Sun Goes Down Like Red Ball; Carnival Atmosphere Prevails

(The following article was left in the office of The Daily Tar Heel by, presumably, a member of the barbeque party. The anonymous writer's literary efforts hereby are reproduced in their entirety.—Ed.)

The sun went down behind the trees like a cold, red ball. The air tingled with frost and smelled of pungent, autumn smoke. Down at the edge of the woods behind Woollen Gym, more than 300 people warmly dressed and gay in spirit, assembled under a pumpkin-colored moon, already risen above the pines. The clock in the bell tower struck six against the darkening sky, and from somewhere came the aroma of something good to eat.

This was the big barbeque, staged as a special event by the School of Education Thursday evening to promote closer ties of fellowship between students and faculty. Part of the carnival atmosphere had been compromised by a last-minute change of plans by the committee, who had sniffed the late-October air and decided to move the festivities indoors to the gymnasium basement. Despite this concession to more civilized procedures, the barbeque developed into a most successful party, and probably a more comfortable one. Textbooks and studies were temporarily abandoned as undergraduates, graduates, faculty members, and wives and families, converged upon the scene, drawn by the delicious scents of barbecued pork and hush-puppies.

The committee in charge of entertainment went to work right after the last diners had had their fill at the long tables. Art Weiner, of the Physical Education department, served as master of ceremonies. There was a minimum of serious business. Both Art and Jules Medwin, who followed him, rocked the crowded room with jokes. This was topped immediately by a skit performed by Professors Gwynn, Plemmons, Peacock and Jamerson, under the direction of Medwin who produced four fetching ladies' hats as props.

Came next a slightly more serious note when a quartet of faculty men arose to render nostalgic barbershop harmony. The event was fraught with confusion when it was discovered that one of their baritones had left town; nevertheless, Professors Hurlburt, Tarbet and Parker, vowing later vengeance upon the departed member, carried on a very commendable performance, with each man carrying one and one third parts of the four-part harmony.

The most outstanding visitors at the affair were the 17 German school teachers, now at the University as observers. Called upon by Weiner to perform some of their favorite native ballads, this group of young men and women from the continent thrilled the gathering with several songs done in the incomparable German style.

The mood of the evening having swung from laughter to music, Miss Gay Hogan then took over to lead the crowd in group singing, which was the last event of the evening.

Other get-togethers of faculty and students are anticipated as a result of the success of the barbeque, according to Mrs. Maude Hollingsworth, chairman of the Faculty Student Activity Committee. Working with Mrs. Hollingsworth on this committee were Prof. W. H. Plemmons, S. M. Holton, W. W. Rabb, Doris Hutchinson, Martha Morgan, J. R. Skretting, and Donald Tarbet. Prof. Walter Rabb was in charge of food arrangements.

Education department students who worked to make the affair a success were Peggy Sears, Celia Lively, Chalmers Port, Margaret Dickinson, Art Weiner, Walter Hooper, Pat Cahoon, Jules Medwin, Herb Dowd, Ike Carr, and Bill Lahr.

Commenting on education in Pakistan, Adamjee said there are now numerous colleges and five universities in his country, although there is still only 14 per cent literacy there. Cricket and soccer are the national sports of this nation of 76 million inhabitants, he added.

Sreedharan told of India's social revolution which has resulted in the abolishment of the old caste system. Child marriage, once common in India, has now been outlawed, he said. "The social problems which are facing us today are almost solved."

Family life of India was discussed by Ramashandran, who said "our family is not a bundle of isolationists, it is a close group." The woman is the "queen bee" of this family group. "The woman of India is not a very timid girl," he explained, and then told of how the women had actually taken up arms in the past against India's enemies and fought them on the field of battle.

India's worst problems, he continued, have come since the achieving of independence. India's provinces were ruled by maharajas at this time, who sometimes took half of the income of a province for their own personal use. After independence, explained Ramashandran, much power was taken from them so that they are now more like governors.

Some interesting statistics given by Ramashandran placed India's population at 367 millions, of which 20 per cent were literate. India has 11 languages and 200 dialects.

CAROLINA CAROUSEL

By Deenie Schoeppe

Can't understand it. Must be that everyone's saving up the parties for next weekend and it ought to be a big 'un.

Oh yes. Happy Hallowe'en. We are having all kinds of Hallowe'en parties. Pi Kappa Phi's will have one at their house tonight as will the Theta Chi's.

Zeta Swain Stevenson of Halifax has just pinned Mary Jo Suiter of Roanoke Rapids.

While we're talking about Zeta's, the ADPi's at Dook entertained Zeta Psi's Wednesday night over there.

Latest pinning is that of coed Marcia Zachary, Salisbury, to Lambda Chi John Rendleman, also of Salisbury.

Alpha Gam pledge Joan Mathis has just become engaged to Claude Kennedy of Carthage, also her hometown.

Chi O's had dinner and a Hallowe'en party at the Legion Hut in honor of their pledges last night.

Tri Delt pledges had the first sorority pledge party of the season Wednesday and all other pledges (sorority, that is) were invited.

And the SAE's are having a party for the Tri Delt's Tuesday at the Carolina club following dinner at the house.

Lambda Chi's will have a cabin party tomorrow with the Duke chapter to celebrate their Homecoming.

With politics as the theme, the KA's will have a party for the KD's Wednesday night.

What mad romantic things the people on this campus think up to do. St. A's are having a coon hunt tonite for real. Something happened to the last one and it kind of fell through.

Deke's, pledges and dates had themselves a buffet supper and party Tuesday night at the Carolina club.

Chi O Carmen Oastler, Atlanta, is now wearing a beautiful diamond given to her by Dan Allison, Phi Delt from Sylva. They are to be married next summer.

Tri Delt's will honor their visiting district president, Mrs. Trammell Smith, Newton, and their national director, Mrs. W. P. Richardson, Chapel Hill, with a banquet Thursday evening at the Carolina Inn.

Pat Bohnenkamp, St. Louis, Mo., is the newly elected president of the ADPi pledge class. Other pledge officers include Alice Chapman, Welch, W. Va., Secretary-treasurer and Lynda Vestal, Liberty, N. C., social chairman. The pledges will be honored tomorrow with a coffee at the ADPi house from 4 to 6.

inghouse, Newton, vice-president; Jim Wiles, Hampton, Va., secretary; and Jack Little, Charlotte, treasurer.

New KA pledges are Bill Hurlley, Biloxi, Miss.; Phil Penninger, Concord; Pete Harris, Charlotte; and Bob Kirksey, Morganton.

The campus ought to be full of Tech and Emory students this weekend due to the Tech game in Durham. Chi Phi's are expecting lots of their brothers from down that way.

Beta's from Duke and Tech will be here to party with the local troops for the weekend too.

Can't accuse the Pi Lams of ever missing an opportunity for a party. Part of the chapter has gone to Tennessee and partied in Asheville on the way last night and will party there again tonight. Those who didn't make it to the game will have a party at Louis Bates' house in Greensboro tonight.

Sigma Chi's from Duke and Carolina will have a party at the Legion Hut after the Duke game today.

Thursday the Sigma Chi's will entertain the Chi O's. Announcement is made of the engagement of Joan Katz, New York City, to TEP Rick Levy of Jamaica, N. Y.

AKPsi's entertained their executive secretary-treasurer Wednesday with a party given at the home of one of the brothers.

An election party will be given by the AKPsi's Tuesday night. Think there'll be a few more of these given too.

Beat Tennessee, happy birthday Barbara Reed, and everybody come to the ZBT cocktail party after the Virginia game. With that we leave you.
