

Tar Babies Play William & Mary In Home Opener

Down In Front

By Biff Roberts

Fixers No Scholars

IT LOOKS AS IF the smart boys never learn. With all the publicity and scandal which arose from the basketball bribes which finally got taken out for an airing last winter, you'd think the gamblers would hibernate, at least until the corps of Kefauver layed down that clean-sweeping broom.

But wire reports yesterday brought out the fact that players from the University of Maryland had been offered up to $1,400 to keep the score down in their game with LSU last weekend. The Terps were favored by 21 points and the student who approached quarterback Jack Scorbath, center Tom Cosgrove, and Frank Navarro, wanted to keep the point spread 20 points or under. The trio reported the bribe to co-captain Ed Fullerton, who in turn told athletic director and football coach, Jim Tatum. Then the Maryland team went out and trounced LSU, 34-6, a margin of 28 points.

A point has been brought out that perhaps it was the work of, as Tatum put it, "just a young punk showing off." But $1,400 is a good bit of money for a "punk" student to be flipping around so lightly. There had to be something else behind it. But on the other hand, it seems rather silly for the smart boys to try anything of the kind with the heat of the cage fixes still warming the nation.

Crime Shouldn't Pay

REGARDLESS OF WHETHER it is a local setup, involving this lone student and perhaps two or three cohorts, or whether it is another fix involving a more national setup, the penalty that is imposed on the offenders can't be too stiff. To me, one of the most disgusting newspaper pictures ever printed was one of the fat Mr. Solazzo, who was an important cog in the basketball fixes, being taken into court—apparently unperturbed by the fact that he had help wreck the lives of a dozen boys. I don't think I would get an argument when I say that most college students feel the financial pinch right often during the year. The fixers take advantage of this lack of funds and capitalize. Too often the players, seeing only the green in front of them and not the black circumstances which may result from the cutting down of the point spread, take the bribes, spend the money, and then are forced to battle with their consciences the rest of their lives.

The three Maryland players did a commendable thing in turning down the money and reporting the attempted fix. Center Cosgrove could have benefitted especially, for he was offered $1,000 for himself. Now that they have the go-between in the case, the police will evidently round up the rest of the crew, whether it be just students or a larger ring. And whatever penalty is imposed can't be too heavy. The penalty the fixers place on boys who are talked into taking the money for lowering the point spread is far greater than any jail sentence they may receive.

Here We Go Again

WE'RE OFF AGAIN tomorrow for our second game in a row away from home, leaving with the main hope that this fourth game, down in Knoxville, Tennessee, can produce better results than our three other attempts at winning a game this season have. From the reports of things and looking at the record Tennessee has compiled so far, it looks as though we're in for another tough time of it.

The Volunteers have a rugged defensive line, one which has allowed but three touchdowns in five games. They've lost but one game, that to Duke, 7-0, earlier in the season at Durham. It doesn't look as if our running offense, unless we can get the pitchouts working, will get us much ground against their rugged line. But don't give up hope. We have a chance against the Vols, and that chance may come on the arm of Marshall Newman. The Tennessee pass defense is far from perfect having allowed 26 completions out of 63 tries by the opposition for a completion average of 41.2. If Newman, who has passed for three of Carolina's four touchdowns, can hit his receivers, then the 20 points which the smart boys are giving us won't mean much.

Then, too, there's no reason why our running game can't lend a hand. The Vols have given up an average of 160 yards a game on the ground. We seemed to have learned the value of the pitchout against Notre Dame last weekend and those pitchouts can be of great value against the Volunteers. Then you have to consider that the Volunteers have played Chattanooga and Wofford, and a mediocre Mississippi State in compiling their offensive and defensive records. It's not hard to look good against competition like that.

So take off that coon skin hat and put away that hawg rifle. We might get over the mountains yet.

Harriers Meet Tennessee In Race Tomorrow Morning

The North Carolina cross country team, shut out in its opener against Maryland last week, will be out to break into the win column tomorrow against Tennessee at 10 a.m. in Knoxville.

The team lost two weeks of practice early in the season and was out of shape when it met the Terps, but it is getting closer to top shape every day.

Bobby Barden, freshman sensation who led the harriers last year, is still out because of after effects from a light seige of polio. Barden is expected to begin working out some time next week, but will not be able to run against the Vols.

Morris Osborne has turned in the best performances for the Tar Heels so far this year, leading the Carolina aggregation in the Maryland meet. Osborne heads a young but promising team, that should improve greatly over the season.

Cross country coach Dale Ranson was disappointed at the showing of the Tar Heels last week, but was by no means dismayed, and is hoping for the best tomorrow. Other outstanding team members are Bob Webb, Bill Higgins, Al Marx, Boyd Newman, Ed Vogel, and Pete McGee.

Jayvees Go After Fourth Straight Win Of Season

By Melvin Lang

Carolina's undefeated junior varsity makes its home debut here this afternoon as it goes up against the jayvees from William and Mary. Kickoff time for the contest is scheduled for 3:00 p.m. in Kenan Stadium.

With a few exceptions, the Tar Babies' first three games will be in the opening lineups against the Virginians this afternoon. Back George Wallin and end Will Alexander, regulars on the squad up until the Notre Dame game, have been promoted to the varsity and will travel to Knoxville for the Carolina-Tennessee clash.

Leading the split-T attack for the Carolina jayvees, who have now won eight straight contests over the last two seasons, will be quarterback Ed Laughlin. Ernie Liberati, a part-time varsity performer, will back up Laughlin at the under-center spot. This combination has the newly installed formation working to perfection so far this season.

Worrell To Play

Coach Ted Hazelwood will probably round out his starting offensive backfield with halves Glo Worrell and Billy Hawkes, and Billy Joe Johnson at the full-back post. Worrell has been one of the most consistent ground gainers all year, while he and Hawkes have paced the team scoring.

Johnson scored the initial touchdown last Friday night as Carolina edged Wake Forest, 13-7, in Burlington. Halfback Stan Porginski and fullback Nick Marcupulos will be ready to go in, giving the offensive backfield plenty of reserve strength.

The offensive line will have Van Weatherspoon and Bob Lee at the terminals, and Ralph Beaver and Ray Crahan at the tackles. Starting guards will be Bill Giles and Tom Maultsby, and Bill Koman will handle the center duties.

Weatherspoon is the leading target for Liberati and Laughlin's passes. The big fellow hauled in a toss from Liberati to score the clincher against Wake Forest, and also scored on a pass against Virginia.

Rugged Line

The rugged defensive line has been one of the strong points of the talent-loaded Tar Babies all season, with such standouts as ends Norman Lane and Bill King, tackles Don McCormick and Dick Frucci. Guards Barry Pruss and Bill Prothro team to make the center of the line almost unmovable for opposing teams. Paul Reeves and Baxter Mangum have been outstanding as linebackers in the previous games, and will get another chance to show their talents against William and Mary.

Terry Lawrence and Charlie Poindexter at the halves, with Al Long at safety, take care of the passing attack for the opposing teams. Long is one of the fastest players on the squad, while Poindexter also handles the point after touchdown chores.

Little Known

Very little is known about the William and Mary squad, as the jayvee opposition is not scouted. On the basis of its all-winning record, Carolina will enter the game as a definite favorite to take its fourth victory of the year.

Students and faculty will be admitted to the contest upon presentation of their identification cards at gate two. Admission for the Wrestling coach Sam Barnes has called a meeting of all students interested in trying out for the team tomorrow morning from 9:30 - 12:30.

Experience is not necessary, Barnes said, and both varsity and freshman aspirants are asked to report.

Winston Comes From Behind To Win

Winston scored 12 points in the last half to come from behind and defeat Lewis 12-6 in the top four o'clock contest yesterday afternoon.

Lewis scored first on a neatly executed pass play which sent Charles Pittard into the end zone for the touchdown. The extra point was missed. Both teams were sparked by their defense for the remainder of the half.

Behind, Winston opened fast to score a quick touchdown, but missed a chance to go ahead when their try for the extra point failed. However midway of the last half Barry Pate slipped through the Lewis secondary to score the winning points for Winston.

Using a combination of good defense and a strong offense, Manley-1 edged Everett-1, 13-7, in a game that was close all the way. The winners staved off a late rally by Everett and then went on to score the winning touchdown with less than three minutes left in the game.

The winning tally for Manley was scored by Carl Gregory and the extra point was added by Bill Robinson. Back Bob Randall scored the only touchdown for Everett. Center Bill Roberson scored also for the winners in the first half.

In the defensive battle of the day, the Pi Lams lost to the Chi Psi-1 team, 1-0. The game was decided in a sudden death playoff after it ended 0-0 in regular time.

Both teams missed numerous opportunities to score during regular time as the defense stiffened each time the opposition neared its goal. The Chi Psi's had a chance to win the game in regular time but missed their big opportunity when the alert Pi Lamb secondary intercepted a pass.

With less than a minute to go in the game a Pi Lamb lineman blocked a kick to give his team possession of the ball on the Chi Psi 18 yard line. But this scoring chance was stopped when a wild pass was intercepted.

In the only other 4 o'clock game scheduled Alexander-1 scored a 1-0 forfeit victory over Graham Dormitory.

general public will be one dollar. In its previous contests, Carolina white-washed Fort Bragg, 7-0, slugged Virginia, 31-14, and edged past Wake Forest, 13-7.

Football Team Chooses Lackey, Walser Co-Captains Against Vols

By Tom Peacock

The North Carolina football team elected Dick Lackey of Shelby and Benny Walser of Lexington co-captains for tomorrow's game with Tennessee before finishing practice in Chapel Hill with a light workout yesterday.

Lackey has been a standout all year as left halfback on the defensive squad, and will direct the team while on defense, but Walser will be in the unique position of being offensive captain in the first game in which he starts.

Walser caught a touchdown pass for one of Carolina's two scores against Notre Dame last week, and has been notably glue-fingered in practice, but has never gotten the starting nod from coach Snively before as he is on the smallest side.

Stellar Play

The little end's stellar play both in practice and in the actual contests couldn't go unnoticed too long by either his teammates or his coaches, so he was voted co-captain by the team as soon as it was announced that he was a starter.

Lackey is still remembered by Tar Heels for his interception of a Maryland pass last year, and his subsequent 80-yard runback that almost resulted in breaking up the ball game. Lackey has been one of the most dependable of the Carolina defensive backs this year, and has already made long runbacks after interceptions.

The Tar Heels leave Chapel Hill today, taking off for Knoxville shortly after noon on a chartered plane. They will run through a brief workout upon reaching the Volunteers' field.

Tickets Left

Carolina will be a two touchdown underdog when it takes the field tomorrow at 2:00 for the game. The Vols started slow this year, but have improved with every game, while Carolina has yet to score a win in three contests. Tennessee's only blight is a 7-0 loss to mighty Duke.

Earlier in the week, a 30,000 ticket advance sale had been reported from Knoxville, but very few tickets for the game have been sold since then, especially here in Chapel Hill. Plenty tickets are available for the game in Knoxville, for supporters who wish to attend the game but were too late to purchase one here.

The Tar Heels' chances for an upset tomorrow will rest largely on the ability of the offensive unit to move the ball on a sustained drive. The four touchdowns that Carolina has scored this year all came on breaks, three on passes set up by fumbles, and the fourth was set up by a 70 yard off-tackle play.

The Carolina offense has improved steadily with each game, but Tennessee has one of the leading defenses in the country. The Vol defense held a high scoring Duke team to 7 points, blanked Wofford, and staved off Alabama to give Tennessee an upset victory.

The Vols defense is led by 239 pound tackle Doug Atkins, an outstanding candidate for All-America, and a host of experienced linemen schooled in the rough and ready style of Tennessee head coach General Bob Neyland.

Tennessee is paced on offense by Andy Kozar, standout in the Southeastern Conference at full-back for three years, and sophomore tailback Jimmy Wade. The Vols are the first team that Carolina has met this year to use the single wing.

Even Webster's New International Dictionary incorrectly uses the King James Version to illustrate that allege means "assert, without proof," according to Dean Weigle. The Revised Standard Version, going back to the early Greek texts, clears up the problem by substituting "proving" for "alleging."

"The Revised Standard Version is not a literary curiosity. It is the committee's hope that it will be used for worship in churches everywhere," Dean Weigle said.

One of the major points in the Protestant faith is that the word should be plain and simple. The new version states the record of Christ's life and work far more truly and clearly than the King James Version and for that reason, undergirds the Christian faith far better."

Dean Weigle has chaired the committee for the last 17 years. He served as dean of the Yale Divinity School from 1928 to 1949.
