

Seniors To Celebrate 'Their Day' On May 1

Seniors will have their day. This year, in accordance with established Carolina tradition, graduating seniors will celebrate "their day" of recreation and group participation on Wednesday, May 1. Unlike years past, however, the traditional festivities have been reduced to one day because program officials have felt that previous Senior Weeks were not as successful as they should have been.

According to Lou Rosenstock, Publicity Chairman of Senior Day, the change has been made in order to concentrate the interests of more than 600 students.

In keeping with features of bygone Senior occasions, however, seniors this year will be treated to a late movie at the Carolina Theater on May 30 — a prelude to activity the following day.

May 1, of course, will be devoted entirely to the whims and recreational enjoyment of all seniors on campus. The first scheduled event in the class-free Senior Day affair will be a brief organizational meeting to be held at 10 a.m. in Memorial Hall.

Program officials have urged everyone to attend the meeting since tickets will be distributed which will be important later in the day in a drawing to be held at the Patio. Grand prize has been announced as an automobile.

A highlight in the afternoon programming includes "hand-to-hand" combat in the traditional faculty-senior athletic contest.

Mayors Proclaim Mother's Day

The mayors of Carrboro and Chapel Hill Tuesday announced May 12 as the date for the second annual Mother's Day in the two towns. Carrboro Mayor R. B. Todd (left) signs a resolution to that effect while Chapel Hill Mayor O. K. Cornwell looks on. The contest is sponsored by the Chapel Hill Merchants' Assn. with the aid of UNC's student government leaders.

Town Mayors Proclaim May 12 Second Annual Mother's Day

Dormitories, sororities and fraternities may enter their housemothers in the second annual Mother's Day contest sponsored by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Assn., according to Howard Yandle, contest chairman.

Entry blanks may be picked up at most Chapel Hill and Carrboro merchants. Mothers may be entered from now to May 4.

The contest is being sponsored with the aid of the UNC student government. Three outstanding mothers of Chapel Hill, Carrboro and the University will be chosen to receive gifts.

Mothers will be chosen on their individual merits rather than the style of description on the entry blanks. The mother's residence should be included on the entry blank, according to Yandle.

Mother's day has been officially proclaimed as May 12 this year by Mayor Oliver K. Cornwell of Chapel Hill and Mayor R. B. Todd of Carrboro.

In a joint statement the mayors said, "Recognizing that the service rendered the United States by the American mother is the greatest source of the country's strength and inspiration, Mother's Day is the most conscious and deliberate effort any nation has ever made publicly to honor the mothers of our country."

"We hope that the people will take this opportunity to reflect on the fine qualities inherent in the mothers of these cities, and everywhere, and pay them the homage they so justly deserve," the two officials said.

Selection Of University Trustees Is Discussed

RALEIGH — (AP)—Senate and House committees apparently were at loggerheads Tuesday on the procedure they will follow in nominating some 29 members of the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

Rep. Roy C. Coates of Johnston County, Chairman of the House Committee on University trustees, said the House group voted Tuesday not to agree to a Senate committee plan for making the nominations but wanted the committees to meet as they have in the past in joint session to vote on the trustee nominations.

Government Posts Still Open, Says Evans

Student Government still has over 100 positions open for 1957-58 which must be filled by presidential appointment.

Student body President Sonny Evans yesterday issued a statement stressing the need for interested persons in these positions and urging students to make application.

"I'm sure that every person who wants to work in student government next year can find something which will suit his own individual needs and interest. You can be assured that we will consider this appointment on the basis of the individual's merit, interest, and desire to serve," Evans said.

He continued, "I hope that every one interested will get an application blank from the student government office or from the information desk at Graham Memorial and place their name into consideration."

One reason the Senate group does not want the matter settled by a vote in a single joint session is that the House committee has 42 members and the Senate committee 21.

Coates said the House committee agreed the names of some 20 present members of the board of trustees will be placed in nomination. He said there are some 29 additional candidates for the 29 vacancies on the board.

The Senate committee, Coates said, had suggested the two committees meet in joint session and ballot on the 29 names with the top 10 being nominated and that the committees would hold another joint session later to agree on the other 19 nominees.

After the trustees are nominated by the joint committees, the Senate and House will meet in joint session later to elect the trustees.

A Few Moments Of Rest
