McGuire-Tatum, No Rest For The Weary

Down in Woolen Gym, two Carolina coaches make their office at opposite ends of the front lobby. Neither is doing any coaching right now, but don't think that means rest for either of them.

We dropped in on coaches Frank McGuire and Jim Tatum the other day just to find out what they were doing during the off-season. To coin an already over-coin-ed expression, both were busy as a one-arm paper hanger.

"I've never seen anything like it," remarked McGuire from behind his big desk. "My schedule is full for the next two months; I have speaking engagements every night this month, and all of May."

The nation's number one basketball coach has been flooded with requests to appear at high school banquets as guest speaker. "I'm doing as many as possible," he continued, "but I'm just completely swamped with speaking engagements."

The weekends are no different from any other days for the personable Irishman. His commitments keep him away from his family a lot and he can't even call a weekend his own.

This Summer, Back To Coaching

This summer, McGuire will get back to the business of coaching. He will hold a number of clinics all over the country, mostly for high school ballplayers.

June 1st, he will travel to Utah for a one-week clinic there. He then goes to a place in South Carolina called Camp Pla Mor for a three-week stay. At Camp Pla Mor, McGuire will teach basketball to high school boys from the Palmetto State.

It's hard to keep McGuire away from his native New York, and nobody here minds one bit as long as he comes back. He will spend the month of July touring New York State, holding various clinics in and around the Metropolitan area.

It's a pretty safe bet that McGuire will make the most of his trip to the big city. There is probably another Rosenbluth lurking there, and you can bet your bottom dollar that McGuire knows about him. As one person remarked, he's got more contacts in New York than Bob Hope has writers.

After New York, McGuire returns to South Carolina for a big coaching clinic. Then back to Chapel Hill and the worries of another basketball season. Every coach should have such problems.

Tatum, Looking After Things Here

A trip down to the office of Jim Tatum found the hefty football mentor looking well-rested and a bit overweight. He had just finished a conference and was talking on the telephone.

We tried to ask Coach Tatum about the same questions that we had asked McGuire. What was he doing during the off-season? "Well, I don't have too many speaking engagements," he started. "As good a deal of my work can be done right here," he said indicating his desk.

"I have my coaching staff looking after various jobs concerning the boys," he remarked. We try to keep them healthy and make sure they stay in good academic standing. I guess you might say that I try to call signals for the whole group."

Actually Tatum was a little modest in his appraisal of his off-season work. The hefty football coach has several football clinics scheduled between now and next fall. He is also doing some speaking at alumni banquets around the state.

Last week, Tatum made appearances in Kingsport, Tenn., and attended a football clinic in Cleveland. This weekend he'll go to Washington to "do a little scouting." In addition, he has several scouting trips planned for the next few months.

A Football Co-op Plan

"Another thing that my staff and I do," Tatum continued, is to watch movies of some of the opponents that we have played and will play next season. There is a lot of work analyzing opponents, and it takes up a good deal of our time."

One of the most interesting things that we learned during our short visit with Sunny Jim was what we would call a co-op agreement with other schools.

Tatum explained the plan to us. Whenever we see a team having lots of success with a certain phase of the game we go out to them or watch pictures of their team in action. We try to work together in helping each other."

Tatum continued that "at present we have 3 coaches out at Georgia Tech for four days of their spring practice. We don't play each other but we do have some common opponents and we'll work with Tech and vice versa."

The telephone rang again and we decided that we had taken up enough of Tatum's time. He bade us call again at anytime and we left completely unenvious of the chores which confront the two Tar Heel coaches for the next few months.

A Salute To The New Fleece Members

Our sincerest congratulations to the seven athletes and two great coaches who were tapped into the Golden Fleece Monday night.

This is an honor that each will cherish always because of its great significance. Carolina's five great basketballers and coaches McGuire and Freeman plus Jim Beatty and Ed Sutton were selected not only for their part in athletics at Carolina, but for their contribution to various phases of campus life.

All nine of the tapes are worthy of the honor, for each is an outstanding individual. All have proven that athletic prowess can be combined with other outstanding talents and we heartily salute them all.

Tar Heel Linksters Cop Over Tigers And USC

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP)—The University of North Carolina defeated both Clemson and South Carolina in a triangular golf match yesterday, whipping the home squad 16-2 and the Gamecocks, 14-4.

South Carolina's Bobby McCarty took medalist honors for the day with a four-under-par 68. In the Clemson-North Carolina match, Tom Langley of the Tar Heels claimed low score with a 70.

Raugh Gets Fourth, 6-1 Beatty Second In Special Mile; Tracksters Beat Wolfpack, 97-34

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP)—North Carolina's ace right-hander Jim Raugh scattered six hits and struck out eight here today to pitch the Tar Heels to a 6-1 Atlantic Coast Conference baseball triumph over Virginia's Cavaliers.

It was North Carolina's third conference victory in four starts and left Virginia with a 1-2 league record. Herb Busch went the distance for the Cavaliers and suffered his first defeat in three decisions. The victory was Raugh's fourth.

The Tar Heels broke up a scoreless pitching duel in the fifth when Dick Hudson beat out an infield single, was sacrificed to second and scored on a wild throw by first baseman Bob Hardy. A walk to Joe Shook, a stolen base and a single by Roger Honeycutt gave them another run in the sixth.

North Carolina scored twice after two were out in the seventh on a walk, a single by Jim Legette an error, another walk and a single by Don Lewis. The Tar Heels added two insurance runs in the ninth.

Carolina's cindermen without the aid of their two top performers Jim Beatty and Dave Scurlock won their second conference meet of the season yesterday afternoon when they defeated State, 97-34.

Everett Whatley was the iron man for the Tar Heels. He took a first in the mile and later came back to take a close second in the two-mile.

Scurlock, after running a 4:16 mile took to the cinders again for the mile relay. He anchored the team which won going away.

In the freshman division, the Tar Babies defeated the Wolflets 93 1/2 to 37 1/2. Tar Baby javelin man Danny O'Neal set a new freshman record in the javelin with a 180 foot throw.

Ward Sims was again the star for the Carolina frosh. He took first in the 120 yard high hurdles, the broad jump and the pole vault. He vaulted 12'4", which was ten inches better than the best varsity vault.

Laszlo Tabori, the third man in the world ever to run a three minute plus mile, passed Carolina's Jim Beatty half-way in the third lap and extended the lead to ten yards to win the AAU invitational mile event here yesterday afternoon, before a crowd of 1,500.

Tabori's time was 4:06.6 while Beatty clocked 4:09.9. Beatty's time was the third best he has ever run, having had 4:08.8 indoors and 4:09.4 outdoors.

Dave Scurlock, the third man in the race, was about forty yards behind Tabori and completed the distance in 4:16. It was the first time the middle distance champion has ever run the mile in competition.

The 1,500 spectators roared as the "Dream Mile" was being run during the dual meet between UNC and N. C. State.

At the gun, Beatty took the lead followed by Scurlock and Tabori. The runners stayed in those posi-
