.m., tomorrow.

Coach Carl Snavely has shaken up his starting lineups since last week's loss to Georgia and three new faces are expected to be in the starting offensive lineup tomorrow. The defensive lineup will be virtually the same with the exception of two backfield switches.

Jeff Newton, a sophomore from Raleigh, and Benny Ellenwood, a freshman from Elkhart, Ind., will replace Bill O'Brien and Benny Walser at offensive ends and flashy Frank Wissman, a junior from Philadelphia, will take over from Billy Williams at tailback.

In the offensive alignment, Larry Parker, the freshman sensation from Charlotte, will replace Bud Carson at safety and Chalmers Port will step into his old right halfback slot, replacing Parker. Carson will probably see limited action, but his left ankle, sprained in last week's game, is still troubling him.

Joining Wissman in the offensive backfield will be Bob (Goo Goo) Gantt, the old reliable, at wingback, Dick Wiess at fullback and Skeet Hesmer at quarterback.

The offensive line will stand pat with the exception of the end switches. Dalton Ruffin and Tom Higgins will open at tackle with Ken Yarborough and Dick Gruver at guard and Andy Miketa at center.

The lineup won't be the only change by Snavely. The Grey Fox has been drilling his boys on the

Playmakers Hold Tryouts On Tuesday

Auditions will be held for the initial Carolina Playmaker student production on Tuesday, October 9, at 4 p.m., in the Playmakers Theatre, and at 7:30 p.m., in Memorial Hall. Tryouts are open to all candidates.

The play chosen for production is Jack Porter's thesis script, "Hospitality," which concerns the invasion of a happy household by a warbuddy who makes a practice of living off former comrades now that the war is over.

Director Fred Young, a graduate student, will need a large cast to fill out the many parts. Particularly, he will need young men to play the warbuddies, and has posted a description of characters on the bulletin board at the rear of the Playmakers Theatre.

Carolyn Goldberg, above, will be one of the featured speakers at the High School press institute banquet tonight. She is better known by her byline Carol Leh.

Columnist Will Speak To Scribes

Carolyn Goldberg, Hollywood columnist who writes under the by-line of Carol Leh, will be the featured speaker of the North Carolina Scholastic Press Institute's banquet session at 7 o'clock tonight in the Carolina Inn.

Topic of Miss Goldberg's talk is "Reporting Hollywood." She is a native of Durham and an alumna of the University.

The banquet meeting tonight will climax the two-day high-school press meeting which opened here yesterday with approximately 200 students attending.

Student officers of the Institute for the coming year will be elected in a business session to be held in Gerrard hall at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

This year's officers are Barbara Dearing of Raleigh, president; Pat Beachum of Wadesboro, vice-president; Ted Kramer of Hickory, treasurer; and Martha Hadley of Greenville, secretary.

In addition to hearing addresses by prominent newspapermen of the State, the students are participating in discussion panels on various aspects of publication work.

The Institute is sponsored here each year by the School of Journalism, The Daily Tar Heel and the N. C. Department of Public Instruction.

Yack Deadline

The deadline for all organizations (other than fraternities and honoraries) to sign contracts for pages in the Yack is Monday.

"This deadline cannot be extended," Editor Lindsey said.

Please come by the Yack office to sign your contract and to turn in your information sheet, material for writeup, and list of members at the same time, Editor Lindsey requested.
