All-Day Ballot To Fill Three Key Positions

Inter-Dormitory Council President Tom Walters, in a statement to The Daily Tar Heel yesterday, urged all men's dormitory residents to vote in today's election for dorm officers.

Elections will be held today for intramural manager, Inter-Dormitory Council representative and secretary-treasurer to serve for the 1957-58 school term.

Walters stated that keynote of this year's IDC plans is dorm government. He said that emphasis will be on informing dormitory presidents of administrative processes of the IDC so that more dorm administration will be handled on the individual dorm level.

Walters' statement is as follows: "I would like to urge all dormitory members to get out and vote in today's election. I would particularly like to urge them to elect a man because in the 1957 school year the IDC keynote is dormitory government itself.

The IDC will work toward informing dormitory presidents of all phases of dormitory administration so that more of this can be taken care of on the dormitory level.

"We are very pleased with the work of the IDC so far and are gratified that a good year."

Presidents and vice-presidents of dormitories were elected in campus-wide elections last spring.

Opening and closing times for today's elections have been left to the discretion of individual dorm presidents, however, the Inter-Dormitory Council requested today that all ballot boxes be returned to the housing office by 8 p.m. today for counting.

All Carolina men's dormitory residents are eligible to vote in their respective dormitories, according to IDC regulations concerning dormitory elections.

Alumni Give UNC $41,000

UNC alumni have donated $41,000 for "special and unrestricted" use by faculty and students here this school year, it was disclosed today.

Chancellor William B. Aycock and Tom Bost, Jr., director of Alumni Annual Giving, said the funds will supplement state appropriations and fill gaps not covered by tax dollars.

The funds were earmarked here during a meeting of the alumni group, presided over by Chairman James W. Poole of Greensboro.

Chief benefits are expected to go for faculty research, graduate fellowships, faculty travel to professional meetings, a Chancellor's "emergency fund" and other uses. Federal Troops To March On Little Rock

Ozark Guard Nationalized; Chaos Mounts

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
Helmed paratroopers from the 101st Airborne Division took up stations around Little Rock Central High School last night while hundreds of people looked on.

There was no immediate reaction from the crowd.

Strife-torn Little Rock, rocked by a day and night of racial violence, reacted to President Eisenhower's order to federalize the Arkansas National Guard with surprise, approval and dismay.

Eisenhower's order was interpreted at the State Capitol to mean that the federalized guardsmen will be under orders from Washington now, and that they will be detailed to keep in Little Rock.

President Eisenhower in a broadcast address last night appealed to citizens of Arkansas, "to assist in bringing to an immediate end all interference with the law."

Lt. Gov. Nathan Gordon, after first refusing comment said: "Upon proper request from the local authorities, I was prepared at all times to call out the National Guard to help preserve the public peace. I have never received a request from the local authorities."

In Birmingham, Ala., Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas said in an interview state authority would have settled Little Rock's school integration problems without violence if President Eisenhower "had let law and order to us."

Faubus said "as long as the National Guard was in control, not a blow was struck, nor property damaged."

In Washington, the Defense Department said regular U. S. troops probably will be sent to Little Rock, Ark., to help enforce school integration. They would augment Arkansas National Guardsmen called into Federal service.

Secretary of Defense Wilson Federalized the Arkansas Guardsmen just two hours and three minutes after President Eisenhower had directed him to take such action.

Eisenhower, in an executive order signed at his Newport, R. I., vacation headquarters, said he acted because "certain persons in the state of Arkansas, individually and in unlawful assemblages, have willfully obstructed enforcement of a federal court order for racial integration at Little Rock's Central High School."

The White House was emphatic in declaring it had a firm legal basis in taking its action.

Gov. Faubus yesterday questioned the president's legal authority to use federal troops in Little Rock unless requested by the governor.

James C. Hagerty, the president's press secretary, told a news conference today that "people quoting the laws on the president's (See TROOPS, page 3)

Administrative Doors Opened For 1st Time

By BEN TAYLOR
In a surprise move yesterday the Chancellor's Cabinet extended a formal invitation to top student body executives to attend its future meetings.

The long-awaited invitation came to Student Body President Sonny Evans' desk Tuesday afternoon, asking that student body officials sit in on future meetings of this top executive body.

It was expected to enable student body officers to narrow the gap between the "big six" and student government on matters concerning students here.

The letter formally invited Evans, Student Body Vice President Don Futada and Daily Tar Heel Editor Neil Bass to attend this year's first meeting September 30.

Evans immediately issued a statement calling the action a predecessor to "a new era in administrative and student government relationships."

He said the student body here "owes an immeasurable debt of thanks to both Dean Weaver and Chancellor Aycock, for at least we can emerge as junior partners of the University."

"It has long been the hopes and desires of individuals in student government to participate in the far-reaching and essential things in the University," Evans declared.

"However," he added, "it could never be done so long as we did not have representation on those bodies which set this long-range policy."

Evans said that student expression within the Cabinet will "make for a more mutual understanding of problems facing everyone."

He called the action "a time of great moment," adding, "we are at the beginning of a new era in administrative and student government relationships."

Peace To Be Preserved

WASHINGTON — The United States has reaffirmed its determination to preserve peace in the Middle East and has joined Britain and France in denouncing Russia for inflaming hatreds there.

The State Department made public a diplomatic note, couched in blunt language, handed today to the Soviet foreign ministry in Moscow.

It said similar notes were delivered by the French and British.

They were the latest in an exchange touched off Feb. 11 when Russia called for a big four declaration condemning use of force in the Middle East.
