Dogpatch Doings On Campus Friday

It all began in 1937 in Al Capp's mythical town of Dogpatch—but next Friday Sadie Hawkins' day is coming to the University.

Plans released yesterday by the Sadie Hawkins' Day committee call for a foot race, a mass marriage ceremony and a dance in the Naval Armory.

Committee Chairman Jim Wilkinson said yesterday that Capp, creator of the Lil' Abner comic strip, had talked favorably about coming to Chapel Hill for the Sadie Hawkins Day event, but a Friday night television program forced him to decline the offer.

Capp suggested to NBC that they broadcast his television show from the University, but it was deemed impossible because the only outlet to New York is the Greensboro station which is an affiliate of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Wilkinson, in a telephone conversation with Capp on Saturday, suggested that the artist come anyway and then fly back for his program. Capp declined, however, saying that he is allergic to flying and does all his traveling by train.

Co-chairman for the program is Ann Bell. Other committee members are Toni Kelley, publicity; Nancy Horne, entertainment; Manning Muntzing, decorations; Peg Hall refreshments and Tom Watts, music.

Heavens At Night Topic At Morehead

Twice each year, Morehead Planetarium presents a performance entitled, "The Heavens Tonight."

The winter version of this presentation opened Tuesday, and includes the heavenly objects in the winter skies of North Carolina and neighboring states.

Presentations are given every night throughout the week, at 8:30; matinees on Saturday at 3 and on Sundays at 3 and 4 p.m. Special performances will be given at the convenience of groups composed of 100 or more persons.

"The Heavens Tonight" does not tax the visitors' imagination to visualize the heavenly subjects. Rather, many celestial companions are actually shown superimposed on the Planetarium sky as they appear through large telescopes. Images from great observatories such as Mount Palomar, Lick and Mount Wilson are used in the presentation. These include magnified views of Jupiter, Mars, the dark nebula near the galactic center, the Orion and Andromeda nebulae and "The Royal Family" of constellations: Cepheus, Cassiopeia, Andromeda, and Perseus. All will be visible, weather permitting, in North Carolina skies during the period embraced by this presentation: tonight through December 1st. All will be visible, regardless of weather, in the Planetarium skies for this same period.

Interesting photographs and current data included in this performance are presented for those who are acquainted with our universe. Basic facts of general astronomy are offered those who desire an introduction to the heavens tonight.
