

Grade Qualification Constitutional - SC

It is within the student constitution to require a candidate to meet certain academic requirements to be eligible for office, the Student council has ruled.

In a three-page decision handed down over the weekend on the case of Bob Pace, the council also disavowed the strict legal identification of student with state or federal government. This answered a question students have been arguing for years: Could they appeal a case on a legal hitch involving the state or federal constitutions.

Pace appealed to the council after his name was kept off the official ballot for the presidency. He filed as an independent for the April 9 election but did not meet the elections requirement which specifies a student must have an overall "C" average and 40 hours of credit for the past three quarters. He challenged it as unconstitutional.

Pace had not said whether he would appeal further.

Follow significant quotes from the decision, written by Chairman Larry Botto: "It is impossible to entirely apply the provisions and interpretations of the federal and North Carolina constitutions to our student government system and the student constitution. Student government is primarily an educational system whose existence is permitted by those governed, the students, but also by the University.

"In contrast to the government established at the state and national level and whose authority is derived from the consent of (See COUNCIL, Page 3)

In keeping with the Grail's split membership between fraternity and non-fraternity men, seven fraternity and six non-fraternity students were chosen as knights of the Grail.

Selection of members is based on character, personal integrity, and service to the campus.

Nobody But Nobody Is At Meeting

by Rolfe Neill
The caretaker, 77 other people, and husky-voiced echoes were the only things in Memorial hall last night as candidates spoke who will hold down the most important jobs on campus next year.

Although it was advertised as an open meeting for the student body, probably not as many as did what have turned out had it not been for the compulsory meeting for all candidates which preceded at 7 o'clock.

In 1949, 500 people showed up; in 1950, 250; in 1951, 150; and now in 1952, 77.

7:31 p.m.: 78 people.

First on the agenda were the presidential candidates, Ken Barton (SP) and Ham Horton (UP). Barton charged Horton with a "negative campaign." Horton answered that "half of Barton's speech was negative."

7:43: No. 79 came in.

The talks given by the candidates for the vice presidency were about the same things they've been saying in the dorm discussions.

Julian Mason (SP) called for putting the Legislature "back into the hands of the students." Ted Frankel (Ind.) asserted that the students need an independent to run the Legislature, unhampered by party affiliations. Jim McLeod (UP) suggested setting up a three-man Legislature public relations committee to acquaint the students with the body's proceedings.

Ed Gross (UP), running for the job of secretary-treasurer, listed three platform planks: 1. To fight a raise in the block fees; 2. To investigate the use of Book Exchange profits, and 3. Seek to establish a Lenoir hall check-cashing service.

8:03: Nos. 79, 78, 77, 76, 75, 74, and 73 left.

But Winners Are Second University Is Winner Of Southern Debate Meet

Four University debaters won second place for themselves but first place for UNC this weekend at the All-Southern Intercollegiate Debate tournament at Agnes Scott college in Atlanta.

Ken Myers and Bob Evans upheld the negative side of the question, "Resolved: that the federal government should adopt a permanent program of wage and price control." Bob Clampitt and Lacy Thornberg debated the affirmative of the same question.

Evans and Myers talked themselves into the finals after the first day of debating, Friday, while Clampitt and Thorn-berg had the lead in their rounds from the first. The latter pair won all seven rounds of debate.

At the banquet Saturday night the four Carolina men received certificates and trophies. They also were awarded highest honors in team competition.

Because UNC had two teams in top positions, the school placed first in the tournament, however, only individual awards were given.

The Debate council thanked James Parrish and the Dept. of Business Administration for help in preparing for the tournament.

Three Plays Tonight

By Chuck Kellogg

Tonight at 7:30 in the Playmakers Theater, three new one-act plays will have their premiere performance. There is no charge for admission, and there will be a repeat performance tomorrow night at the same time.

Lynn Neill from Roanoke, Va., authored the first script, "The Overture." It is the story of a young romance. Miss Neill is a graduate student who previously worked with the drama group at Hollins college and with the Patchwork Players, a summer theater troupe. She also attended the Egri School of Writing in New York City, where she held a student assistantship. She worked as an actress with the Washington, D.C., branch of the Theater Wing.

"Hold on to Darkness," second on the program, was written by A. Frank Moore from Thomasville, S. C. Moore is a special student at the University, and has served as fiction editor and associate editor of the Carolina Quarterly. This will be the first stage production of one of his plays, although he has published fiction short stories in various magazines.

The final play of the evening will be Louise Lamont's light comedy, "Tumpkins Tarries." She is perhaps better known to Playmaker fans as an actress for her fine performances in "Rain," "The Little Foxes," and "I Remember Mama."

Before working with the University group, Miss Lamont was a professional actress, playing with such stars of the American theater as Gregory Peck, Tallulah Bankhead, and Cameron Mitchell.

Immediately following the presentation of each script, there will be an open discussion on the script. The audience is invited to take an active part, and express their ideas freely.

Pi Deltas

Pi Delta Phi will hold its weekly supper meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the upstairs dining room of Lenoir hall. All those wishing to speak French are invited.
