Honor, Campus Codes Are To Be Investigated

Attorney General of the Student Body Evans announced plans for an investigation of Carolina's Honor and Campus Codes as one of the major projects for the current student government week.

To serve as team captains for the week's investigation, Evans has secured the services of Jimmy Wallace, Ben James, Bill Roth, and Bill Wolf who will marshal a group of 4-6 students each into exploring specific phases of the campus judicial structure.

Evans stated that the plan of procedure has been to outline the problems and points of weakness in Carolina's Honor Code arrangement, and then proceed with small investigating committees toward finding a solution for the existing ills.

The study has been underway since the beginning of the week; meetings open to the public will commence today, continuing for a period of a week to ten days. Evans is extremely interested in having as many students as possible contribute to the investigation in some way. He, therefore, strongly urged that any and all persons having anything to offer in the way of comment, suggestion, observation, etc. on the Honor and Campus Codes to drop by the Student Government Office any time after 3 o'clock this week to present these ideas to the committees.

Neill, White Reprimanded By Council

Rolfe Neill, president of the North Carolina Collegiate Press Association, and O. Mac White, former Daily Tar Heel news editor, were given official reprimands yesterday by the Men's Honor Council.

They were found guilty of "character assassination" under charges brought by Student Body President Henry Bowers under the Campus Code. The charges were an outgrowth of a letter by Neill and a column by White published in The Daily Tar Heel on October 14.

Neill and White have the right to appeal the verdict to the Student Council within the next 48 hours. They said an announcement of their decision would be made today.

The verdict came after the Council decided that White and Neill's action in "making unprovable statements" against President Bowers' character were "un-gentlemanly conduct."

According to the Campus Code, a student is expected "to conduct himself as a gentleman at all times."

Council chairman, Allen Mill-edge speaking of any attack upon a man's character, said during the hearing, "It's not consistent with the honor system and the campus code . . . if you're going to make statements about a man's character you've got to be able to prove them."

System," Evans said. He stated further, "We're not going to revolutionize it in a week's time, but we do plan to make basic changes to fundamentally improve it. Since our work may readily affect the academic life of the entire student body, we would like to hear from as many students as can possibly find time to drop by Graham Memorial in the next several days."

Controversy Given Airing

By Barty Dunlop

Henry Bowers, student body president, explained to members of the Student Party Monday night why he brought the character assassination charges against two students to the Men's Honor Council.

A student should not accuse another student who is in a responsible position unless he has definite proof or a witness that such a statement was made, Bowers said.

If the universities are supposed to uphold the democratic ideals and do not, they cannot help but be a bad influence on the students who will later take their places as responsible citizens, he indicated.

Bowers concluded his speech by urging students to participate in student government. "Student government cannot become anything unless every student takes an active interest in it.

'Power Behind The Wheel'; Students' Rights Defined

By Walt Dear

The power behind the wheel, the wheel being student government, is the official Student Constitution.

First adopted in 1946 and revised by students in April of last year, the document, a concise eight page paper with blue cover and available for 50 cents in the student government office, is the student's Bible when it comes to self-government.

With the Constitution backing up councils and other groups, $50,000 can be given to a certain or allotted to certain organizations, and the student president or other officials may be impeached. The Constitution is the supreme student law and can be amended only by the Student Legislature and a two-thirds majority in a campus election.

Complete with a preamble and 11 articles, the Constitution is modeled after the U.S. Constitution. It provides for three branches of student government: Legislative with that power invested in the Student Legislature; Executive, vested in a president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer, and a Judicial, with power vested in a Student Council, and several other councils.

Daily Tar Heel Goes Standard Size Again

By Glenn Harden

The Daily Tar Heel will once again become a standard-sized newspaper next week, following action of the Publications Board yesterday.

In a hectic two and a half hour meeting, the board heard arguments for a six-day-a-week tabloid from Ernest Delaney, financial coordinator of publications finances, L. M. Pollander, faculty member of the board and member of the advertising department, Glenn Harden, editor of The Daily Tar Heel and O. T. Watkins, business manager of The Daily Tar Heel.

Arguing for the standard were Frank Allston, chairman of the board, and two visitors to the board, Harry Snook, columnist, and coed Pat Morse.

Walter Dear, member of the board, moved that "The Daily Tar Heel be published 5 days a week standard size during the winter and spring quarters and this fall six days a week." The motion was passed by a vote of five to one.

Frank Allston, chairman of the board, expressed his view of the Publications Board stand as a "progressive step in the right direction." He said he was well pleased with the outcome of the meeting and the vote of the Board.

Watkins then moved that "the publications board request that The Daily Tar Heel receive from the student legislature within a month $2,100 to be placed on account within a month after passage." This motion was passed by three to one.

The purpose of this latter motion was explained by proponents of a "financially flexible tabloid" on the basis that The Daily Tar Heel is almost sure to lose money operating as a standard.

"I voted for the standard because its financially sound with the additional $4,000 from the legislature," said board member Dear, expressing the opinion of proponents of the measure.

"Unfortunately, the issues involved in deciding whether or not to publish the standard-sized paper are confused in the minds of the members of the board because of the fact that legislature stipulated the return to standard-sized publishing in their recent budgetary revision," said secretary Ken Penegar.

Meanwhile, proponents of the tabloid left the board convinced, along with Watkins, that The Daily Tar Heel will lose money under the present budget.

The budgetary revision will go to the Legislature Thursday night for final vote. The Board will at that time represent its stand on the matter of financial support of the standard sized paper.

University And Town Join In Celebration Of UN Day

George W. Cadbury

United Nations Day will be celebrated with a variety of programs day and night, on campus and in town.

Miss Frances MacKinnon, program chairman of the League of Women Voters here, will preside at the United Nations Day meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Methodist church.

Earl Wynn, director of the Communications Center will read the UN Day statement contributed by Oscar Hammerstein II called "More Than a Dream." The introduction of the speaker, George W. Cadbury, will be made by Chancellor R. B. House.

Cadbury, director of Technical Assistance of the United Nations, who is being sponsored by the League of Women Voters, will speak today at 8:00 p.m. on the subject entitled "Point Four and the United Nations."

Cadbury, who attended Cambridge and Pennsylvania Universities, was associated with the Ministry of Aircraft Production and the British Air Commission. In February of this year he became affiliated with the UN after having served for five years as chairman of the Economic and Planning Board and chief industrial executive of the Province of Saskatchewan. The public is invited and a discussion period will follow the address.

Also in observance of United Nations Day, movies will be shown in Gerrard Hall from 9:00-12:00 and at 4:30 p.m. There are three selections chosen for the day and all three films will be shown on the hour. No admission will be charged.

Ring Sales

Senior class rings will be on sale tomorrow from 2 until 4:30 p.m., said Al House, Grail ring chairman, today.

Ring sales will continue throughout the year on every second Thursday. Rings for the Class of '53 will be on sale after Christmas.

The Grail is the only agency through which the official University ring may be obtained.

Creed Is New Council Head

The second official meeting of the Inter-dorm Council met last Monday night and the members elected two holdover members and two neophytes to its top offices. Elected as President and Vice-president were Bob Creed and Paul Somerville respectively. Winning the post of Secretary by a very close margin was Jim Richards. Another new member was elected to the position of treasurer, this being Ed McLeod.

A request from Dr. Pepper Bottling Company to allow the placing of machines in the dorms was considered by the Council. A motion was passed in favor of this, only if the present status of the coke machines would not be altered. Several members, representative of the other various members, also voiced their opinions. This motion summed up the obvious consent of the prevailing opinions.

Newly elected President Creed asked for the total support and
