Notes from the Ryder Cup Matches

THE AMERICANS WHIPPED THE British, 9½-2½, in the Ryder Cup match held at Pinehurst Friday and Sunday, but the score doesn't indicate the difficulties under which the Americans won or the closeness of the match.

Two of our competitors, Ben Hogan and Skip Alexander, are lucky to be alive today, and another, Lloyd Mangrum, had no business playing with a case of influenza which kept his temperature at 102 degrees. Everyone knows the story of the plucky Hogan, who was nearly killed two years ago in an automobile accident and was told he might not ever be able to walk. Last year he staged a great comeback and won the National Open. Sunday, Ben, who still walks with a perceptible limp, beat Charles Ward, 3 and 2, in a close one.

The case of Alexander is less familiar to the average sports fan. Alexander, a native of North Carolina and captain of the championship golf team at Duke in 1940-1, was badly burned in an airplane crash which killed the other occupants a year ago. At the time he had earned enough points in tournaments to qualify for the biennial Ryder Cup matches, but it was thought unlikely he would be able to do much when the play rolled around. And quite unlikely that he would rout John Pantan, 8 and 7.

Alexander's Personal Victory

BUT THERE HE WAS Sunday and at any other time this comeback would have been fabulous, but Hogan has the corner on comebacks this year. Skip was obviously tired at the end of his match and his right hand must have been giving him trouble, although he did not complain. That hand is still badly scarred and will receive more surgery soon at Duke Hospital.

Skip had a doctor following him in his party. The doctor was Cary Middlecoff, a dentist and former National Open champ. Middlecoff, like all the people following Alexander and Pantan, mentally shot every shot with Skip and gave encouragement to him. Middlecoff acted as a personal squire and took leave of Alexander at one time to get him a soft drink.

When members of the two teams assembled in front of the club house on the beautiful putting green for the presentation of the cup, Alexander got the biggest hand as he took his seat. The big, bespectacled fellow ginned as his fellow Tar Heels payed homage to him.

Mangrum, usually compared to a dapper river boat gambler because of his black mustache and jaunty walk, was anything but dapper Sunday. He dragged around the course in an old tan sweater and a white cap that had seen better days. A friend carried a camp stool that he used at every opportunity and during the afternoon, Mangrum put much of weight on his friend as he walked around. Several times he stopped and took some medicine. But his shots were too straight and accurate for his younger and more powerful opponent, Harry Weetman, who went down to defeat, 6 and 5.

Max and the Drunk

ONE OF THE MOST popular members of the British team was big, broad-shouldered Max Faulkner, the British PGA champ, who pushed Sam Snead hard, before losing 4 and 3. On the 14th hole in the afternoon he pitched within seven feet of the pin while Snead's shot fell about ten feet further away, and it appeared that Faulkner might pick up a hole. But Snead, whose putting was brilliant, rapped in the putt. Faulkner, obviously annoyed, started to line up his putt when a fan, who had spent the afternoon in the club house lounge, gave out with a good, loud, Shhh!

Faulkner looked up from his work and stared at the offender. He said something, completed his survey, and sank the putt. Ed (Porky) Oliver, the only member of the U. S. team to lose, took his defeat rather lightly. Once he took a putt, saw that it would miss, and yelled, "Don't worry, the cup's as big as a wash tub."

Cole's Shot Deflected Into Goal

(Special to The Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, Nov. 5—A third quarter shot by Tar Heel Center Halfback Dave Cole which bounced off State Fullback Wagner into the goal gave the North Carolina Jayvee soccer team a 1-0 victory over the State Jayvees here today.

Cole intercepted a State pass at midfield and dribbled to within 20 yards of the goal before shooting. Wagner attempted a backwards kick away from the Wolfpack goal, but flubbed the kick and the ball bounced past Goalie Fiore. The score came at 10:35 in the third quarter and broke up the scoreless tie in the ragged game.

The victory was the fourth straight of the year for Coach Ted Bondi's team and gives them a perfect record.

The Tar Heels took 37 shots, all but 18 of them being wide of the goal. Inside Left Walter Hooper made one of the most outstanding plays of the game in the third quarter when he took the ball on his own 15 and dribbled down the sideline to the 20 before trying a pass to Don Yates in the clear. The pass to Yates was blocked. Hooper was hit in the mouth by a kicked ball shortly after and was nearly knocked out.

The defensive play of Cole and Fullback Ronald Younts was outstanding. Cole made several fine line kicks,

Improving Cavaliers Pick On Battered Tar Heels Saturday

The University of Virginia Cavaliers have risen to the position of one of the most dangerous teams in the South, and are pointing for their traditional rivals, Carolina, in the battle between the states played at Charlottesville Saturday.

The Cavaliers have a five and one record this season, but their power wasn't realized until two weeks ago when they beat Duke University, 30-7. Virginia's only loss was a surprising 42-14 drubbing by Washington and Lee on October 13. Besides the win over Duke, the Cavaliers have beaten George Washington, 20-0, Virginia Tech, 33-0, V. M. I., 34-14, and whipped The Citadel, 39-0 Saturday.

The Cavaliers have depth in the backfield, with six different backs scoring against The Citadel, and a fine defensive team that held the Bulldogs to 34 yards rushing. The Virginia offensive squad rolled up 319 yards last week, and scored 26 points in the first half of the game.

Harold Hoak, a high-scoring fullback with a 5.3 rushing average, and Guard Joe Palumbo, an All-America candidate, constitute a good deal of Virginia's power. Hoak is the team punter, and had the excellent average of 40.1 yards last year.

AND YOUR RESOURCES ARE LOW, BUT LOW

Try Collector's Editions — They look like something you'd find on a millionaire's bookshelf, and it's hard to believe they cost only a buck.

Matter of fact, not since old Picard dropped his purse in the stratosphere has a dollar bill gone so far as it goes in our bargain corner. There are dozens of choices, and we'll never let the little lady know the price, except in modest advertisements like this one.

Try Our $1.49 Shelf—You'll find such titles as "The Great Gatsby" or "Brideshead Revisited" in really impressive editions.

Try the Peter Pauper Shelf — Books of exquisite craftsmanship, this series includes such appropriate titles as "Tristan and Yseult" and "The Love Poems of Thomas Carew." Cost only two little iron men, but look like more.

Try the Humor Table—Gay books priced from a dollar to $2.50, and what else could you give the biddy one half so precious as an hour of laughter?

OR YOU CAN AFFORD TO SHOOT THE WORKS

Consider Life's Picture History of Western Man—Rockefeller could not buy anything better, nobody could find anything prettier, and what's more, if the chick-a-biddy has brains, this is authentic stuff for her to mull over! $10.00

The New Yorker Album is Swell Here is the cream of the cartoon crop through thirty years of New Yorker history. Adams, Arno, Barrow and all that batch are here for weeks and weeks of delightful looking. And pal, you might look with her. It should be a pleasure in more ways than one. $5.00.

The Rogers and Hart Song Book Should Knock Her for a Loop—Here, with music, words and comment, are the choice songs of America's favorite sophisticates. "My Heart Stood Still," "Falling in Love With Love," "It Never Entered My Mind"—You'll enjoy singing them and, take it from an ancient mariner, they don't hinder romance! A top cut gift $7.50
