—Vernon—

RALEIGH, March 2 (AP)— There is a crowd of about 8,000 expected Thursday afternoon and night in the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, and about 12,000 the following two nights.

Tickets are going fast for the tourney but are still on sale at Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh, according to Ed Storey, athletic pub-

—McGuire—

"I told Everett we would make every effort to beat him and still try to hang on to that ball when we play Thursday. And he said he still would use the press," said Frank. "So that's the way it is. I hope a fellow is allowed to blow his stack now and then, but I also hope he and I can be good friends especially if it means something to the over-all University. I think we will be."

licity director for the Coliseum.

Thursday afternoon at 2:00 Wake Forest meets South Carolina to start the tourney, followed by Maryland and Clemson at 4:00. Duke plays Virginia at 7:00 to start the evening round, and at 9:00 Carolina meets State.

The semi-finals will be held Friday night and the championship and a consolation game will be played Saturday night. Duke, number one in the conference standings at the end of the season and first seeded in the tourney, is favored, but State, Wake Forest and Maryland are all given a chance to take the tourney. The other teams in the conference, Carolina, South Carolina, Clemson, and Virginia, are given little hope of lasting.

Thomasville Plays Host To Foreign Delegation

Fifty foreign students of North Carolina colleges and universities spent last weekend in Thomasville visiting factories, homes of teachers, businessmen and ministers and discussing world political affairs. After entering the town in a car parade the group attended a community dinner and a concert given by the high school glee club. On Sunday the students of different faiths worshiped in the Baptist Church, whose minister greeted them with "We salute you with our hearts, not with military fanfare."

NYU Honor Students Now May Cur All They Wish

NEW YORK, March 2—New York University high-ranking seniors of the College of Arts and Sciences are now free to cut classes without penalty, faculty officials announced today.

Honor seniors will still be required to complete assignments and take exams, but it is felt that

—Hussey—

(Continued from page 3) did the best diving of his career in the semis to go in front of his teammate, Bud Williams, by 16 points and the closest man from another school by 30. Williams couldn't last in the finals and fell back, but Stump held on to take the win by 12.5 points.

The wait—as top man—from the morning session to the finals was about the toughest part of the meet, according to Hussey. "My hand was shaking like a leaf, and I never could settle down. I had a good lead, but that didn't matter." The 19-year-old Hussey hasn't reached his peak yet—in diving or with the Tar Heel.

the new rule extends a moral responsibility and freedom on the student's part and presents a challenge to the teacher to make his material and presentation dispensable.
