Some Changes Made

Dick Herbert in the Raleigh News and Observer, concerning Wake Forest's 20-0 loss to Villanova Saturday.

"ABOUT THE POROUS quality of the anti-aircraft (the Wake Forest pass defense) Rogers (Deac coach Tom Rogers) was alarmed. 'We have to do something,' he admitted, 'and do it quick. Some changes have to be made. We weren't very good on pass defense last year and are worse this season. We work and work, but in every game we permit the opposition to get a man far into the clear.'

'The Wake Forest coach believes his big line can handle the running attacks of the opposition. He thought, with one exception, it did all right in this department against Villanova. 'Take away that 44-yard touchdown run by Filipski,' he said, 'and the line didn't do so badly.' . . .

'Offensively Rogers thought his team moved the ball well in the middle of the field but lacked passing finesse in scoring territory. Quarterback Sonny George was off on his marksmanship on long passes and had four intercepted. One of those wasn't his fault, though, for the ball struck the umpire on the back and bounded into the hands of a Villanova lineman. . . .

'Against the big Villanova line the Deacons couldn't break their backs into the clear for long runs. With the passing attack unable to produce big gains the Wake offense couldn't match the all-round striking power of the unbeaten. . . .

The Barger Bargain

Jack Horner in the Durham Morning Herald concerning Jerry Barger and the role he played in Duke's 33-7 victory over South Carolina Saturday.

"THE COCKY LITTLE fellow, who simply oozes confidence, promptly sparked the Blue Devils to three more touchdowns, scoring one himself on a brilliantly-executed option play which covered 18 yards.

'Barger is one of the best option play operators in college football today. Coach Murray says the kid is the best he has ever seen on the pitch-or-keep play.

'On this particular play, the quarterback dances down the line of scrimmage behind his defenders, fakes a pitch out to a teammate and keeps the ball himself.

'Barger exploded right through the middle of the South Carolina team for 18 yards and Duke's last touchdown. It was a honey.

'Besides doing a masterful ball-handling job, Barger reeled off 46 yards in 10 keep plays.

'It's mighty nice to know the Salisbury boy hasn't gone stale after hurting both legs, one last November and the other in early fall drills, and losing his starting position to Lutz.'

An Offensive Defensive

Smith Barrier discussing N. C. State's 28-6 win over Davidson Saturday with Wolfpack Coach Horace Hendrickson.

"HENDRICKSON ADDED: 'Our defense stopped them cold and won the ball game. That's the big difference in football today, the defense. It can give the offense the ball at midfield and a chance to score, or it can do like ours in two games . . . with our back to the goal and the whole distance of the field to move the ball. Against Davidson it was different. For three quarters they were able to do little with the ball.'

'Davidson got eight yards rushing the first half, made one first down in the second quarter, one in the third quarter.

"That defensive bunch did a great job,' the coach continued, 'and we had two freshmen in that backfield, too. Ted Kilyk was suppose to be our safety at the start, but he was hurt. He got in there Saturday and one play he tackled a man at the line of scrimmage and knocked himself out. He played no more. But I've got a special word for Harold Brown, a 22-year-old ex-serviceman from Lexington. He asked us if he could come out for the squad. That was last Thursday or so. He worked all week and was at defensive halfback. He made every tackle on the outside and intercepted two passes. Just a gift.'

THIS IS ONE OF the few times Maryland did wrong in its game with Georgia Saturday. Bernie Faloney (38) is going up in the air here to intercept a long Zeke Bratkowski pass to Gene White (57), but the ball bounced off his chest and fell incomplete. Maryland muzzled the Bulldogs, 37-0.—UP Telephoto.

Murals Re-Open Tomorrow With Fraternity Grid Play

The Intramural football season will begin tomorrow, after a weeks postponement due to the polio epidemic, with 10 games scheduled in the fraternity division.

Last night the Dorm Intramural Managers had a meeting and decided to begin the dorm season on Thursday afternoon. Both divisions are expecting another successful season, each having a large number of teams to participate in the popular sport.

The schedule is slated so that each team will play every other member of its league. As usual the top teams in the leagues will play in a tournament at the end of the season.

Two Patients Get Release At Infirmary

By Tom Peacock

The University announced yesterday that all athletics have been resumed and that the Carolina athletic situation is back to absolute normalcy.

The football team went through a hard practice with full uniform yesterday for the first time in almost two weeks. Intramurals and all other phases of athletics have been resumed.

Students Released

Two Carolina students that contracted the polio the cause for the shutdown of the athletic plant—have been released from the University infirmary. Bull Davidson, the first football player to be afflicted and the direct cause of the shutdown, will be released within the next three days.

The football team has been working out for an hour a day in sweat clothes, and has done much to improve its split-T formation. But the cancellation of both the Georgia and State games has deprived the Tar Heels of sorely needed game experience. Carolina hasn't played since it lost its opener to Texas, 28-7.

Tickets On Sale

Tickets for this Saturday's game with Wake Forest here in Chapel Hill are on sale at Woollen Gym. Now that the uncertainty of the situation is over, tickets for the Big Four grudge clash are expected to sell rapidly.

Carolina will be out to avenge a 39-7 licking that the Deacons handed it last year at Wake Forest. The Deacs have looked impressive in four games so far this year, but have won only one. Baylor squeezed past Wake Forest, 17-14, the Deacs beat William and Mary, tied Boston College, and rugged Villanova defeated Wake Forest, 20-0 Saturday.

The Tar Heels have a lot of kinks to iron out of their split-T, and hard scrimmage will be

Date Ducats

Approximately 1000 date tickets, which allow Carolina students to sit with imported dates in the student section, remain for the Wake Forest game here Saturday, Vernon Crook, ticket manager, said yesterday.

These tickets must be applied for at the ticket office in Woollen Gym by 4:30 p.m. Friday, Crook added. There will be no exchanges made Saturday morning.

Crook also advised students that Identification Cards will be checked at the student gates Saturday. Any students who do not have their ID cards now should make some arrangements for temporary identification.

strange to them after the 10-day layoff. The team should have a full head of steam by Wednesday, and then will start tapering off on Thursday.

The quarterback slot is still the big question mark on the team, with freshman Marshall Newman being the outstanding candidate at present. Newman went into the Texas game late in the fourth quarter and passed for the only Tar Heel touchdown. Charlie Motta, who ran first string in pre-season practice, was hurt for the Texas game but is in good shape now and will be ready to go.

Table Tennis Entries Open

Entries for the year's first table tennis tournament opened yesterday. Entries for the tourney, which is sponsored by SUAB, will be accepted until Oct. 17.
