that there are no private relationships." "The danger is much more widespread here, more pernicious because it is more subtle. We are deprived of liberty by surrendering it to begin with," he explained.

In his concluding statements, Dr. Potat expressed his views that this condition threatens the autonomy of student government and freedom in ways not yet assessed. Correlating his final remarks to an analysis of "The Lonely Crowd" which exists in society today, Dr. Potat told those assembled that in the future when they see indications of actions which seem to over compensate that they should "weep not for them, but for themselves."

grass. The concert included a diversity of selections in the popular, semi-classical, classical and march field.

Toward late afternoon and early evening, our visiting parents took their leave of Chapel Hill. They were for the most part tired, as they should be after a full day's travels, but they took with them a warm experience and insight into the University of North Carolina. Some got a glimpse of what UNC means by its traditions and its history — why Carolina life rates with Carolina students.

Coed To Get Gray Award

The fourth annual Jane Craig Gray Award will be presented Sunday to the outstanding junior girl on the UNC campus.

Given by Beta Chi Chapter of Kappa Delta sorority, the award will be made in a ceremony at Morehead Planetarium at 8 p.m.

The award is given in memory of Mrs. Gordon Gray, an alumna of the Beta Chi Chapter, as a tribute to the ideals which she exemplified. Based on qualities of leadership, scholarship, and character, the selection is made from the coeds on campus who have proved deserving of this honor.

Kershaw

He pointed out that the most neurotic song he had heard was the old standard, "I'm going to buy a paper doll, which I can call my own," etc. Kershaw stated that this song relays the feeling of not really having a person who is "down-to-earth" but a person who is dreamed of and will never exist.

The minister pointed out that the color line never entered the picture as far as the jazz lovers were concerned. Benny Goodman broke the color line with Lionel Hampton and Teddy Wilson in his large and great band. Back in the 1920's and 1930's the South Side of Chicago would be the "stomping grounds" of the white musicians who went to listen to their idols, who were of the opposite race.

terest in our early American history.

Other journalism awards were: Editorial writing—Buford Boone of the Tuscaloosa (Ala.) News. Cartoons—Tom Little of the Nashville (Tenn.) Tennessean. News photography — Harry A. Trask of the Boston Traveler.

The Chicago Daily News was cited for "determined and courageous public service in exposing a 2½ million dollar fraud centering in the office of the State Auditor of Illinois, resulting in the indictment and conviction of the State Auditor and others. This led to the organization of state procedures to prevent the recurrence of the fraud."

Placement Service Plays Important Part

By JOHN TALBUTT

Since its conception in 1948, the Placement Service has been steadily becoming one of the more important functions of the administration of UNC. To date, the Placement Service has found well over 6000 jobs for graduating students.

This year the Placement Service has accommodated 253 business and governmental organizations on recruiting missions to the UNC campus and has arranged for 3251 individual interviews between students and employers. An all time high of close to 900 students will find jobs through the Placement Service this year. The Placement Service is housed in three small rooms on the second floor of Garner Hall. It has a staff of only four. Efficiency is its byword.

Under Director Joe Galloway, an ex-captain in the army whose job was very appropriately one of coordination of operations, the Placement Service has cut red tape and form filling to a minimum. The student who seeks placement attends a meeting in mid-October of his senior year. Heer he is advised to fill out to brief single-sheet forms within the month.

From then until the time he selects his job, the student will probably spend less than one hour working with the Placement Service, except for the time spent in interviews with prospective employers.

However, this is not to say that it is all a cut and dried mechanistic operation. As Director Galloway said in his annual report to the dean of student affairs, the Placement Service is as concerned with the placement of the student whose talent is not so readily discernible and whose interests are not so clearly formed as it is with the placement of the student in the top ten percent of his class.

The Placement Service is also concerned with satisfying the demands of the more than 300 companies which recruit from UNC's graduates. "It is a competitive operation," says Director Galloway. "If we don't supply students to the employers satisfaction, they drop us from their list and go to some other college or university." Efforts were even made to satisfy the needs of a South Carolina employer who recently made a request for a couple to manage a monkey farm. The Placement Service couldn't supply the couple, however; it seems that no one could be found with the necessary experience.

How does UNC's placement organization compare with the similar organizations of other universities? It's hard to say, but the fact that over 300 companies from all over the country annually come to UNC to recruit employees speaks for itself. Also it is the voiced opinion of many of these companies that UNC's placement service is one of the best in the nation.

It's a puzzlement:

When you're old enough to go to college, you're old enough to go out with girls. When you're old enough to go out with girls, who needs college? Oh well, there's always Coke.
