Hazel's Wrath Discussed In Law Review

Research on court decisions concerning insurance policy "windstorm" clauses as connected with Hurricane Hazel is one of the leading articles in the North Carolina Law Review, February issue, which has been published.

John L. Rendleman, Salisbury, a law student here and author of the article, has examined the existence of many court decisions and interpretations on the meaning of "windstorm" clauses, and his article deals with the subject in detail. He points out that recovery of windstorm loss hinges on whether the wind is the "proximate cause" of the loss or whether the damage by wind alone can be ascertained.

The North Carolina Law Review is a publication of the UNC School of Law.

The quarterly issue also includes a survey of North Carolina Supreme Court decisions for the 1954 spring term and an article by Wallace C. Murchison, attorney at law of Wilmington, on the income taxation of partnerships and partnership income under the new Federal Revenue Code.

Ceramic Group Has Exhibition

A collection of ceramic works, the results of a hobby carried on here by a group of Chapel Hill women, is now on display at Morehead Planetarium.

Included in the display are interesting ceramic ornaments, dishes, wall and mantle pieces, and chess men, which a class of some 25 Chapel Hillians have fashioned and baked during recent months.

The Chapel Hill Ceramics Group, organized in September of 1953, has Mrs. J. B. Scholes, a former student at New York State College of Ceramics, as teacher. The group now is faced with disbanding unless a replacement can be found for Mrs. Scholes, who will be leaving Chapel Hill this summer.
