Japanese Editor Hopes American Troops Will Remain In Japan For Indefinite Period

By Elizabeth Napier

The longer the American troops of occupation stay in Japan the better—at least that's the attitude of one prominent Japanese editor, Seiji Shiki.

Editor Shiki is with a group of 10 Japanese journalists now on a three-month tour of this country under the sponsorship of the State Department. He is president of a publishing company which prints a five-day-a-week tabloid size newspaper which carries news of events in the magazine, newspaper and publishing fields in his country. It is similar, he says, to Editor and Publisher in this nation. Its name is Shimbun No Shimbun.

Shiki a graduate of UNC, spent several days here this week on his first visit to the Chapel Hill campus since 1918 when he took his M.A. degree. He was glad to find a number of his collegiate contemporaries still here, among them Chancellor Robert B. House, News Director Robert W. Madry, and Albert Coates, director of the Institute of Government. He also had a pleasant reunion with his former landlord, Dr. R. B. Lawson, with whom he lived when he was a

Economic conditions in Japan have been improving steadily since the American occupation, but there is still a good deal of unemployment and too much poor housing, Shiki said.

The Communist menace is decreasing, but a great deal of Communism will continue to exist until economic conditions improve to a great extent. The Japanese editor said. Too much significance is not to be attached to the recent Communist student demonstrations against the Japanese Emperor, he added.

Asked why he wanted American troops to remain in Japan indefinitely, Shiki exclaimed: "Japan has no real army now, and if the American troops pull out, we know the Russians may move in. Isn't that reason enough?"

General Matthew Ridgway is very popular with the Japanese, and, is doing a wonderful job, Shiki said. He expressed amazement at the progress of this country since he left here 32 years ago. "The increase in your modern conveniences has added 100 per cent to your comforts of living," he said.

Shiki is married and has two sons, 25 and 22 years old, and one daughter, who is training to be a Catholic nun. Shiki did not fight in World War II. Now 57, he was past the age limit to be called, and "having so many friends in America, I just did not have the heart to volunteer for any war against this nation."

ed the extra point try for the second time in three attempts and the score stood—and remained—at 19-7.

The turning point of the game came in the final period when Carolina had a first down on the Duke 17 with the score standing at 13-7. After four bad plays, the Dukes took over on their own 31. That, for all practical purposes, washed up the Tar Heels.

One of the outstanding features of the day was the terrific defensive play of Carolina's George Norris, junior defensive end from Radford, Va. Norris was probably the outstanding lineman on the field although Ed (Country) Meadows of Duke was a close second, defensively speaking.

The officiating was probably the worst of the year. Time and again, clipping, slugging, and offsides infractions were detected from the sidelines but ignored by the officials. At one point, Duke's Louis Tepe jumped on Billy Williams and hit him in the face twice with an official staring him in the eye. The ref pointed at Tepe, probably reprimanding him, but no penalty was marked off.

At another time, Carolina was penalized six yards for offsides. On still another occasion, the officials ruled a pass no good after Carolina's Dick Lackey had wrestled the ball away from Duke's Lloyd Caudle on the Tar Heel 12.
