

Tar Heels Still Winless After Game With Notre Dame

Irish Backs Are Too Much For Overpowered Defense

 til the final minutes of the second period with neither team able to do much with the ball. Most of the half was played near mid field with Notre Dame having somewhat the better of the play but still unable to get the ball deep into Carolina territory.

But then with only a few minutes left in the half, the Irish applied the heart breaker. A Wallace punt out of bounds had given Notre Dame the ball on its own 25.

After Dan Mainer had spilled alternate quarterback Ralph Guglielmi back to the 21, the home team began to move.

With Guglielmi's passing leading the way, Notre Dame moved to the Carolina 34 yard line in eight plays. After an offside penalty had set them back to the 39 the Irish renewed the march.

Guglielmi hit Heap on the 20 yard line and the Notre Dame halfback spun away from two tacklers and stumbled to the 10. Then the chunky quarterback ran to his left, spotted big Art Hunter in the end zone, and let the ball fly. Hunter made a diving catch to haul the ball in for the TD.

Arrix also made his second try good and with just 16 seconds remaining the Irish had clinched a 14-7 half time lead.

Carolina made the mistake of coming out one play too early in the second half. Williams kicked to open the period and Heap grabbed the ball on his own 16. Cutting to the east side-line, Heap outran the Carolina team 84 yards for a touchdown. Only 10 seconds had elapsed in the half.

Arrix made good again and it was 21-7, Notre Dame.

The Tar Heels looked as though they might pull the same stunt which had carried them to their first period score. After taking the kickoff, Newman passed to Keller on the Carolina 36. A long pass to Adler carried the ball to the Notre Dame 20 and perked up the few Carolina fans in the stadium but a penalty on first play of the final period and returned it to the Carolina 40. Reynolds cracked to the 30 and two more plays brought another first down on the 15. After a penalty had dropped the Irish back to the 20, McHugh took a handoff and sliced through the line 20 yards for the last Notre Dame score. Arrix's kick made it 34-7.

The second and final Carolina score came in the same fashion as the first. Lattner lost a Wallace punt in the sun and it bobbed off his shoulder into the arms of Bill Kirkman.

With the ball on the 16, Newman aimed at Ken Keller but missed. On the next play, however, the Carolina quarterback hit Benny Walsler, standing on the one, and he stepped over for the score. Adler made good again, keeping his record perfect for the year and that ended the scoring, 34-14.

The rest of the game found open substitution and neither team was able to move with consistency. The Irish, in substituting, were penalized frequently for delaying the game and their penalties added greatly to their final total of 140 yards.

Carolina lost but one fumble all afternoon, a great come down from last week's game in which the Tar Heels lost six to Wake Forest. But the team was still unable to match the Irish in strength. The Carolina offense was a little better than before, but the Notre Dame attack was still even better than that.

Opportunities in Optometry

Optometry is a profession offering special advantages to ambitious young men and women. Its scope is constantly expanding. Eighty per cent of the Nation's millions depend upon the Doctor of Optometry and his professional skill in conserving vision. There is a shortage of optometrists in many States.

The Doctor of Optometry possesses the dignity of being a professional man. He renders an essential service to the health and well-being of his community. Substantial financial rewards are obtainable almost from the beginning of his practice.

U. S. Department of Defense and Selective Service grant optometry students the same consideration accorded medical students.

The Doctor of Optometry degree can be earned in three college years as a student having sixty or more semester hours of Liberal Arts credits. Such students will be admitted at mid-year by Chicago College of Optometry.

Chicago College of Optometry is centrally located in the heart of the world's greatest center for teaching in the healing arts. It is nationally accredited and is splendidly equipped. Clinical facilities are unsurpassed.

Soccer Team Takes Trip Tomorrow

The University of North Carolina soccer team, fresh from a good 3-2 victory over Virginia last week, take to the highways tomorrow and Tuesday for an invasion of Virginia.

The Tar Heels face Roanoke College in Salem on Monday and travel over to Lexington, Va., on Tuesday to meet Washington and Lee. The Generals have a strong team, while the Tar Heels will be favored over the Salem squad.

Coach Alan Moore's team opened the campaign two weeks ago with a 1-0 defeat from N. C. State, but rebounded to take the Cavalier match. Renny Randolph, a local boy with no previous soccer experience, has paced the Tar Heels with superlative play.

Rawleigh Tremain, Gerry Russell, Dave Cole, Barry Kalb, Tommy Hopkins, Harry Pawlik, Ben Tison, Don Gladstone, Lou Pateavours, Drew Patterson and Ronnie Younts have been other standouts.

The Tar Heels return here for a practice match with the Cherry Point Marines next Monday.
