

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publications Board of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where it is published daily, except Monday, examination and vacation periods, and during the official summer terms. Entered as second class matter at the post office in Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 3, 1879. Subscription rates mailed $4 per year, $1.50 per quarter, delivered $5 and $2.25 per quarter.

Interim Editorial Board: ROLFE NEILL, BEV BAYLOR, SUE BURRESS
Managing Editor: ROLFE NEILL
Business Manager: JIM SCHENCK
Sports Editor: BIFF ROBERTS

News Ed.: Jody Levey Soc. Ed.: Deenie Schoeppe
Sub. Mgr.: Carolyn Reichard Circ. Mgr.: Donald Ross
Asst. Sub. Mgr.: Delaine Bradsher Asst. Sots. Ed.: Tom Peacock
Natl. Adv. Mgr.: Wallace Prigden Adv. Mgr.: Ned Best

News Staff: Bob Slough, John Jamison, Punchy (Billy) Grimes, Louis Krasner, Jerry Reese, Tom Farramore, Alice Chapman, Dixon Wallace, Tony Burke, Jennie Lynn, Tish Rodman.
Sports Staff: Vardy Buckalew, Paul Cheney, Melvin Lang, Everett Parker, Charlie Dunn.
Society Staff: Peggy Jean Goode, Janie Bugg, Alice Hinds.
Advertising Staff: Buzz Shull, Joyce Jowdy, Judy Taylor.
Photographers: Connell Wright, Bill Stonestreet, Ruffin Woody.
Night Editor for this issue: Biff Roberts

Wages Of Education

Thinking of cutting that 8 o'clock class today? We don't mean to alarm you by waking you up to the facts this suddenly, but every hour you spend in class is worth $30.

This figure comes from a recent issue of the New York Times. It is based upon the extra income earned by those with a college education. They estimate that the college graduate averages between $5000 and $6000 annually as opposed to approximately $3000 earned by the noncollege man or woman.

Assuming that the average student spends about 2500 hours in class during his four years in college, and assuming that he can look forward to 40 years of employment after his graduation, one arrives at the value of one hour spent in class—approximately $30.

What this campus needs is a good five-cent class, or student compensation policies for the spendthrifts.

Five Minutes More

With unaccustomed vitriol we herewith launch our campaign against the handful of instructors who habitually overrun the fifty minutes allotted for a class session. The class is in their hands, they reason, until they see fit to dismiss it. However, the three or four minutes extra they take to bring the lecture to a polished close often means that several students will draw a tardy in the next class, particularly if the two classes are at opposite ends of the campus.

We do not advocate the removal of class bells in favor of starting guns; students should be expected to wait out the completion of a thought sequence.

But, logically, it is no more inconsiderate for a member of the class to come in a few minutes late than for the instructor to lecture over into the period intended for the changing of classes.

V For Veterans' Club

The Vets Club has been a veteran for a long time. Out of action since 1950, the club behind Lenoir Dining Hall has served as a foxhole for spiders and a storage room for furniture to be used in the new commerce buildings.

The club was closed because of lack of member support; the vets moved out and sold their equipment to the University.

Now, the battle cry has been raised by vets who want to start a campaign to drive out the spiders and move back in.

According to Col. F. C. Shepard, veterans adviser, the interest accumulating on the funds left by former vets is being awarded yearly to the Scabbard and Blade for the organization of a University Veterans Association.

With these things in mind, THE DAILY TAR HEEL would like to know whether or not the veterans on campus would like for the club to be opened again, and whether the money in the bank could serve as a starter fund for that purpose. Let us hear from you.

Al House Young Democrats

"To every action there is a contrary reaction." The typical Republican reaction to the Democratic campaign seems to be vindictive personal attacks on individuals. When they can find nothing in the records of Adlai Stevenson and John Sparkman, when they cannot dispute the facts, they assail persons who discuss the campaign. McCarthyism is their weapon, clean-up their defense, corruption their charge, but a consumptive thirst for office is their campaign.

Their's is the campaign based on emotion; their's is the campaign in which they ask you to vote for a label, "I like Ike," without thinking about the administration that will come with Ike. They ask you to disregard parties, at least until the election is over, and just vote for a single man. There is no such thing as a President separate and apart from his party. His party nominated him; his party will run the administration and control the patronage. A vote for Eisenhower is a vote for a Republican administration dominated by Robert A. Taft, Joe McCarthy, Bill Jenner and the GOP Old Guard who seem to have won ascendancy in the Republican campaign. A vote for Eisenhower is a vote for a Republican platform which does not guarantee to Agriculture 90% of parity, which rejects Roosevelt and the New Deal, and which would wreck a foreign policy designed to aid the Free World today to prevent an atomic war of tomorrow.

Dwight Eisenhower, the great General who helped execute that foreign policy has now turned against it and succumbed to the Taft-McArthur view on foreign policy. As Wayne Morse said: "the Eisenhower I supported for the nomination is not the Eisenhower who is dangling and dancing from campaign platforms at the end of political puppet strings being jerked by some of the most evil and reactionary forces in American politics."

General Eisenhower began his campaign to win the nomination as a great "crusade" to win from Taft and the Republican Old Guard. His great "crusade" ended with Taft as they "tinkled coffee cups on Morningside Heights and the great crusade became the great surrender." From that conference of Taft and Eisenhower at the love-seat at Columbia University came the "joint statement" which Taft admitted he dictated. Who has changed; who has won ascendancy in the Republican campaign? People who know Taft know that he hasn't changed. Taft, the cunning political craftsman and the Old Guard have control and that is the "dangerous and reactionary" force which Senator Morse fears.

But it is not the record of Taft alone that thinking Americans need to examine. How about the Republican record in Congress? Eighty per cent of the House Republicans voted against the extension of Social Security, 79% voted to cut conservation funds, 64% voted to cut flood control funds, 56% voted against the continuation of 90% parity for Agriculture, and 79% to end inflation controls. How about foreign policy? They voted against sending aid to South Korea in 1949, something designed to prevent the war that followed. They voted to send aid once the North Koreans attacked, but now they bitterly criticize our stand against Communism there. They voted against sending any aid at all—military, economic, or technical—to our allies to strengthen themselves against the threat of Communism. And yet they shout so much today about Communism.

The housing shortage at Michigan State college has its compensations. One of the dormitories there is now housing students of both sexes. Oldtime students are saying they "never had it so good."

Amsterdam students want to start their own gas station with the help of the Shell company. The station will be run exclusively by students. Amsterdam already has a student-run movie house, the Criterion, which has an excellent reputation.

"Feel Anything Yet?"

Drew Pearson

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — Republican leaders put all sorts of pressure on GOP Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon to keep him from bolting to Stevenson. Shortly before Morse issued his statement deserting the Republican ticket, Senator Fred Seaton of Nebraska, who has been close to Morse in the Senate, telephoned him from New York, inviting him to travel on the Eisenhower train. Morse declined.

For more than a month prior to this, however, a succession of Republican leaders, including ex-Governor Stassen of Minnesota, had come to see the Senator from Oregon. One of them dropped in on Morse just after Eisenhower had endorsed Senator Jenner in Indiana.

"The General didn't want to make that endorsement," he explained. "After he saw Jenner he came back to his hotel and said, 'That—I'd much rather have punched him in the nose.'"

This made Morse even less enthusiastic.

"That shows him up more than ever as a hypocrite," he exploded. "At the same time he said that, he also stood up and told the American people to vote for Jenner."

"He did the same thing at the surrender of Morningside Heights to Senator Taft."

"That was no surrender," replied the Eisenhower emissary. "That was arranged to save Taft's face."

"What!" exclaimed the Senator from Oregon. "Why Eisenhower wasn't even given the courtesy of being at the press conference where Taft announced the terms of the surrender."

The emissary argued that the General was merely trying to bring unity in the party. He said he had to appease some of the Old Guard and bring about a united front. "But," he continued, "You will be the man he'll call to the White House for consultation after he's elected."

"On the contrary," replied Morse, "If you read that Taft statement issued after the 'surrender,' you'll see that Eisenhower agreed not to discriminate against Taft people, and you know what that means. That means the Taft people will be running the party."

"I happen to have been the first Republican to come out for Eisenhower," Morse continued. "But this is not the Eisenhower I know. I can't be for this Eisenhower. Reach over and punch the cash register: 'No sale.'"

First efforts to keep Senator Morse in line occurred prior to Labor Day, when Eisenhower leaders wanted the Oregonian's help to swing the American Federation of Labor over to Eisenhower, or at least keep them from endorsing Stevenson. To this end, Governor Stassen, who wrote the General's speech delivered at the AF of L convention, came down to Washington and spent two and one-half hours with Morse. However, he made no headway.

"This man compromises with his principles," argued the Senator. "He has deserted the liberal wing of the Republican Party in order to get elected."

And that's what you did too, Harold."

Stassen passed over this reference to the fact that he was once leader of GOP liberals. He urged that Morse come to New York and sit on the platform with Eisenhower when he addressed the AFL. But Morse said no.

"That would just show that I was giving my blessing to something I didn't agree with," he replied. "It's too late for me to advise you on the General's speech anyway. I've just been invited by Bill Green to answer it."

At this, Stassen nearly jumped out of his chair. After he returned to New York, however, another Eisenhower emissary came to Washington to urge Morse not to differ with Eisenhower in the AFL speech he was to make the following day.

"This is the hardest job I ever had to do," said the emissary.

"I'll make it easy for you," replied Morse. "Go back and tell headquarters that I've agreed not to change a single line of my speech. I had planned to rewrite it and make it ten times tougher, but in view of your visit I won't change it."

The speech as written and later delivered, of course, was much tougher than Eisenhower leaders wanted.

Senator Morse's final decision to bolt the Republican Party was made after Eisenhower toured New Jersey.

"When I read those speeches in New Jersey," Morse explained to friends, "and saw the Gen-

The You In U.N.

More than a wish, more than a pretty ideal of well meaning philosophers, the United Nations is a going concern. It is six years old. It has not attained permanent world peace, or freed every part of the world from hunger, or accomplished perfect international understanding—not in six years. But in this time it has taken longer steps toward the realization of these aims than any other agency in the history of mankind.

In Palestine, Kashmir, Indonesia, Iran, Syria, Lebanon, Berlin, Greece and Korea—wherever international conflict has threatened the peace of the world the United Nations has explored every method for preventing war: by active mediation; by orders to stop fighting; by persuading disputing nations to negotiate directly and finally, in the case of Korea, by calling upon the armed forces of its member states to combine and halt an aggressor. This great and growing congress of nations has fought flood, famine and sickness. It has sent missions of experts around the globe to provide technical assistance to countries that needed it. It has taken steps to curtail illegal production and distribution of narcotics. It has sent food and relief to distressed children. Its charter provides the best hope for future world-wide unity of nations and people.

The United Nations is now costing each American about sixty cents a year. Do you think it's worth the money? It needs your sixty cents. But, above all else, it needs your faith. Believe in it with all your heart. Work for it, give to it. Nothing will repay you more. The health and progress and peace of the world are the richest dividends you can reap. No other dividends are worth anything without these.

Contributed by Oscar Hammerstein II to the National Citizens' Committee for United Nations Day.

eral's claim that he hadn't deserted his principles, I couldn't stand it any longer. I told my wife I was going to sleep on it, then get up next morning and take myself completely out of the political picture. Next morning I felt the same way I did the night before.

"It's political suicide, I know," concluded Morse, "but I've got to live with myself no matter who's elected."

GOP National Chairman Arthur Summerfield blinked his eyes, then grinned broadly when an employee of the Hotel Washington needed him at a Republican rally:

"Better be careful. You're in enemy territory. This hotel is a stronghold of good Democrats. The help around here is solidly for Stevenson."

"I'll bet one or two drinks would change your minds," countered Summerfield.

The hotel employee, who was about to go off duty, was almost ready to test out Summerfield's theory until he learned that cider was the only beverage being served at the rally.

CROSSWORD - - - By Eugene Sheffer

- HORIZONTAL
- 1. gone by
  - 5. sister of Ares
  - 9. legal science
  - 12. poker stake
  - 13. Finnish poem
  - 14. palm leaf
  - 15. appearance
  - 16. internal
  - 18. olfactory organ
  - 20. effaced
  - 21. mother-of-pearl
  - 23. formerly
  - 24. bearded
  - 26. cicatrix
  - 28. wire measure
  - 31. entertain
  - 33. Anglo-Saxon money
  - 34. otherwise
  - 36. small, speckled herons
  - 38. French coins
  - 40. hurry off
  - 41. assault
  - 44. distress
  - 45. heap together
- VERTICAL
- 2. blackbird
  - 3. pattern sheets
  - 4. singing voices
  - 5. city in Pennsylvania
  - 6. go swiftly
  - 7. concern
  - 8. foretellers
  - 9. feminine name
  - 10. plant of lily family
  - 11. custody
  - 17. rodents
  - 19. bristle
  - 21. title
  - 22. accessory
  - 25. walk about
  - 27. crown
  - 28. river in Italy
  - 29. grate
  - 32. feminine name
  - 35. Jacob's brother
  - 37. Armenian town
  - 39. lubricated
  - 41. high cards
  - 42. positive
  - 43. small merganser
  - 44. await adjustment
  - 46. pedal digit
  - 48. distress signal
  - 49. high explosive (abbr.)
- Answer to yesterday's puzzle:
COMA ASPS FOR AVAS LIRA ONE
BANS PROVINCE
TUB EVERTED
SPIRES IDO
TALENTED NEBO
ELL TIRED DIG
PEAL MINUTIAE
ECU TSETSE
MARSALA TRI
ARISTATE COAT
TIN ETON ENTE
SAD REND TSIN
- Average time of solution: 25 minutes.
Distributed by King Features Syndicate