

New Club Organized For Coed Journalists

By ANNE DRAKE
UNC has a new club. The Matrix society, for women majoring in journalism was organized Thursday night with the idea of becoming a chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, women's honorary journalism sorority, in the future.
Two Theta Sigma Phi alumnae, Mrs. Guion Johnson, graduate of the University of Missouri, and Mrs. William Caldwell, graduate of the University of Minnesota, helped the girls organize the Matrix Society. They will be alumnae advisors for the new club.
The group elected Dean Norval Neil Luxon, head of the UNC School of Journalism, for its faculty advisor.

Mrs. Johnson said that a chapter of Theta Sigma Phi would add prestige to the UNC School of Journalism. "Theta Sigma Phi is an honorary professional group with professional standards," said Mrs. Johnson.

Theta Sigma Phi has four types of members: alumnae, active, honorary members who have won a national reputation in journalism, and associate members who have distinguished themselves in journalism in their community or state.
Among the famous Theta Sigma Phis are Doris Fleson and Ines Robb.

Officers elected at the first meeting of the Matrix Society are: Joy Brown, president; Jackie Heathcock, vice president; Anne Drake, secretary; Mary Alys Voorhees, treasurer; and Nancy Suttle, keeper of the archives.

The Matrix Society plans to have three business and three professional meetings a semester. The professional meetings will feature talks and discussions by competent journalists.

The organizational meeting of the new society was held in the home of Dean and Mrs. Norval Neil Luxon on Mt. Bolus Road.

Congress Seeks Information Flow Increase

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An attempt to increase the flow of information from government agencies was launched today in both the Senate and House.

Sen. Hennings and Rep. Moss said they would ask Congress to tighten what they describe as purely a "housekeeping" law by adding these words:

"This section does not authorize withholding information from the public or limiting the availability of records to the public."

Moss repeated a previous charge that some agencies have exploited the law to hold back nonsecurity information to which the public is entitled.

ending a seven-month-long bus boycott.

The Tallahassee buses operated under an amendment to a city franchise ordinance authorizing drivers to assign passengers to numbered seats if necessary as a means of maintaining the segregation pattern.

US Surplus Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—(AP)—The U. S. announced yesterday a new plan to grant surplus farm commodities to needy countries so they can set up reserve stocks against famine or other emergencies.

The announcement was made by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, U.S. delegate to the 80-nation economic Committee of the U. N. General Assembly.

Humphrey said this aid would be granted for "reasonable and realistic programs" in keeping with the principle of avoiding "harmful interference with the normal patterns of production and international trade."

The US pledge came as an alternative to a plan for creation of a world food reserve, supplied by pledges by U.N. member nations. The United States opposes such a program.

Tass Hits US Plan

MOSCOW—(AP)—The Soviet news agency Tass yesterday called President Eisenhower's state of the union message "A frankly imperialistic program to impose US rule over the world."
"The President's words show that this world must be placed under control of the United States," the Tass dispatch from Washington said.

"Eisenhower, in fact, called for a speedup in the armaments race, while at the same time admitting the armed might of the United States is the greatest in history in peacetime."

The dispatch interpreted Eisenhower's call for closer cooperation with other western powers as a rallying cry to "such aggressive military blocs as NATO and SEATO."

"In the concluding part of his message, Eisenhower renewed his request for acceptance of his program for the Middle East, which, as is well known, carries the openly imperialistic aim of imposing US rule on that area," Tass added.

Magazine Has Article By Local Author

The December issue of the "North Carolina English Teacher," just published, features an article by Mrs. Doris Betts, Chapel Hill short story writer. Dr. E. H. Hartsell of Chapel Hill and U.N.C. is executive secretary of the association which sponsors the publication.

Mrs. Betts' article is one of three which grew out of a panel on creative writing held in August at Duke University.

OLD BOOK PRICES COME TUMBLING DOWN!

At the Intimate Bookshop, January is the traditional time for revising old book prices, and pal, how we have revised this year!

DOZENS OF BOOKS GO FROM $1.50 to 97c

We've combed the shelves for sleepers, and when we've found one, we've given it the chop!

OTHER DOZENS CUT FROM 97c To 72c

If you've been tempted to buy one of our 97c books, now's the time, pal. Most likely it's on the 72c shelf.

DOZENS MORE GO FROM 72c WAY DOWN TO 39c

During January, not only the regular 48c books, but the sleepers from the 72c shelf are yours for a mere 39c.

OTHER OLD BOOK PRICES DROP BY 75c to $1.00.

We've gone right through our old book stock, and whenever we found a book rooted to the shelf, we've applied the old shears where it hurts most. Had to, in fact, because there are a couple of libraries coming up, and we'll need room for them.

'Home-Made' Astronomy Instrument Is Devised

You'd be surprised at the number of astronomy "instruments" one can make with everyday things found about the home.

A Quaker Oats carton with a hole in the bottom large enough to accommodate a flashlight can be used to study the constellations in the night skies. Just perforate some black paper with the holes in the approximate positions of the stars in the constellations, use it as the lid and shine the flashlight through the bottom of the carton.

Bent coat hangers covered with black paper with bright thumbtacks representing the stars can also be used to study the constellations.

A flashlight, coat hanger, a rubber ball, and a fishing cork mounted on a piece of wood can demonstrate eclipses, and a light, tight corrugated box with an old lightbulb, a flashlight and a small ball can be used to demonstrate motions of the celestial bodies.

Those are only four of the numerous examples of models of astronomy "instruments" demonstrated daily in the Morehead Planetarium's January presentation of "1957 Celestial Preview." The models were made to demonstrate to children, especially Boy and Girl Scouts, things they themselves can make to further their January Scout theme "Look Skyward."

Although the current Planetarium show was tailored for children of Cub and Boy Scout ages and is playing to almost capacity houses daily, adults apparently are enjoying seeing what they can build or help their children to build to understand the marvels of the universe.

Therefore, reservations are desirable for the daytime performances at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Wednesdays and Thursdays, at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturdays, and 3 and 4 p.m. Sundays, because they are the shows children usually attend in numbers. The nightly 8:30 o'clock performances are not crowded.

Write In Courses Are Now Open

Correspondence courses are available to those students who will not attend school during the spring semester the Bureau of Correspondence said yesterday.

The University offers more than 100 correspondence courses from which a student may choose to earn degree credit and quality points.

Students may enroll at any time provided they are not attending regular University classes. Lessons assignments may be sent in at the students' convenience so long as no more than four are submitted in a seven day period although students are allowed 13 months in which to finish a course they may complete a three semester-hour course in a minimum of seven weeks. Two courses may be taken at one time.

Those interrupting their education to enter the armed services may acquire college credit while they serve their country by taking correspondence courses, the bureau said.

As much credit as 30 semester-hours may be earned by correspondence.

Complete information regarding correspondence courses may be obtained from the Bureau of Correspondence Instruction, Abernethy Hall. Student who will not be attending regular classes this spring may begin enrolling for courses after classes are over on Jan. 19.
