

Cool Down To A Casual Summer

More ivy league than the ivy league, and more casual than the most casual—that's UNC in the summer.

Students come to summer school either because they have to or to play and have fun, but even those who plan to work will find an easy-going atmosphere.

The knock-kneed, Bermuda clad "Carolina gentlemen" will loiter around the campus coolly, while their feminine counterparts sweat the day out in crinolines, swishing in and out of classes and the library, envying the male's attire.

But ladies must be ladies.

At the crack of dawn, students, sleepy-eyed and hungry, will set out for classes where professors try to decide whether to keep up appearances with coats or be comfortable with sports shirts.

Those 7:30 dawns never give up until Saturdays, either.

When the final hot class of the day reaches its end, students have to get that few minutes rest before setting out for Hogan's or the swimming pool. Then the fun begins.

But we must not be so idealistic. There is always work to be done in the library, that ever-threatening structure. Students come and go from this campus, but those class buildings and the libraries are apparently indestructible.

For those who have been here all year, there will be new faces. New friendships consequently will bloom—and fraternity houses will boom!

For the students there will be a change of atmosphere, certainly, but for those ever-present professors, house mothers, landladies and policemen, duty offers no rest. It may be even more trying.

But we only have summer once a year, and we only have UNC summers while we are young, so we may as well be as ivy league and casual as possible while there is opportunity, and while the South Building bell tolls our days into life and summer fun.

—Patsy Miller

NOLA HATTEN
Chairman of Summer School Activities

SUMMER SPOTLIGHT

Southern Belle To Lead Summer School Activities

By BILL CHESHIRE

Summer breezes at UNC will bear the delicate fragrance of magnolia blossoms, honeysuckle and yellow jasmine, for a blue-eyed belle from the deep South has assumed command of summer school activities.

She is Nola Jean Hatten, who hails from the Gulf Coast city of Pascagoula, Miss. Nola is chairman of the Summer School Activities Council, which plans to provide students with entertainment in keeping with "the relaxed atmosphere of the UNC summer campus."

Nola is a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority for which she was house manager during the past year. Also she has been a member of the Orientation Committee, the Women's Residence Council, the YWCA and the Southern Regional Council. She was secretary of the University Speakers last year and will be president of the Baptist Student Union this summer.

In addition to these extra curriculars, Nola somehow found time to help with the Student Government's leadership training program.

Nola attended Stevens College prior to her arrival here. At Stevens she was likewise an active participant in various student activities. She came to UNC because of the English department here.

"Most girls choose UNC because of the boy-girl ratio," Nola says. "But UNC's English department is well thought of at Stevens, and I came here because of that."

After graduating with an A.B. in English at the end of the first summer session, Nola will be a special student for one additional semester. After that she may teach high school English at Pascagoula.

Asked about her formula for success, Nola had this to say: "Never accept a job unless you feel that you can do it; then do your very best."

Nola's many and varied activities at UNC as well as the manner in which they have been executed are a testimonial to the practicality of her formula.

New Students Welcomed By President Sonny Evans

Student Body President Sonny Evans yesterday extended a warm welcome to newly-arriving students on the UNC campus for the first summer session.

"Though many of you will not have the privilege of being with us in the fall," Evans said, "let me welcome you to the outstanding university in the South in the most beautiful college town in America."

"Regardless of your reasons for attending this summer session, I'm sure that you will find what you are looking for at Carolina."

"The Student Government organization for summer-school is much more streamlined than the fall, consisting of a President, Secretary-Treasurer and a Summer Activities Council. However let me remind you that the Honor System is still in effect, giving us the same academic freedom which we enjoy the rest of the year. Violators of the honor code will be tried by either the Men's or Women's Summer School Honor Council headed by Sandy Sanders and Katherine Coe.

"The responsibility not to lie, cheat, or steal and to report anyone seen doing so is coordinate with being a student at the University, and I am certain that everyone will cooperate in such an essential part of Carolina life."

"Please feel free to come up to the Student Government office at any time, since we are always eager to hear your opinions and listen to your ideas. There is also a great deal of work which has to be done in the summer and your help will be needed and much appreciated."

Confidentially...

BY BARRY WINSTON

Of the three people who will read this, two are new to the campus. The information contained herein is for both of you. The old timers can go back to drinking their coffee, and contemplating the wild life on the steps of South Building.

In keeping with the rash of "Confidentials" that have plagued us over the past several years, this will be Chapel Hill, Confidential.

If, after a hard day, spent slaving over a hot desk, you wander away from the shelter of your dorm in search of entertainment and solace of the soul, pray don't be discouraged by the lack of violent activity on our main thoroughfare. Be of stout heart. With a small amount of imagination and an automobile you can find amusements to suit your every mood. What's that? You don't have a car? Pish Tosh. No matter. Strike out on foot. It's not that far to Durham.

BUT LET'S TAKE an inventory. Franklin Street is lined on both sides with the friendly and open doors of establishments which exist only to serve you. And they will serve you anything from a short brew to a tall western (movie, that is). The beverage dispensaries are many and varied, to fit every taste from the hayseed to the continental. Nearly every one of them has a television set, which you can never hear, but then, after an hour or so, your date will be more interesting than Howdy Doody anyway. They all serve food of one sort or another, the quality of which varies from place to place, but their main purpose, as nearly as I have been able to find out, is strictly to dish out the beer that made Milwaukee famous, or whatever else you'll have along that line.

THE EATERIES are even more numerous than the drinkeries, and that's going some. They all serve palatable chow which can be digested by all but the very fussiest of eaters, and those people have no business in college, anyway. Getting an education has always required a strong stomach. The price you pay depends pretty much on what you want and how your tastes run. Anyone with the price of two beers in his pocket can get a good staple meal, so if you'd rather eat than drink, you've just about got it made.

There are only two places within easy walking distance where one may go to dance. The closest one (it's the closest one to me) is in the basement of Graham Memorial, and it's called, among other things, the Rendezvous Room. It has nice music, a generally quiet atmosphere, and not too much light. If you want a drink, there's a coke machine right outside the door.

The Pine Room, which is in the basement of Lenoir Hall, also has floor space for dancing. If you walk in there and don't see anyone dancing, or even anywhere to dance, don't get shook. It's in the back, behind that odd looking partition. Its real claim to fame is the fact that food is only a dozen steps away.

MOVIES ARE BIGGER than ever. Or something like that. If you like Gina in VistaVision and stereophonic sound, with gowns by Frank Lloyd Wright, you have a wide range from which to choose. The Carolina or the Varsity. The prices are a little ridiculous, but still better than Durham, and you're going to go anyhow, so go ahead. Of course, if you have a car, there's the Valley Drive-In (you'd look pretty silly going to a drive-in without a car), but if you get that far, chances are you'll see the Patio and go there instead.

The Patio has cold brew, and a nice place to dance. Also boxes and boxes of pretzels. In case you don't know quite how to get there, just start out the road toward Durham and, after while, if you can negotiate that clover-leaf or whatever it is, you'll be there.

The Wishing Well is right across the street, but I've never been inside it. By the time I get that far, my legs are so tired that I can't walk any further than the nearest booth in the Patio. (I don't have a car either, and it's a good four miles out there.)

QUIET THOUGH it may seem, Chapel Hill is actually overflowing with opportunities for activities after dark. If you don't drink, smoke, dance or eat, then there's always the library where you can go and study undisturbed. I'd give you directions, but it's been so long I've forgotten exactly how to get there.

Campus Activities: Invitation for Fun

Along with the glad hand of welcome extended to summer school students today on the opening of the new term, an abundant variety of activities also is offered that we hope will prove more stimulating than the narrow confines of a bridge game or other similar pastimes.

This summer there is offered such a wealth of extra-curricula activities and so many opportunities to meet and make new friends that those enrolled in summer school can ill afford to pass them up.

All this adds up to just one thing:

There are many ways at Carolina to make this your pleasantest summer ever.

Thes rest is up to you.

The Summer School Weekly

The official student publication of the UNC Summer School. Published each Friday during both sessions except examination and holiday periods.

Office Telephone: 9-3361

Editor.....MARY ALYS VOORHEES
Managing Editor.....BILL CHESHIRE
Business Manager.....GILBERT ROTHSTEIN
Associate Editors.....PATSY MILLER, NANCY HILL
News Editor.....MARY MOORE MASON
Sports Editor.....LARRY CHEEK
Chief Photographer.....BILL KING
Feature Editor.....CORTLAND EDWARDS
Advisor.....SAM MAGILL