University Medical Center Health Program Keystone

By Vardy Buckalew

On Pittsboro road high above Carolina's campus is a mammoth $12,000,000 medical center which will be the keystone in the state-wide health program now underway.

Construction on the assorted medical buildings is progressing almost according to plan, according to University officials. When complete, the University medical center will offer a health division unique in many respects to other such organizations.

In the Medical Center will be the schools of medicine, pharmacy, public health, dentistry, and nursing, and the North Carolina Memorial hospital. The organization forms the newly created Division of Health Affairs of the University.

The reasons for this new division of the University and for planning buildings in close physical proximity were pointed out by its administrator, Dr. Henry Clark, in the first progress report of the Division to the people of the State in 1950. They are:

1. The purposes of the various units are closely allied and coordination of the several programs can best be obtained by having one overall administrative organization.

2. Students in several of the division's schools often must take courses in the same subject.

3. A close grouping of buildings will save time for students and staff in going from class to class.

4. The existence in Chapel Hill of all primary training programs in the health field will make for completeness of training in each field.

5. By living and working and playing together, the students in the several units of the Division at Chapel Hill should develop a team philosophy of service which will carry into their home communities in later years.

6. The comprehensive service which can be rendered at this site is impressive because of the extensive and varied facilities which are being developed in the health field in Chapel Hill.

7. A great stimulus to research will come from the fact that all branches of the health sciences are represented in a concentrated area.

The main objectives of the Division are to help coordinate all phases of health activities in the state for the good of the people of the state; economize by combining courses required in different professions; and to bring about the broadest cooperation among professional people. This undertaking of the Division has been described as the first attempt to coordinate a whole state's health program in one place.

Transition Now Taking Place In Library

By Walter Dear

"Students are good sports" to bear up under present conditions at the University Library, Charles E. Rush, head librarian said yesterday, but they can hope for more room, more quiet, and more books by next April, he indicated.

A day-to-day moving process by several library departments plus construction work have kept the usually quiet building in a constant state of activity in the last two years. Yet, students already are taking advantage of the addition to the library and will be able to use almost all new rooms by April 18—if present construction work continues on the same level.

Now in use are Economics and School of Business Administration room located on the west wing, main floor, a ground floor room temporarily housing administration offices and the Southern Historical Collection, and a catalogue and staff room occupying the new second floor east wing.

When the addition is completed, book capacity and reading room space, in other words, total library facilities, will be doubly increased. Every book in the building will be moved into the 1,000,000 capacity building. This includes 565,000 volumes, 100,000 of them boxed now located in hallways, 50,000 maps, and 2,000,- (See LIBRARY, Page 11)

Ken Penegar Elected New Interim President

(Special to The Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, Dec. 1.—Ken Penegar, chairman of the UNC delegation to the 15th annual North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly, became the president of the 1951-52 Interim Council in an uncontested election yesterday.

The election by acclamation came during the joint session of the mock General Assembly being held in the Capitol building in Raleigh this weekend. Elected as Secretary-treasurer of the council was Howard Carter of Duke, who edged out a Meredith College candidate for the post.

Penegar had become chairman of the delegation when John Schorrenberg resigned from the post upon his election to the speakership of the House of Representatives.

The Carolina delegation gained on one and a half of the three bills taken to Raleigh for presentation. One resolution, urging unlimited warfare in Korea in accord with General McArthur's policies, was withdrawn at the request of the delegation by the calendar committee. The delegation had voted in caucus to request withdrawal of the bill in order to allow room for bills from colleges unrepresented on the calendar.

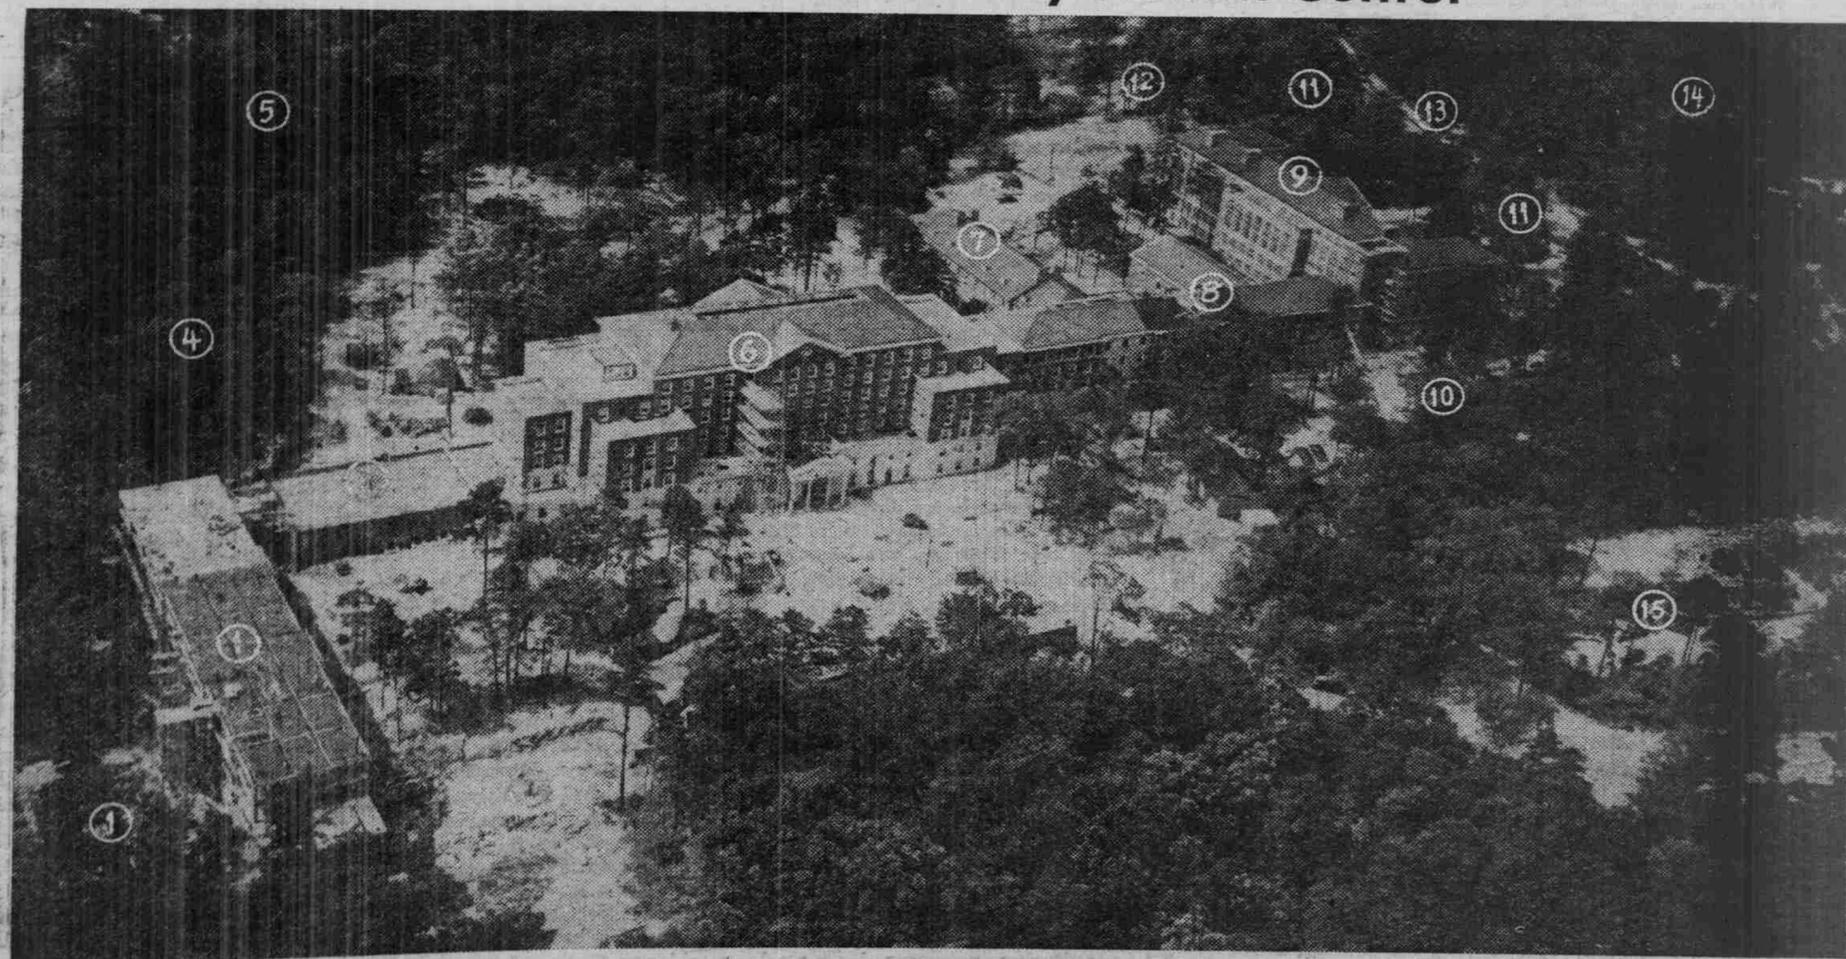

A UNC omnibus bill for "the betterment of general welfare in the state of North Carolina" was considered part by part. Of the four parts, two concerning birth control were passed by both houses. The other two parts which would have legalized gambling and prostitution in the state, were defeated in both houses. This bill was acted upon after what was (See LEGISLATURE, Page 11)

Symphony Concert Set For Tonight

A varied program of music will be presented tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall by the University Symphony Orchestra. The orchestra will play Francois Couperin's Overture and Allegro, and Brahms' "Variation on a Theme by Haydn" as well as two modern works, "The Walk to the Paradise Garden, by Delius and "Symphony 5 1/2" by Don Gillis.

Symphony 5 1/2 is a "symphony for fun." The music is based, according to the composer, on idiomatic devices found in jazz and other folk sources indigenous to the American musical scene. The result is music in rare good humor, which through its brilliant orchestration and subtle rhythms, has danced its way into amazing popularity. The composer, Don Gillis, was born in Cameron, Missouri, in 1912 and is now on the production staff of NBC in New York, producing the NBC Symphony broadcasts with Arturo Toscanini and other world-famed conductors.
