Striganov: Church Has No Important Role In USSR Life

By ANN FRYE and CURTIS GANS

Sergei Striganov startled his Symposium audience Tuesday morning by saying that the church plays "no role in Soviet culture."

The remark was made during the question and answer period after speeches by Striganov, charge d'affaires of the Soviet Union, and Frederick T. Merrill, director of public affairs in the Department of State in a packed Memorial Hall.

Striganov's speech had contained his definition of Soviet culture and its embodiment in the sciences, art, education and other phases of life. The separation of church and state in Soviet society in his speech provoked the question, "What is the role of the church in Soviet culture?"

Merrill said that development of Soviet culture "is impressive as described by Striganov." Both his and Striganov's speeches concerned the cultural development in both countries, with an emphasis on scientific development and the fine arts as encouraged in both countries.

Questioning what Striganov had referred to as humanitarian aspects of Soviet culture, a student asked the Russian: "What was the humanitarian aspect of the Hungarian revolt?"

Hungarian Revolt

Striganov answered that in the revolt "a small fraction of people raised its hands against the government elected by the people. This (Hungarian) government asked the Soviet Union to assist them in handling this situation. We consider this assistance as a humanitarian act. Nobody knows how many people would have been killed in Hungary if the revolt had developed further."

In his speech, Merrill accused the Soviet Union of placing limitations on information in comparison with freedom of the press in this country.

2,000 Newspapers

Striganov had cited 2,000 as the number of newspapers published in the Soviet Union. When questioned about the relationship of these newspapers to the government, Striganov said that a small percentage were published by the Communist party and others were published by the government, public organizations, labor organizations and youth organizations, all of which reflect the views of the organization.

Carter Names Campaign Staff

Bob Carter announced yesterday the appointment of Leon Holt, a junior from Julian, as his campaign manager. Holt is at present a student legislator.

Carter also announced the appointment of three assistant managers. Miss Jackie McCarthy, a grad student, will be in charge of campaigning in sororities and women's dorms; Paul Carr, a senior will be in charge of the men's dorms and fraternities and Whit Whitfield, a senior, will manage the campaign among commuters and the outlying areas.

Carter has asked that all others interested in helping with the campaign contact either him or Leon Holt at 303 Grimes or call 8-9192.

Jones Named To UP Position

The University Party has announced the appointment of Jerry Jones as assistant to the party chairman, Syd Shuford. Jones primary duties will be working with legislative candidates and coordinating their campaigns.

Other appointments were, Susan Saunders, chairman of the office staff, and Chuck Flack, publicity chairman. Miss Saunders will assist in planning meetings, and Flack will handle Party publicity as well as assist the candidates with their individual publicity.

Shuford stated that this group is the nucleus of the UP staff. He added, "No finer group exists in my opinion. I have the utmost confidence in these people."

Five-Way Race Pringle Pipkin Is Fifth Candidate To Seek Top Daily Tar Heel Position

Veteran Tar Heel staffer A. Pringle Pipkin, sophomore from Reidsville, today announced he will run in spring elections for editor of the campus newspaper.

The election thus became a five-way race between Pipkin, Miss Ann Frye, Curtis Gans, Charlie Sloan and John Whitley.

Pipkin's announcement follows almost two years' experience on the Tar Heel news staff, in addition to other work as columnist, night editor and proof reader.

He has specialized in reporting events within student government and last fall began a column which probed the actions and implications of political affairs at the University.

Before coming to Carolina, he was editor of his school newspaper for two years, feature editor of the yearbook and associate editor of a school literary magazine.

Symposium Split Profit Plan Urged By Reuther

Victor Reuther, Jonathan Daniels and Spencer Love addressed the fifth meeting of the Tenth Carolina Symposium last night.

Reuther a labor leader, asserted that the clamor to call men to action has not been sounded and that much confusion now exists as to what the individual can do.

The current unemployment of 5 million he said was undermining the faith of the people. Modern technology should rule out all want he said.

Ninety-six billion dollars has been lost through the failure of the United States to fully mobilize its industry capacity. "We can win the cold war if we utilize our resources," he explained.

He proposed a profit sharing program where the workers would get 25 per cent of the profits. The country needs citizens with more buying power, he said.

"Our purchasing power has not kept pace with our ability to produce," he said. To allow the country to go into a depression he said would be proving the Communists' major thesis that capitalism destroys itself.

He said, however, the problems were not insurmountable and was convinced that this country is more than equal to the problems now facing it.

Editor Daniels of The Raleigh News and Observer discussed the subject of "The Indestructible Tradition."

This tradition is the "Ancient American faith" which grew out of "the hearts of men." "Our chief occupation should be not with their revolution (Russia's) but with ours" (the revolt in 1776). He claimed the greatest danger to our survival was the fact that the American revolution had become a "remote irrelevancy" to the people on "old crowded continents."

Russia's recent scientific success has "immeasurably improved" the chances of survival. The "newest weapon" is still this country's oldest faith.

Burlington Industries President Love stated that the American directed "is one of survival and continued growth, approached from any angle."

While Love was optimistic about the growth of America values, he said he was not complacent. Speaking of Toynbee's theory of challenge and response, he said this country still had many problems to face.

In the past increased demands had stimulated production he said and this country must work for its traditions "because they are in some form or other what the world truly wants and needs."

UP Candidates

All University Party candidates will meet in Roland Parker Lounge 2 in Graham Memorial at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Legislative Candidates

There will be a meeting of all Student Party legislative candidates today at 3 p.m. in Student Party Headquarters, third floor, New West.

Minority Privileges Discussed

"Minority Rights: The Survival of Individual Freedom" was the topic of an informal question and answer discussion conducted by Ben Segal and Michael Harrington yesterday afternoon.

The discussion, sponsored by the YM-YWCA Human Relations Committee, was held in the Library Assembly Room.

Ben Segal, Director of the Trade Union Program on Civil Liberties and Rights, presented the unions' point of view on civil liberties and discrimination among workers.

Michael Harrington, staff member of the Fund for the Republic and former associate editor of the Catholic Worker, discussed the Catholic as a minority group.

"Among other questions, Mr. Segal was asked, 'What efforts are the unions making to fight discrimination in the South and what problems do they run into in this fight?'"

In reply, Segal stressed that most of the unions of the AFL-CIO are in favor of integration and Civil Rights. However, he said that the biggest problem lies in the fact that the philosophy of the leaders does not trickle down to the rank and file worker.

The gap between the leader and the worker presents, both a problem and an opportunity for unions. In this gap the "race-hate" groups have made the greatest inroads, however, he said that the gap also provides the union with the opportunity to come in and educate the worker and thus change some unfounded attitudes.

Harrington said that he felt that if a Catholic were nominated for the presidency in 1960, he could escape the fate of Al Smith in the election of 1928. The fact that a very strong Southern delegation supported Kennedy's nomination for the vice-presidency in 1956 shows, Harrington feels, that religious barriers in politics are coming down.

Dinner Fetes Dr. McBride

Dr. Katherine McBride, president of Bryn Mawr College, was entertained at a dinner in Spencer dining hall Monday evening.

A massive spray of yellow jonquils appointed the head table in the dining room, while miniature arrangements were featured on each individual table.

Magnolias, flanked with breath of spring and azaleas were used to create a springtime atmosphere throughout the receiving rooms of the dorm.

Special guests for the event included Mrs. William Friday; Chancellor and Mrs. William Aycock; Dean Katherine Carmichael; Dr. Dorothy Atkins of the Psychology department; Dean and Mrs. James Godfrey; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles McKensie.

Official hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Norman Bissell, Spencer Hall hostess, and Mrs. Bessie R. Buchanan, dining hall hostess.
