

Changing Ways Of South Revealed In New Volume

One of the most important publishing projects in the field of cultural anthropology ever to be undertaken in the South got its start here today with the release by the Press of "Plantation County," a 235-page volume by Dr. Morton Rubin.

"Plantation County" is a book in which the author, former research assistant of the Institute for Research in Social Science of the University, writes in entirely new ways about some of the old and new traits of life in the plantation area of the Black Belt of the South.

His story of a county (for this book disguised under the name "Plantation" county) reports and interprets the day-by-day life of the people as observed through the eyes and ears of a modern cultural anthropologist who found his materials among the people and not in documents and impersonal surveys. The result is a wholly fresh picture of one type of Southern community intimately revealed.

The Rubin volume is the first of several projected studies sponsored by the Institute for Research in Social Science and written under the directorship of Dr. John Gillin. Together the books will constitute the most ambitious attempt ever made to study representative southern communities from the point of view of the anthropologist trying to see from first-hand how and why men behave as they do.

Other types of communities to be covered include a hill community, a forest community, a coastal community, and a Piedmont small town. It is hoped by the sponsoring Institute that the group will present the first non-partisan, vivid, on-the-spot report of the changing South as it really is.

The author of the first volume, a native of Boston, is at present in Israel, making an anthropological study there.

New Art Show Is In Person

"What is Modern Painting?" is the title of the new exhibition opening at Person Hall art gallery today. To be on display through Nov. 26, this exhibition provides a clear introduction to the study of modern painting.

Accompanied by a text which was written by Alfred H. Barr, Jr., Director of the Collections of the Museum of Modern Art, the exhibit includes 31 reproductions in full color and 9 photographs reproduced in gravure. It presents in readily understandable terms the important trends in art during the past 75 years: realism, impressionism, expressionism, cubism, surrealism, magic realism, and other phases of modern painting.

One of several such exhibitions prepared by the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the carefully organized display is considered valuable for all those who find the subject of modern art puzzling and difficult as well as for art students.

Dentists Plan Victory Day On Saturday

"Victory Day" is to be celebrated in Chapel Hill by the Dental Foundation of North Carolina, Inc., next Saturday, November 10.

At that time the Foundation hopes to be able to announce that the immediate goal of its Fund Raising Campaign for $100,000 is in sight.

Committees composed of dentists have been organized throughout the State of North Carolina to raise the Fund. The dentists of the State have expressed the desire to contribute the first $100,000, and following this, opportunities will be given to all interested people outside of the profession.

More than half of the $100,000 goal had been realized last week.

Speakers in the "Victory Day" celebration will be Chancellor Robert B. House, Dr. Paul Jones, Farmville, Vice-president of the Foundation, and Dean John C. Brauer, Secretary-Treasurer. Dr. A. M. Bumgardner, Charlotte, State Chairman of the Development Committee of the Foundation, will present the results of the campaign.

Dr. Henry Lineberger, Raleigh, president of the Foundation, and one of America's foremost leaders in dentistry, will be absent because of illness.

In conjunction with the celebration, there will be the annual meeting of the Foundation and the Board of Directors.

Visitation also will be made to the area where the new School of Dentistry is under construction.

The primary purpose of the Dental Foundation, incorporated under the laws of North Carolina in November of 1950, is "to aid the educational and research program of the University's School of Dentistry, and, thereby the dental and general health of the people of the State."
