ACC Leading Tar Heels Scrap With No. 2' Pack Tonight

McGuire Looks For State To Use Press

Strategy Tilt at 8:15; Frosh Battle in Prelim

Carolina's Tar Heels will take a four-game winning streak and the lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference to the Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh tonight where they do bastle with the N. C. State Wolfpack, the nation's No. 2

Gametime will be 8:15 o clock, following a preliminary between the Tar Babies and the Wolfpack frosh. The prelim is to begin at 6:15.

With successive wins over Wake Forest, Virginia, South Carolina and Clemson, Carolina gained the top position in the ACC over the past week-end after building up a 6-1 conference record. State, having a 5-1 mark, ranks second .

The 'Pack is heavily favored tonight. Rumors yesterday said the team is better by anywhere from 15-30 points, but the margin will not be that large. UNC coach Frank McGuire said he expects the Wolfpack to employ a full-court press from the very start, in which case he will play a possession game, similar to the type used by Carolina in last season's ACC tournament and the recent Dixie Classic. McGuire said, "The possession game is our only chance against State. To run with them is sure Matmen Tackle defeat, because they are much better, man for man. I expect him (State mentor Everett Case) to press all the way."
