TAR HEELS ARE NATIONAL CHAMPIONS

Pressure Mounted Then Broke Loose

KANSAS CITY—(AP)—A wild uprising involving coaches and players broke out in the tension-racked game last night between UNC and Kansas. The fracas started when Wilt-The-Stilt Chamberlain, Kansas' 7-foot All-America star, and Carolina's Pete Brennan came in contact on the floor.

Legs Crushed

A Durham man had his legs crushed last night in an automobile accident in front of Chi Omega House during a mass demonstration which saw thousands of students and several hundred automobiles participating.

Benny Deaton, a student from Duke, was admitted into Memorial Hospital shortly after 1:00 a.m. for what was reported as multiple fractures of both legs.

Deaton was riding the front fender of a '49 Ford which crashed into the rear of a '56 Ford throwing him from the car and pinning him between.

Also admitted for treatment as a result of the wreck was a Mrs. Grotzkey of Durham.

Deaton gave his address as 110 Hyde Park Ave., Durham.

swapped words and were restrained by other plays from coming to blows.

Play was interrupted almost a minute while tournament officials, assisted by policemen, restored order. No blows were exchanged, merely words.

Kansas Coach Dick Harp rushed out on the floor. This brought Frank McGuire, North Carolina coach, rushing to the Kansas bench where he apparently challenged Harp's right to go onto the floor.

While the capacity crowd of 10,500 yelled, a crowd gathered around the Kansas bench. Reeves Peters, tournament director, and Dutch Lomborg, Kansas athletic director, who is chairman of the NCAA basketball committee, rushed in to calm the situation.

Uniformed police also dove into the highly-agitated crowd around the two teams and broke up the gathering.

The Tar Heels set some sort of a tournament record in using a total of six overtime sessions to win the championship. The nation's No. 1 team needed three

Special To The Daily Tar Heel

KANSAS CITY—North Carolina's Tar Heels proved they are the nation's No. 1 basketball team here last night.

They did it by beating Kansas and Wilt The Stilt Chamberlain, 54-53, in a triple-overtime battle that left 10,500 fans gasping after the hectic conclusion.

Joe Quigg, 6-9 center, who did a miraculous defensive job on Chamberlain, was directly responsible for Carolina's bringing home the National Collegiate basketball championship from this midwestern city.

It was Quigg's two free throws with six seconds to go in the final overtime that brought Carolina the championship. And it was Quigg's interception of a Kansas pass, intended for Chamberlain, that insured the dream victory.

The battle of titans was a fitting climax to the long NCAA grind. UNC was rated No. 1 in all the major polls with Kansas close behind in second place at the regular season's end. And when all the shouting of the NCAA title game was over, it was still Carolina No. 1.

Carolina won without their All-American ace, Lennie Rosenbluth. Rosenbluth fouled out with 1:45 to go in the regulation game, and was not available for the three overtimes. But his teammates proved up to the challenge.

Chamberlain got 23 points while Rosenbluth had 20 when he made his exit.

It was the second consecutive triple overtime game in as many nights for the Tar Heels. Friday night they whipped Michigan State, 74-70, in a semi-final test. Carolina initiated stalling tactics at the opening tipoff, and jumped to a 19-7 lead. Kansas then scored 10 straight points, before the Tar Heels could rally to run up a 29-22 halftime spread.

The Tar Heels stayed on top until Kansas guard Maurice King put his team ahead for the first time at the 11:33 mark, 36-35.

From here on out it was see-saw, with Kansas maintaining a very slight advantage. Then with 1:45 to go, Rosenbluth fouled out and Kansas took the lead at 44-41. But Tommy Kearns and Quigg put the Tar Heels back into contention and the regular game ended in a deadlock, 46-46.

In the first overtime period, each team scored two points as Bob Young and Chamberlain matched baskets. Each team went scoreless in the second overtime but both missed numerous opportunities to win.

OF RECENT DISTURBANCE:

N. C. State Legislature Attacks News Reports

RALEIGH—The North Carolina State College student legislature Friday voted strong criticism of news reports covering a March 7 riotous disturbance on the college campus.

In a resolution to be sent to all the state's "major newspapers," the student legislature asserted that reports of the riot were "greatly distorted in order to create sensational news stories."

The resolution asked the newspapers to "correct said stories published in their newspapers."

College officials said an investigation backed up the stand by the students, and showed no evidence of auto tires slashed, automobiles overturned, or other serious damage to cars.

The riots, which resulted in city court fines for 17 of 26 students arrested by Raleigh police, broke out near Reynolds Coliseum the first night of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament. Parking difficulties, including the blocking of student parking lot, were cited as a factor.

The student judicial board at the college dismissed charges of "ungentlemanly conduct" against the 26. It said there was no evidence to support the charges.

All Candidates Must Attend Meet Tomorrow

A compulsory meeting of all candidates running for office in the spring elections will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Gerrard Hall, according to Arthur Sobel, vice chairman of the Elections Board.

Any candidate not in attendance may be disqualified from the election, he said. Excuses may be obtained by contacting Ralph Cummings, chairman of the Elections Board, within 48 hours after the meeting.

Excuses will be issued only for special circumstances, Sobel said.

The public has been invited to attend the meetings as the candidates for student body offices and editor of the Daily Tar Heel will make short speeches, Sobel added.

The student legislature, in its resolution, said "false reports" of the riot "have greatly magnified the adverse effect on the student body as a whole, although the majority of students had nothing to do with the rioting."

Goide Students Gives Program Tonight At 8

Students of Walter Goide, former voice teacher at New York's Steinway Hall, will present a program of operatic arias by invitation of "Les Petites Musicales" tonight.

The performance will be given at 8 p.m. in Graham Memorial and is open to the public, free of charge.

Goide came to Chapel Hill from New York's Steinway Hall where he was noted for his work in preparing singers for the Metropolitan Opera Company. He agreed to come to Chapel Hill some four years ago at the urging of his close friend, Norman Cordon, who felt the need for a man of his caliber in North Carolina.

The program will include selections from "Mignon" by Ambroise; Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet," and "Pique Dame"; "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss; "Die Meistersinger" by Richard Wagner; and "The Secrets of Suzanne" by W.G. F. Ferrari.

Donna Patton, Martha Fouse, Jan Saxon and Jean Vernon will sing soprano solos as will Anne Moore, a mezzo soprano. Tenors will be Gene Strassler and Robert Andrews. Also appearing will be Edgar vom Lehn, a baritone.

Norman Cordon will act as master of ceremonies and sing two bass solos from "Faust." In addition, he will sing the role of Hans Sachs in the quintet from "Die Meistersinger."

Miss Saxon appeared last summer in the "Lost Colony" outdoor drama. A native of Charlotte, she recently won the N. C. State Federation for Music Clubs contest. Both she and Miss Fouse are well known for their appearances in campus musical programs and Playmaker productions.

All of the male singers have had extensive experience in local concert work.

Miss Patton, a junior at UNC, appeared earlier this year in "The Magic Flute," while Miss Moore is making her first appearance as a soloist in Chapel Hill.

After The Game Celebration On Franklin St.

Five made victory in Kansas City and while they sat exhausted two thousand students celebrated their victory. The student pictured at left climbed atop the post office corner spotlight to lead the cheering crowd which, right, turned on the photographer.

Franklin St. was blocked for 20 minutes. Students would not let the cars backing up for two blocks each way pass. They sat on the cars and threw toilet paper rolls on top of them.
