Is Rosenbluth Making A Mistake?

Lennie Rosenbluth's decision to join The College All-Stars on a barnstorming tour with The Harlem Globetrotters has created a great deal of speculation among sports fans in this area.

Many fans had hoped that Lennie would not decide to play with the All-Stars because the minute he signed to join the group, he became a professional athlete. Now, much to the sorrow of a lot of people, Rosenbluth will not be able to play AAU basketball.

Rosy is certain to try his hand at professional ball and the feeling among many is that he will go the route of Vic Molodet, Ron Shavlik, and many other great college stars who couldn't make the grade in pro ball.

A casual remark by a friend the other day about summed up the thoughts of a lot of local observers. "Hogan will never make it in pro ball, he's too skinny."

While this is not the most tactful way of expressing it, there is food for thought there.

The great Carolina All-American definitely has his work cut out for him. The strain of pro ball demands a physical peak at all times, and while Lennie appeared to be plenty durable during the 1956-57 season, things will be even tougher for him once he gets into professional basketball.

He will have a good deal of trouble getting rebounds against those "giants" which dominate pro ball. He will not be able to play the pivot as he did here—a position where he amassed a great many of his points.

Defensive Ability, Good Or Poor?

Rosy's defensive ability has likewise been an element of dissent. Many say that the Tar Heels used a zone this season to cover up for his deficiencies. To this idea we inject an opinion, Bosh! Rosenbluth was a pillar of strength throughout the season on defense. Had it not been for his defensive work, the Tar Heels probably would never have won thirty-two straight games.

The quiet fellow also has a lot of things going for him. He can, for instance, hit his jump shot from anywhere, and since pro basketball is predominantly a "jump shot game," Rosenbluth should not have to worry about a deficiency there. As a rival coach said, "that guy can kill you from anywhere on the court."

Mentally, Rosenbluth stacks up against the best. He belongs on a basketball court, and the fans who watched him perform for three years at Carolina will admit that on the court he is as smart as they come. Lennie gives the impression that he was born with a basketball in his hand and hasn't ever released it.

He'll Always Be A Champion To UNC Fans

So, the greatest basketball player in Carolina history has made the big decision. There is no doubt that he will go into pro ball. It is safe to say that no team in the NBA would turn down the opportunity to get him either.

Lennie Rosenbluth has done a lot for basketball at Carolina. He has conducted himself well and he has proven his ability as a great college player. He will leave the Carolina campus a champion. Regardless of his fate in professional ball, he will, to Carolina fans, still be the fellow who broke every scoring record in the history of the school—the greatest player in the annals of Carolina basketball.

Picking The Major Leagues Winners

At this time every year the expert and the amateur prognosticators feel that it's time to decide who will be playing in the World Series this fall. Since Everybody's doing it, we will too.

In the American League, we'll have to go along with the perennial favorite, The New York Yankees. Casey Stengel's club once again has the best material to be found anywhere, and even an injury to Micky Mantle probably couldn't stop the Bronx Bombers.

Our second choice is a stab in the dark, Detroit. The Tigers have the makings of a great club. Boston rates third best in our books with Chicago rounding out the first division.

It's extremely hard to conceive that Cleveland will ever leave the first division but it looks like the man with the scythe will finally get to The Indians. Washington will be stronger and should be good for sixth place, Baltimore and Kansas City, or vice versa for the cellar; take your pick.

In our opinion, The National League should have a new champion in 1957. We don't see how Milwaukee could let it slip away again this season. Brooklyn rates a strong second, with Cincinnati the league's darkhorse.

Philadelphia and St. Louis should fight it out for the fourth slot. We'll take The Cards with The Phils a good fifth. Pittsburgh is a good bet for sixth with New York and Chicago in seventh and eighth place.

For the World Series, we look for the Yanks to keep the championship flag waving in Yankee Stadium.

Plays

er B. O'Sullivan of Valhalla, N. Y., will include Miss Joan Van Sise of Huntington, N. Y., Ken Callendar of Greensboro, Harvey Knox of Greensboro, and Christopher Reynolds.

Stage manager and set designer are Pat Mulvihill of Evanston, Ill., and Bob Bailey of Statesville. The play concerns a Brooklyn spinster who reports the presence of a man from Mars to unbelieving authorities.

"The Thief and the Hunchback", by Leon Rooke of Roanoke Rapids, directed by Charles Barrett of Hickory, will be acted by Joe Whiteaker of Pine Bluff, Ark., Mrs. Rusti Rothrock of Anniston, Ala., Jerry Young of Marion, Robert Insko of Chapel Hill, Morgan Jackson of Charlotte, and Frank Rinaldi of Waterbury, Conn. The drama takes place in the time of Christ and involves the thief, Barabbas.

Audience-playwright discussions will follow each production.

Dixie Baseball Classic Will Be Resumed

WINSTON-SALEM—(AP)—The Dixie Baseball Classic, with North Carolina's big four teams as hosts, will be played in Winston-Salem March 31-April 2, 1958.

The Big Four coaches, in a meeting this week, agreed to resume the classic after its absence this spring and will play the final two days of the round robin tournament in Winston-Salem.

A committee is now in the process of selecting four teams outside of the Atlantic Coast Conference to participate in the three-day tournament.

The four coaches making plans for the tournament are Walter

Golfers Remain Unbeaten

Carolina's powerful golf team remained undefeated yesterday as the linksmen downed the Wake Forest Deacons, 18½-8½ on Finley Golf Course.

The win was number one in Atlantic Coast Conference competition for the Carolina golfers and their third victory of the young season. The only blemish on the UNC record is a tie with Rollins in the first match of the season.

Carolina's Gene Lookabill took medalist honors for the day with a two under par 70 over the wind-swept Finley course. Red Sapp and Tommy Helms were co-medalist on the UNC record is a tie with Rollins in the first match of the season.

The Tar Heel golfers are the defending ACC champions and are favored to win their second straight championship this year.

Their next match will be a triangular affair with South Carolina and Clemson at Clemson on Tuesday.

SUMMARY

Tommy Langley (C) defeated John Gerring, 2-1; Sonny George (WF) defeated Buck Adams, 2½-½; team score Carolina 3, Wake Forest 0.

Gene Lookabill (C) defeated Red Sapp, 3-0; Ralph James (WF) defeated Sam Patrick, 2-1; team score Carolina 2½, W. Forest ½.

Walt Summerville (C) defeated Dave Agilvie, 2½-½; Tuffy Henderson (C) defeated Tommy Helms, 2-1; team score, Carolina 2, Wake Forest 1.

Medalist: Lookabill (C) 70; Sapp and Helms (WF) 76.

Active Week Scheduled For Spring Sports

Carolina's spring sport teams continue to move along in high gear next week with twenty-two events, on tap.

The varsity baseballers go against Maryland tomorrow afternoon in College Park, Md. for the first of four conference tilts during the week. Walt Rabb's charges meet Virginia in Charlottesville Tuesday and in Chapel Hill on Wednesday. The Tar Heels close out the week with a Big Four engagement with Duke in Chapel Hill Saturday.

The varsity tennis team has three matches slated for the week. Tomorrow, the netters go against Wake Forest in Winston-Salem. Friday they entertain Clemson here, and Saturday, travel to Columbia, S. C. for a match with South Carolina.

In golf, the undefeated varsity team has a tri-angular meet with Clemson and South Carolina at Clemson Tuesday, and a home match with Michigan on Thursday. The freshman golfers meet Wake Forest here tomorrow.

Rounding out the varsity schedule for the week, the track team goes against N. C. State here on Tuesday and against South Carolina here Saturday.

The freshman baseballers have two games on tap next week, both away from home. Tomorrow, the frosh meet the N. C. State Wolflet in Raleigh, and on Saturday, they play the Duke Blue Imps in Durham.

Masters Rule Becomes Very Controversial

AUGUSTA, Ga. — (AP) — The new cutback rule of the Masters Golf Tournament, which sent Ben Hogan and Cary Middlecoff to the sidelines for the final rounds was the object of a seething controversy yesterday—with more beefs than bouquets.

Cliff Roberts, tournament committee chairman, acknowledged that he was aware of dissatisfaction in some quarters and hinted changes may be made before 1958. "The man who pays for the tickets to see the tournament is one of our chief concerns," he said.

Indications are that a move will be made to cut down the size of the original field, which this year rose to an unwieldy 102, and that the cutback rule, if kept in force, may be modified to take in the low 50 instead of 40 players.

Hogan and Middlecoff, the two strongest sentimental favorites, and a host of other topflight stars were turned into spectators when the scythe fell Friday to chop off all players below the top 40 and ties.

Hogan, at 151, and Middlecoff, at 152, were left looking surprised. Other victims were Ted Kroll, last year's leading money winner; Julius Boros, former winner of the National Open and the Tam O'Shanter, "world's" titles; Mike Souchak, Tommy Bolt and Gene Littler.

Six former champions made it and six didn't, but the major complaints centered around the elimination of Hogan and Middlecoff, the current National Open Champion who is generally recognized as the best current competitive player.

One spectator was heard to gripe: "It's like going to the World Series and finding Mickey Mantle benched because he went 0-for-5 the day before."

Horton Smith, winner of the first Masters Tournament in 1934 and the only man who had played in every round until he was eliminated by Friday's cutoff, commented:

"I think the Masters is different than other tournaments. It has been a gathering of the great golf names of the past and present. It's an invitation affair. "Now the new rule makes it like being invited to a home for dinner and told to get up and get out before they serve dessert."

Trackmen Blast Deacs 115-18; Freshmen Win

By DAVE WIBLE

Carolina's varsity track squad led by middle distance runner Dave Scurlock completely overwhelmed Wake Forest 115-18 yesterday afternoon to give the Tar Heels their first conference victory of the season.

In the freshman division, the Tar Babies followed suit defeating the Deaclets 98½ to 31½. Ward Sims was the outstanding Carolina freshman, taking first in three events: broad jump, pole vault and low hurdles. Sims bettered the varsity marks in the pole vault and broad jump.

In the varsity competition, Scurlock was the big gun all the way. He took first in the 440 and the 880. His 440 time, 48.6, tied the long standing school record set by Royce Jennings in 1939. Scurlock was also the anchor man on the mile relay team. His team of Ben Williams, Dick MacFaddin, and John Sylvester won the event running against another Carolina squad. Wake did not compete.

Jim Beatty used his running ability in only one event, the mile. The All-American won the event hands down with the slow (for him) time of 4:30.7.

Tar Heel Clete Oakley was the outstanding varsity field man. He threw the javelin 195 feet. Dashmen Jim Varnum and Jim Moss ran with midseason form. Varnum took the 100 in 10.0, and Moss took the 220 in 22.5 seconds.

THE SUMMARIES

Special Track Event At UNC

A prime sports attraction will be offered here Tuesday when a special mile run event will be held in connection with the annual state track meet.

Laszlo Tabori, the great Hungarian distance star, will compete against Carolina's Jim Beatty and Dave Scurlock. The event will be held about mid-way the regular meet, at 4:15 p.m.

Carolina coach Dale Ranson, in arranging the event, said he expected a large gallery of track fans at Fetzter field to see this race. Mihaly Iglol, who brought Tabori, is now associated with Ranson in training Carolina runners, and has been working with all three men.

Beatty ran second to the great Ron Delaney at the recent Cleveland indoor games in the mile.
