Queen To Be Named At Dance

Who will be the Homecoming Queen?

No one will know until the night of the Homecoming Hop which will be this Friday in Woollen Gym after the pep rally.

Each boys' dorm and fraternity house has been asked by GMAB and the University Club, co-sponsors of the Homecoming weekend, to nominate a candidate for the Queen.

The court of ten will be picked by a panel of six judges this Thursday at 4 p. m. in Gerrard Hall. The names of the ten finalists will be kept secret until the dance.

At this time they will be presented, and afterwards those at the dance will vote for the Homecoming Queen, who will be presented and crowned at the end of the dance.

The candidates will be escorted to the dance by a member of the dorm or fraternity which is sponsoring her. The queen and her court will also be presented at Saturday's game, where they will be escorted on the field by members of Seaboard and Blade.

Quite a few dorms and fraternities have not yet let the committee for the dance know who their candidate is, according to Mary Moore Mason, co-chairman of the Homecoming Hop.

These fraternities and dorms are requested to inform the Graham Memorial Information office immediately who their candidates are. Wednesday at 3 p. m. is the deadline for entries.

The following girls have been nominated so far: Carol Tieslau, Beta Theta Pi; Caroline Osborne, Kappa Alpha; Patsy Posthorne, Mu Gamma Phi; Ruth Hoffman, Joyner; Martha Fortune, Chi Psi; Frances DeArmon, Chi Phi; Coleman Jenkins, Pi Kappa Alpha; Marsha McCord, Delta Upsilon; and Betty Barnes, St. Anthony Hall.

Besides the Homecoming Dance, numerous activities have been planned for the weekend. There will be a parade, containing the Homecoming Queen candidates on Friday afternoon; that night there will be a pep rally in Woollen Gym.

On Saturday there will be numerous half-time activities at the game. After the game, there will be reception for UNC alumni in Graham Memorial.

UP Nominates For Fall Balloting

Cabinet Says Tatum Acted In Rights

Thomas Champions Equal Rights

Socialist Lashes At Faubus

"A nation cannot be a nation without equality of rights for all," six-time Socialist Party Presidential candidate Norman Thomas said last night before a packed house in Carroll Hall in the first Carolina forum speech of the year.

"I do not consider civil rights in any of its aspects a sectional or regional issue," Thomas added. He cited cases of interracial friction in such cities as New York, Chicago, and Detroit in support of this view.

Delving largely with the problem of white-Negro conflict in his talk, Thomas said that at an earlier time in American history the doctrine of "separate but equal" might have had its place. But, he felt, in this modern age with its climate of opinion, this doctrine must be discarded.

He said that he has not always been in favor of the Supreme Court's decisions and even at one time in his political career sponsored a resolution to limit the powers of the Court. He however, said that it is never right to question the decision of the Court, but rather if an honest disagreement should occur the legislative background to both the Court and the Court's action should be called in to question.

He maintained that the Supreme Court decision involving segregation of public schools was right, and that no individual, governor, or state should take it upon itself to override the decision. He added that the police power of any state is there necessarily to protect those who abide by the law, and defend the public against those who go against the law.

Thomas added that no man in the course of recent American history has taken so much upon himself and destroyed so much good will for America abroad as Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas.

He quoted a U. N. delegate who said when Sputnik was launched that it was a pity that Sputnik had to come on the heels of Little Rock.

So great, Thomas felt, was the effect of the showing of American inequalities to the world.

Thomas went to some length to hold in support of segregation. One disclaim the truth of many beliefs such belief, he assailed, was the Biblical notion of God defining the boundaries of the separate races. He said that despite God's setting the bounds, the Negroes made it to America under white auspices.

The belief that intermarriage should be a deterrent to integration was assailed by Thomas, who felt that intermarriage would not necessarily follow, but that despite legislation to the contrary interracial unions, which were of necessity extra-legal and perhaps clandestine, had taken place.

He said he planned to fly back to the States Wednesday by way of New York.

Suspension Of Players Is Studied

BY ANN FRYE

The UNC administration yesterday upheld Coach Jim Tatum's suspension of three Tar Heel football players and said he has "jurisdiction to determine the consequences of training rule violations."

The Chancellor said that Tatum's responsibility is only to report any possible violation of the Honor Code to the Student Government.

Tatum can recommend to the Scholarship Committee that the scholarship held by the student be discontinued, but the final decision is up to the Committee, according to Chancellor Aycock.

In commenting on the Cobb Dormitory experiment in which all football players live in that dorm, Chancellor Aycock said the experiment will be evaluated at the end of the year and its worth will be determined then.

Chancellor Aycock said the athletic responsibility here falls directly on his shoulders.

Student Government officials yesterday were studying a petition submitted to the Chancellor's Cabinet calling for investigation of Daily Tar Heel editorial policy during the recent influenza siege here.

The petition—reputedly signed by only eight persons—was turned over to the top administrative body of the University during the meeting yesterday.

In other business before the Cabinet, Chancellor Aycock said that no decision has been reached on whether the football caravan weekends will be continued in the future.

Student Body President Sonny Evans presented to the Cabinet three problems to be discussed at the administrative-student level:

- 1) Since the honor system of reporting class absence had proved successful during the flu crisis, Evans requested that the cut system reporting for all regular sick absences;
 - 2) Evans urged consideration on the question of classes being resumed after Christmas on January 2 in view of allowing traveling time for people living far away. However, it was stated at the meeting that any calendar adjustment would be impossible, since each class must meet a minimum of 45 times.
 - 3) On the flu crisis, Evans said that the (policies) of the Daily Tar Heel had not expressed the opinions and feelings of the Student Body.
- On the progress of the parking lot near Kenan Stadium, J. A. Branch, business manager, told the Cabinet he expected it might be finished in late November.
