

Local Food Store Charged For Selling Ungraded Veal

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL
RALEIGH, April 11—Fowler Food stores of Chapel Hill and Durham have been charged with selling 20,000 pounds of ungraded veal and failing to keep required records.

Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes yesterday ordered the stores to show in Federal court why they should not be restrained from further business.

Director James F. Latham of the Office of Price Stabilization said Judge Hayes' order was returnable in Greensboro Federal Court on April 18.

Latham said agents visited the stores on March 28. Co-owner Robert Fowler, Latham said, told agents "that he bought veal in that area and paid for it by check and sold it to his customers without the same having been graded or grade marked, and that he had not kept any records of transactions except his check stub."

In Chapel Hill, the manager of Fowler's West Franklin street store told The Daily Tar Heel that he knew nothing about it, "only what I've read in the papers."

Nash To Give Religion Talks

Dr. Arnold Nash, chairman of the religion department, who has just returned from a conference in Europe, will deliver a series of four lectures on the Ecumenical Movement beginning Monday.

The lectures will be delivered on successive Monday evenings at 8:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

In his first talk Nash will speak on "The Birth of the Ecumenical Movement."

The series is being sponsored by the Inter-faith council, a group composed of student representatives from each of the major religious groups here. Chief purpose of the council is "The deepening and strengthening of personal religious living through insight and understanding of one's religious faith."

In the lectures Dr. Nash will discuss, among other questions, the relevance of the Ecumenical Movement to religious life in America; the Church in the struggle between the East and West; recent movements of thought in Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy; and the growing influence of laymen and women within the councils of the Ecumenical Movement.

Nash recently attended a ecumenical conference in Switzerland on the relations among theology, psychiatry, and psychology. Since 1934, when he began his association with the World Student Christian Federation, he has been active in the ecumenical movement. In 1937 he was vice-chairman of the youth section of the Oxford Conference on "Church, Community and State."

Easter Egg Hunt

Fifty happy orphans spent a sunny Good Friday afternoon yesterday searching the front lawn of the Monogram club for nests of multi-colored Easter Eggs.

The boys of the Monogram club, together with Pi Beta Phi sorority sisters, entertained youngsters ranging in age from six to nine from the Methodist orphanage in Raleigh. After an hour hunt among the rocks, trees, and bushes facing Battle park, the youthful searchers and their hosts headed for the Monogram clubroom for refreshments and prizes.

Tryouts Set For New Play

Tryouts for "House Holds," the final full-length student production of the Playmakers' season, will be held at the Playmakers Theatre this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Everyone is eligible to audition.

"House Holds" is written by Gene Graves, a graduate student from San Diego, Cal., and is scheduled for two performances on May 1 and 2. It is a serious study of domestic problems within a certain household, and will be directed by Elmer Oettinger, Wilson.

There are many fine roles for both men and women, and now is the time for all those who have been intending to take part in Playmaker productions to actually do so. The play is unusually well written, the director is a man of wide experience, and so the cast members will shine in the best possible light.

Math Talk Set

Bertram M. Drucker an Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies fellow, will speak to the Mathematics Seminar at 4 p.m. next Wednesday in Phillips hall.

His subject will be "Numerical Integration with reference to high-speed digital computers." Mr. Drucker is a former instructor in mathematics, psychological statistics, and social statistics in the University.

Miss Bonowitz said Smith and Carr dormitories will be for undergraduates only next year. Each houses approximately 120 students. Miss Bonowitz complimented the Legislature for its support of the orientation program. Choir To Sing Messiah Parts Handel's "Messiah," parts two and three, will be sung by the choir of the Presbyterian church on Easter Monday in Mill hall at 8:30 p. m. The choir will be assisted by an instrumental ensemble of strings, harpsichord and organ.

Soloists will be Margaret Stanback, soprano; May Marshbands, contralto; William Whitesides, tenor; and Edgar vom Lehn, baritone. Thomas Nichols is the director.

This is perhaps the first uncut performance of these portions of the Messiah to be presented in the Chapel Hill area.

Not Same

The "Restrepo Ovidio" of Colombia, South America, fined for drunk driving here, is a State college freshman and is not to be confused with a coed on campus with part of the same name.

In fact, a check with State college authorities last night revealed it's not "Restrepo Ovidio," but T. O. Restrepo. Restrepo was assessed $100 and court costs in Tuesday's session of Chapel Hill Recorder's court.

Polgar Show Is Described As 'Hilarious, New, Unusual'

By Walt Ernst

Dr. Franz J. Polgar can indeed be called an originator and pioneer in the field of entertainment. He has created a new and unusual form of amusement by using such intriguing mental phenomena as memory, hypnosis, and mind-reading as the basis for all his programs. For the first time in his career he has brought his show, "Miracles of the Mind", to the American public. And a delighted and bemused audience it is!

Too often these mental phenomena have been misunderstood and abused, have fallen easy prey to charlatans. Through his hilarious demonstrations of the subjects of mind reading, hypnosis, and memory, Polgar not only gives his audience a genuine fun fest and an unforgettable evening of real merriment, but enlightens and informs at one and the same time.

Polgar appears minus a legendary turban and glass bowl, and he practically welcomes the "I'm from Missouri" reaction of so many of his audiences. And yet he has no difficulty getting volunteers for his various shows. Everybody is anxious to be in the show, eager to watch at close range what at first seems like blatant trickery—planters in the audience, signals to accomplices are some of the comments that only too often come up from the floor.

Polgar very good naturedly and with not a little bit of humor starts the show, and from that point the subjects and spectators soon find themselves basking in an atmosphere of real cheer, merriment, and wonder. Polgar has just as good a time!

He will be here next Tuesday at 8 p.m. for a Memorial hall appearance under the sponsorship of the Student Entertainment Committee.

KD's Took Trophy

Hell hath no fury like a sorority ignored.

The Daily Tar Heel gave the erroneous impression in a headline yesterday that the Chi Omega sorority had won the Sigma Chi derby. We meant simply what we said: "Chi O Wins Derby Crown," i.e., Miss Modern Venus.

However, we red-facedly note that Kappa Delta sorority won the derby itself by capturing the largest total of points. The KD's thus took the large trophy.

Herewith, our apologies.

Sisters Drop Big Brother Tradition

A pair of coeds whose brothers were old-time campus politicians failed to carry on in Wednesday's election.

Dot Lowenstein(SP) was defeated for her bid to the Legislature from the Women's Dorm district. She lost by nine votes. Her brother Al, now in Yale Law school, was a familiar sight on the campus political scene in the post-war years through 1949, and an SP wheelhorse.

Ann Mackie (SP) lost on the ticket which once put her brother into office as president. She lost by 10 votes for the six-month seat from Women's Town district. Brother Bill was president in 1949.

University Conducting Study On Education Problems

UNC is one of 11 colleges and universities in the nation selected to participate in a survey this month of students' present educational problems, vocational plans and views, and other important topics of the day, Chancellor Robert B. House announced today.

Another important objective of the survey is to assess the impact of the present emergency upon such attitudes and objectives, Chancellor House said.

The study, which is sponsored by the Carnegie Corporation of New York, is expected to produce a better understanding of student attitudes and goals.

Chancellor House said that he believes the study will provide educators with valuable information for assessing present accomplishments and planning future developments.

Other schools participating in the survey are Cornell, Fiske, Harvard, Wayne, Wesleyan and Yale Universities, Dartmouth College, and the Universities of Michigan, Texas and California at Los Angeles. Different types of institutions were chosen to provide a wide range of attitudes, it was pointed out.

The Cornell Social Science Center is coordinating the project.

Chancellor House said that this survey "should not be confused with the study which Dean Fred Weaver will initiate in the three units of the Consolidated University next fall, although the present inquiry should provide much helpful information for the broader study."

A questionnaire is being administered to a representative sample of the undergraduate student body. The Institute for Research in Social Science is taking care of all arrangements with Prof. Daniel G. Price in charge.
