

If Nothing Works Study Each Day

Several students eating dinner in Lenoir Hall earlier in the week carried on an interesting conversation, a good part of which was concerned with a timely topic, the second session of summer school just having started.

Seems that one student there was concerned with methods of studying, and how some students could spend a lot of time on outside activities and yet make good grades while others could not. Several good suggestions were offered.

One idea brought up concerned the value of conversation topics around the dinner table at home. What you discuss at home, one said, influences to a large degree how well you do later in school.

That may be true to some extent, said another, but it's not always so. At his home, the topics discussed were of technical and mechanical things. Matters political and historical were rarely ever talked about, he said, indicating thus that this idea would not be of much value to him in political science or history courses he might have taken.

A third student came up with the idea that it was fairly easy to read through material the night before a quiz and make a good grade. In his case, he said, he could quickly glance over a page in the textbook and spot the most important things without having to read it all. He could, he said, easily go through 300 pages of history in that way.

Maybe so. But after numerous attempts—which failed more often than not—at trying to outguess the professor by using much the same methods as described above, we've decided that, at least as far as we're concerned, the only way is to keep up daily with the subject and do something the night before a quiz is to relax, the idea that cramming is more of a hindrance than a help in making good grades.

And likely as not, we'll join you at final exam time with an all night study session, aided by twenty-odd cups of coffee, and take the exam the next day with the usual tired mind.

Don't Just Loaf; Do Something!

Summer school students, rise and take up your arms. The time for action is at hand.

The University of North Carolina was once known as a beehive of activity, intellectual and otherwise. Now this fond tradition is dying a slow, tepid, sticky death on the sweltering UNC campus.

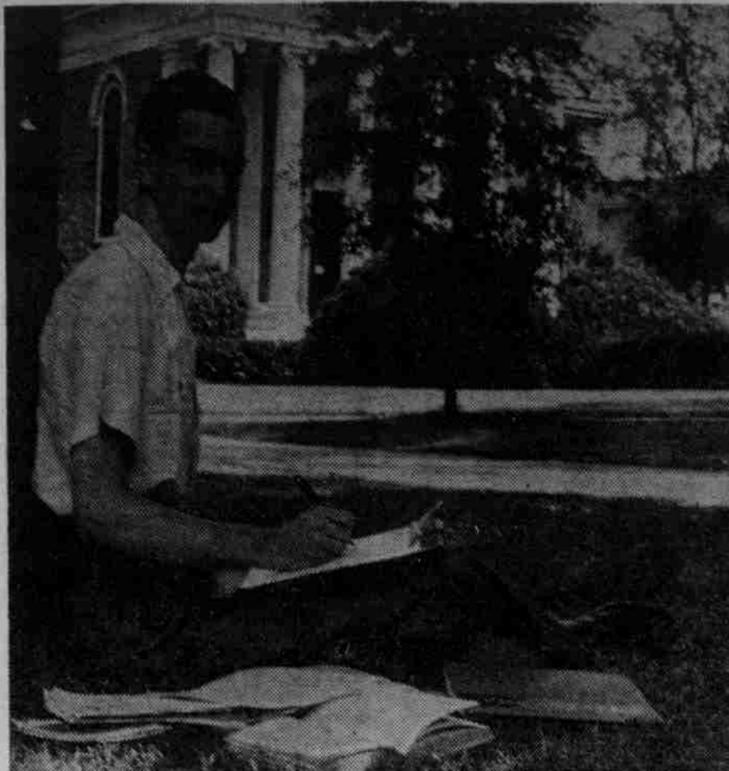

The Daily Tar Heel called it apathy. Some refer to it as spring fever or summer doldrums, depending on the season. We term it the creeping lassitude that slowly but surely is strangling the life blood of this university.

Students just don't care any more. They don't get excited about anything. And as a result, they are losing the freedom and responsibility that go along with responsible student government.

But this isn't intended to be a sermon urging you to go out and immediately busy yourselves with the affairs of student government. Rather it's a plea to go out and do something, get interested in some activity or other, even if it's making all A's or learning how to be a better tennis player.

Take an active part in something. Get carried away with it. Come out of your holes in the ground and pretend you're alive. Get up you apathetic people, and move. Do something, even if it's raiding the Summer School Weekly offices to lynch this writer.

We for one would like to see this beehive buzz again. The sleepy somnolence that now pervades the campus atmosphere gives us the willies. And if you can't think of anything else to do, write a letter to the editor.

(Photo By Bill King)

RICHARD LOVE OF GREENSBORO
New Chairman Of Summer Activities Council

SUMMER SPOTLIGHT

New Activities Council Head Is A Yankee-Bred Tar Heel

By BILL CHESHIRE

Richard Love, newly-appointed Chairman of the Summer School Activities Council, was born a Tar Heel. But for some reason (probably to get Southern Bread) his family moved up to the bad place — specifically Greenwich, Conn.

So Richard lived most of his young life on the other side of the Magnolia Curtain where he hardly ever ate black-eyed peas, almost never had collard greens and where his teachers taught him not only that "you" was both singular and plural but that all Americans were yankees and Southerners were Rebs.

As might have been expected, Richard decided that he ought to acquire his higher education further South. So after finishing at Deerfield Academy (Deerfield, Mass.), he boarded the best thing he could find (a Southbound train) and came to Chapel Hill.

When asked what he liked about Carolina, Richard explained that his impressions of the University were so intertwined with his impressions of North Carolina in general as to be inseparable. This is what he had to say about our way of life:

"The Carolina way of life cannot be described in a few words; the friendly atmosphere and informality become such an inbred part of you that it may completely change your outlook. This way of life has meant more to me than any other experience I have had.

"Now I plan to settle in North Carolina," he added.

A rising senior (currently from Greensboro), Richard has allowed few cobwebs to collect in his path since he came to UNC. He has been an active member of the campus YMCA, contributing his talents to nearly every phase of that organization's work. These have included: the Freshman Fellowship and the YMCA cabinet (last year and this year). In addition, he has been Y social chairman and conference co-chairman.

After getting his degree here in Business Administration, he plans to go to the Harvard Business School (where he will probably try to convert the benighted yanks) and then return to North Carolina.

Better take your turnip greens, hog jowl, sowbelly, pot likker, grits and chittlins with you this time, Richard.

Is School Becoming Dull? Try Out These Activities

By LARRY CHEEK

The UNC summer school student will find the best in variety entertainment right at his doorstep this session.

The newly-appointed Summer Activities Council, headed by Chairman Richard Love, has gone all out to provide a diverting lineup of activities for the sweltering summer students. Two attractions are definitely set for the coming week, while several others are in the tentative stage.

First on the sale is a show by the master hypnotist and mental wizard, Franz Polgar. Polgar, a frequent and popular visitor to the UNC campus, will stage his demonstration of mental gymnastics this Wednesday night in Memorial Hall.

Then a week from today, the Activities Council will sponsor an all-campus dance in the asphalt area between Hanes and Memorial Halls. The dance will feature a Caribbean cruise motif, and dress will be informal. More details will be announced in next week's issue.

Other prospective attractions include a variety show, an informal swim party, a Bermuda

(Continued on Page 3)

Socially Speaking

By Mary Alys Voorhees

THE WEEKEND OF LEISURE is past and once again Carolina settles down for several more weeks of knowledge seeking . . . and while Tar Heels were home for a couple at least two students were making their claim to fame. . . .

Elaine Herndon of Durham, first session coed, took top honors by walking away with the "Miss North Carolina" title Saturday night . . . no fellows, she won't be back this session . . . another coed, Jo Ann Aldridge—who was "Miss Chapel Hill"—was among the top ten winners.

THE CAROLINA WAY OF LIFE . . . Pi Phi Bobbi Madison heading for her Washington, D. C., home after spending the weekend and first summer session here. . . . Student Body President Sonny Evans off on a naval cruise for the rest of the summer. . . .

Naval ROTC students Bob and Don Furtado vacationing in New Orleans before reporting for six weeks active duty at Corpus Christi, Tex. and Little Creek Va. . . . Cam Whittimore, Pat Watson, Mary Lou Macon, Mary Elizabeth May and Virginia Cottingham back for another session . . . ditto for a couple thousand others. . . .

The friendly yellow-jackets back again this summer to keep a constant vigil over the trash cans in Y Court. . . . Sigma Nu Tommy Prewitt taking life leisurely out in Denver, Colo., before beginning law school . . . the Betas celebrating with a party at the house Monday night. . . .

Buddy Payne, Monk Moncure, Bill Swain, Sally Simpson and Doris Atkins spending the weekend at Virginia Beach and running into Sonny and Anne Shelley Forbes, who are there for the summer before returning to school.

ENGAGEMENTS . . . DU Ernst Kemm of New York City and Alpha Gam Pat Carter of Wallace . . . former Pika John Dickson of Wilmington and Tri Delt Donna Hostettler of Eustis, Fla. . . . Med student John Winstead of Chapel Hill and Watts Hospital nurse Jean Butler of Clinton. . . .

UNC student Charles Stevens of Chapel Hill and Rachael Humphries, also of Chapel Hill . . . Alpha Gam Carolyn Frazier of Liberty and State student Billy Moxley of Raleigh . . . former KD president Peg Humphrey of Richmond, Va., and Truman Moore of Myrtle Beach, S. C.

WEDDINGS . . . former coed Catherine Berryhill of Chapel Hill and UNC law student Lee Williams of Sanford, July 13. . . . ADPi Barbara West of Jacksonville, Fla., and KA Pat McCormick of Monroe, July 2.

PINNINGS . . . Beta Bill Klein of Asheville to Tri Delt Susan Mayhue of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. . . . coed Sybil Child of Lawranceville, Va., to recent Naval Academy graduate Bill West of Wilmington.

The Summer School Weekly

The official student publication of the UNC Summer School. Published each Friday during both sessions except examination and holiday periods.

Office Telephone: 9-3361

Editor.....MARY ALYS VOORHEES
Managing Editor.....BILL CHESHIRE
Business Manager.....DICK BURROUGHS
Associate Editor.....LARRY CHEEK
Sports Editor.....DICK BURROUGHS
Chief Photographer.....BILL KING
Feature Editor.....CORTLAND EDWARDS
News Staff.....LIND EARLE, PAT WATSON,
JIMMY HARPER, MARY HOUSE, CLARKE JONES
AND GARY NICHOLS
Advisor.....TOM LAMBETH