Japanese Diet Member Visits UNC After 40-Year Absence

Hiroshi Momiyama, Japanese Diet member who is visiting in Chapel Hill for the first time in 40 years and lecturing to student and faculty political science groups, told a class here that "40 years may seem quite a long time to you. But I feel as if I have just come back to Chapel Hill to get ready for a new semester after a few months' vacation."

Momiyama received his master's degree in economics here in 1917. He is leader of the Liberal-Democratic Party in Japan.

Momiyama told the students and faculty that he went into an eclipse politically when Tojo and the militarists came to power in Japan. "I am glad to tell you, however, that in those dark and stormy days I never gave up my firm conviction," he said, "of freedom and democracy which student life at Chapel Hill gave me."

"My long political career has been a continuous struggle for the achievement of this cause, and it is not too much to say that I owe my political philosophy largely to my Alma Mater."

The Japanese political leader reviewed new economic and political progress in Japan since World War II.

Speaking of the changes in the campus here, Momiyama said, "You might well consider me a Rip Van Winkle returned from Japan. Both the town and campus are very much larger and busier than before. It is wonderful to be here, reviving many pleasant associations of those happy old days, and showered with your warmth and hospitality."

Momiyama will be in Washington, D. C. next week to continue a mission for the Japanese government on a matter affecting Okinawa.

Tar Heel Cagers Overwhelm Hapless Clemson, 79-55 For 33rd Straight

UNC Leads At Half, 39-14; Kearns' 32 Paces Attack

Carolina's national basketball champions built up an overwhelming 39-14 halftime lead and coasted to an easy 79-55 victory over the Clemson Tigers in Woollen Gym yesterday afternoon in the Tar Heel's season opener.

The victory was the 33rd straight for Coach Frank McGuire's tall and talented cagers who handled Press Mavarich's charges with much the same ease with which they thrice mastered the Tigers on the way to the NCAA title last season.

A jam, packed crowd of about 6,500 screaming students and a tremendous regional television audience watched the highly-regarded McGuire machine build up that tremendous first half margin and then lose a little fire as the Tigers came back to outscore Carolina in the second half.

Little Tommy Kearns, the Tar Heel's 5'11 senior guard from Bergenfield, N. J. and an All-America pick in several pre-season polls, demonstrated the glittering prowess which gained him that recognition as he poured through 32 points and played an outstanding floor game.

It was never any contest but the vociferous Tar Heel cheering section made it seem like a repeat of the Kansas affair last March as they welcomed their beloved Tar Heels in the best Dixieland manner. The crowd cheered the Tar Heels individually, and as a group, it gave injured Joe Quigg and Coach Frank McGuire a rousing ovation. It welcomed the Tigers cordially and there was even a tiny murmur for the referees.

McGuire juggled his lineup freely throughout this ACC affair as 11 Tar Heels took part in sending Clemson down to its third straight defeat. Sophomores Dick Kempley and Lee Shaffer started for the Tar Heels, Kempley at center and Schaffer at forward.

From the time Kempley dropped in the first basket with 23 seconds gone in the first half, it took the hapless Tigers almost a full seven minutes to register their first field goal. And the obviously ner-

Judith To Be Produced Despite Moore Decision

By CURTIS GANS

Jean Girardoux' "Judith" will be presented tonight at 8 p.m. in Graham Memorial's Main Lounge, without Harry Moore, former graduate art student from Elizabethtown, in the cast.

Moore last night decided not to appeal the decision of Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver that he was ineligible to participate in the play.

Weaver made the decision Wednesday after Moore had voluntarily withdrawn from the University.

Chancellor William B. Aycock in an interview held Saturday afternoon gave the basis for the ruling and said that we assumed full responsibility for Weaver's action.

Aycock said that the primary basis for the ruling was that Moore, as an ex-student, had no right to participate in student activities, which are financed by the students.

Weaver commented that student activities are for student participation.

Aycock added that the fact that Moore is a Negro had to be considered in making his decision. He said that at the present time University policy was that no Negro non-student could participate in student activities.

However, he pointed out that Negro students on campus enjoy equal rights, privileges, and responsibilities with the rest of the University community.

Either factor—that Moore is an ex-student or that Moore is a non-student Negro—would be enough to disqualify Moore's participation in the play, according to Aycock. He added that both factors were taken into consideration before he made his decision.

Aycock (said) there was no written policy covering persons outside the University proper in regard to their participation in student activities.

Moore, when asked for comment on his decision not to file an official appeal with Consolidated University President William Friday, stated:

The administration has reached its decision on the basis of my status as an ex-student. I recognize that this is within their jurisdiction, and in view of this I have no intention of pursuing the matter officially any further.

"However, because I do desire so strongly to participate in "Judith," I hope to talk as an individual to the other people involved, as individuals.

"I wish by so doing to insure that all the pertinent facts have been brought to light with consideration to all parties involved."

Davis Small, senior Playmaker will take Moore's lead role as Holofernes in tonight's production. Carolyn Marsh, graduate English student, will co-star in the part of Judith.

Counsel Unit Needs Advisors

The Campus Orientation Committee is looking for applications from students to serve as counselors for the second semester orientation program.

Any interested student should contact Jerry Oppenheimer, chairman of the Orientation Committee, or Mary Jane Fisher.

Students who previously served as counselors may also participate in the second semester orientation.

Oppenheimer said he hoped counselors who had served before would be able to help out again. "Since this is a very short program, it is extremely important that we have qualified counselors to help the new students make a quick and complete adjustment to Carolina," he said.

Orientation for the second semester will be held Wednesday and Thursday, January 29 and 30. Second semester classes will start January 31.

Yule Campaign Ends Monday

Monday is the last day for adopting a family in the Empty Stocking Campaign, according to Mrs. Mark Hanna, campaign chairman.

The Chapel Hill Junior Service League is sponsoring this campaign to provide for needy families in Orange County during Christmas.

Mrs. Hanna said cash donations are needed now, since many families remain unadopted. Junior Service League members will be operating a booth on Franklin street Monday to collect cash donations.

Latest cash donations include: Order of the Old Well, Rachael Lear, Memory A. Lester, Mrs. F. S. Cates Sr. and Mrs. P. Neal Johnson.

Seven-Man Committee To Study Cut Proposal

By CHARLIE SLOAN

Names of the members of a Faculty Council committee established to investigate the new class excuse proposal will be released after a special Faculty Advisory Committee meeting Wednesday, Dec. 8.

Chancellor Aycock said yesterday he will appoint the seven-member committee before the advisory committee meets and submit the slate to them for approval. The special meeting has been called to thin the group's heavy workload, said the chancellor.

At Friday's Faculty Council meeting Student Body President Sonny Evans, Vice President Don Furlado and Honor Council Chairman George Ragsdale answered faculty members' questions on the proposal.

If the proposal is accepted as it was submitted to the faculty students will be on their honor to notify their instructors when they miss a class due to illness.

When asked how such a system would be enforced, Ragsdale told the group that it would be easier to spot attendance violations than it is to pick out people cheating on exams. He pointed out that a person's roommate would know if the person was missing a class due to illness or if he was "just staying in bed reading a comic book."

Dr. Hedgpeth said that using illness for an excuse is not good.

Boyd To Speak At Nurses' Tea

Dr. Bernard Boyd, chairman of the Department of Religion, will be the featured speaker at a tea in the Nurses' Dorm at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

Dr. Boyd's talk on "The Role of the Counselor as an Example" will be the third in the series of In-Service Training Programs, sponsored this year by the office of the Dean of Women.

These programs are developed by dormitory hostesses working under the Dean of Women. They are directed toward the special needs of those working closely with the women's program.

Hostesses, graduate counselors, sorority alumnae advisors and other groups concerned directly with student personnel have been invited to attend.

for the students' mental health. He said the proposal would save the infirmary much "bargaining for infirmary excuses" by students.

Another member of the council pointed out that the way the proposal is set up, some instructors may not grant any excuses at all and others may be too lenient. Ragsdale pointed out that the fifth part of the proposal leaves the final power to grant excuses with the offices which now have it. Students would appeal alleged abuses to these offices.

Students abusing the regulation would be violating the Honor Code and therefore subject to Honor Council action.

Evans pointed out that the system proposed by the student government is not too different from the present one. Under the proposed system students would seek excuses directly from their instructor instead of from their dean or the infirmary.

Dr. Hardre To Deliver Lecture

Dr. Jacques Hardre will deliver the winter season Faculty Lecture in the Division of Humanities at the University of North Carolina on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Carroll Hall.

Professor Hardre's subject is "Surrealism: The Twentieth Century Renaissance."

A graduate of Guilford College, Professor Hardre received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at Carolina and has been a member of the faculty of the Department of Romance Languages since 1945. He was born in Dinon, France, and during World War II served in the French Army in 1939-40 and in the Free French Army from 1942 to 1945.

His interest in contemporary French literature has resulted in studies of the existentialism of Jean-Paul Sartre, literary critic. Professor Hardre is currently engaged on a full-length biography of Cavalier de la Salle.

Since 1944 the Humanities Division has presented the quarterly lectures by University faculty members teaching arts and literature. The lectures are held particularly for UNC undergraduates, but are open to all interested persons.

'What Every Woman Knows' Is Next On Playmakers' Schedule

By DAVE PETERSON

Marion Fitz-Simons, star of the Playmakers production of "What Every Woman Knows," is a former teacher of drama, actress, illustrator and faculty wife. She will perform in her latest role Wednesday through Sunday in the Playmakers Theatre.

In "What Every Woman Knows," Mrs. Fitz-Simons plays the role of the Comtesse de la Briere, a frolicsome widow who discovers the true reason for the political success of the leading man.

Married to Foster Fitz-Simons, director of the Playmakers staff, the versatile actress has played many roles with the group during her residence in Chapel Hill as a faculty wife. They include Lady Macbeth, Medea, the mother in "Blood Wedding," and the Dowager Empress in "Anastasia."

In addition to her work as an actress, Mrs. Fitz-Simons is the mother of four very energetic boys. Prior to her marriage she was instructor of drama at Hood College, Frederick, Md., and at Women's College, Greensboro. She has done summer stock work at the Yacht Club Theatre, Nantucket, Mass.; the Asheville Summer Theatre; "The Lost Colony," Manteo; "The High land Call," Buie's Creek; and "Unto These Hills," Cherokee.

She directed "Heaven Bound," an all-negro show for the Federal Theatre in Raleigh in 1936, and "East Lynne" for the Burnsville Summer Theatre in 1949.

With her husband she wrote "We, the Women," served as an associate editor with Samuel Selden under Archibald Henderson for the Koch

Memorial edition of the Carolina Playbook, and illustrated Josefine Niggli's "Mexican Village."

This production of "What Every Woman Knows" provides another personal performance for the talented and capable artist. Tickets for the production are now on sale at 214 Abernethy Hall and Ledbetter-Pickard. All seats are reserved at $1.50.

vous, Palmetto representative could manage but five field goals during the entire first half as the Tar Heels threw up a stout zone defense, which kept the Tigers outside and allowed the McGuiremen to control the boards with exceptional ease.

The Tigers hit 12.8 of their shots in that half while the Tar Heels connected for 53.5.

CAROLINA OUTSCORED
Although outscored 41-40 in the final half, the Tar Heels were even more effective from the floor to hold Payne although Payne pleaded innocent.
