Legislature Tables 'Clause'

By PRINGLE PIPKIN

By a vote of 20 to 13 the Student Legislature moved to table Roger Foushee's (SP) resolution dealing with discriminatory clauses in constitutions of student organizations.

This resolution was to ratify the National Student's Association's Basic policy "declaration on student responsibilities and rights."

The discriminatory issue was brought out by section 10 of the declaration, which says student organizations will be recognized "provided that the constitution or purposes shall not include discriminatory clauses to race, or as to religion . . ."

The ways and means committee added this section. "However, recognition may not be denied to a student organization because of racial or religious clauses contained in its national charter."

Foushee moved that the amendment of the ways and means committee be stricken from the resolution. The committee's change was contradictory he said.

The resolution received considerable and heated debate. Tog Sanders (UP) said that the Legislators had not consulted their constituents and that the Legislature was acting rapidly on a matter which "involves everyone on the campus."

If the resolution is not brought off the table before the last session of Legislature, then it will automatically be killed.

The Legislature passed Foushee's resolution to ratify the NSA declaration on academic freedoms.

Then the body began work on the report of the procedures committee, which is setting up the procedures for the Juries and the new Honor Councils.

After the first section of the first article had been read, this report was tabled.

After the Legislature had heard and approved the report of Charlie Huntington, chairman of the Honor System Commission, it moved special orders on a bill introduced by Dave Biren (UP).

This bill amended the Honor System Commission, it moved special orders on a bill introduced by Dave Biren (UP).

The procedures committee report was brought off the table. The Legislature continued in its consideration of the report.

FOR EDITOR

Selections Board Makes Report On Candidates

The selections board for Editor of The Daily Tar Heel met on Monday and Wednesday and approved four of the five candidates to appear before it.

This in no way disqualifies the fifth candidate from running, a spokesman of the board said.

This board was set up by the Student Legislature, on recommendation of the Newspaper Research Committee to screen candidates for Editor of The Daily Tar Heel and provide the campus with some factual basis for their selection.

The selections board issued statements with regard to each of the candidates. They follow in alphabetical order:

ANN FRYE: Ann Frye impressed the board as an adequately experienced newspaper woman, and excellent student, a stable individual, and a good citizen. The board feels that she would produce a newspaper with which the student body could be proud.

CURTIS GANS: It is the opinion of the selections board that Mr. Gans experience in connection with this post is adequate to qualify him as a worthy candidate for the editorship. He has demonstrated a high degree of interest and proficiency in all the aspects of the Daily Tar Heel and a thorough working knowledge of its organization and operation.

PRINGLE PIPKIN: The board feels that Mr. Pipkin has adequate experience on The Daily Tar Heel as a newsman to qualify him for the job as Editor. The board further feels that he has the ability to handle all aspects of the paper and that he is well informed on campus and current affairs.

CHARLIE SLOAN: Mr. Sloan's experience on The Daily Tar Heel is adequate as is his journalistic experience elsewhere. We feel that the students will be adequately re-

Harry Ashmore, Benjamin Fine Talks Terminate Carolina Symposium Today

Defense Discussed

By DAVE JONES

"If North Carolina and its citizens expect to survive possible nuclear attack, they must plan and train to survive," said State Sen. Wilbur M. Jolly as he opened the panel discussion on North Carolina Civil Defense yesterday afternoon in Carroll Hall.

Senator Jolly is North Carolina Survival Plan Director.

"At no time in the history of the world has there been such a potential for destruction. Our greatest single problem is to conceive what the effect of such an attack would be," he continued.

In stating the reasons why the experiences of World Wars I and II are not applicable to today's situation Senator Jolly said that our allies and our military were able to hold the aggressors at bay long enough for our nations production to be implemented into the war effort. However, in our next conflict the areas will be the first target.

Must Cope With Attack

"We must plan to cope with attack by an enemy which possesses a nuclear weapon powerful enough to release the destructive power in a single bomb that is equal to the combined destructive power of all the bombs that were dropped on Germany during World War II."

Other members of the panel were Maj. James W. Denning, communications officer, North Carolina Council of Civil Defense, and Col. Vachel D. Whatley Jr., assistant projects director, chief planner of the North Carolina Survival Plan, N.C. Council of Civil Defense.

Gen. Edward F. Griffin, director of the N.C. Council of Civil Defense, was unable to attend this panel, due to a Civil Defense operation which could not have been scheduled in advance. His duties as chairman were performed by Senator Jolly.

Communications System

Major Denning outlined the North Carolina communications system and its objectives. They are three in number:

1. To gather information and intelligence. This concerns such items as damage done to hit areas and facts concerning enemy operations.

2. Dissemination of information and intelligence. This can be accomplished by means of the news media, the National Warning System (NAWAS) and by state communications systems.

Dean Carmichael To Attend National Meet

Dean Carmichael, dean of women, is to represent UNC at a meeting of women deans and counselors.

The meeting of The National Association of Women's Deans and Counselors is to be held in St. Louis March 27-30.

What Has It Meant?

A Closer Look At Symposium Week

By DAVIS YOUNG

What kind of a week has it been for you? If you're like most Carolina students, it's been a week of enjoyment and education with the Carolina Symposium.

It hardly seems that a week has gone by for some of us, but for others, particularly those closely associated with the Symposium it's been a lot longer than a week.

As this year's program comes to a close, let us look in retrospect at the names of the six individuals most responsible for this fine week. Sonny Hallford has served as chairman and has given willingly of his time for the past five months. He has had to oversee all of the phases of this monumental project and in the end has often been called upon for the decisions which affected the program.

William Geer of the social science staff, is the faculty advisor and has been another important cog in the Symposium's ever turning wheel. Along with Hallford, he has been most responsible for this year's event.

Mary Jane Fisher the able secretary has probably set a new all time record for the most correspondence ever written on this campus. For five months and at least five hours every day, she has been busily engaged at her typewriter. For her outstanding work, she was awarded membership in the Valkyries.

Herman Godwin, executive secretary, was the jack of all trades around the symposium office. He was called upon to do a great variety of tasks and, according to Chairman Hallford, performed them all "exceeding well." When the Symposium ends, he will assume his new post as chairman of Orientation.

Jerry Oppenheimer, vice chairman, has been most responsible for arranging the present program. In addition to serving as vice chairman, he also headed the program committee.

Al Goldsmith has done a splendid job as treasurer. Almost entirely due to his efforts, the Finance Committee raised over $5,500 dollars to cover expenses. At the termination of this week he will begin his campaign for the presidency of the student body on the University Party ticket.

The list does not stop here either, for attention could be called to the fine work of Mrs. Anne Beale Sanders, general office secretary, to the committee chairman or to various faculty members. However, the names of Hallford, Geer, Fisher, Godwin, Oppenheimer and Goldsmith must come first.

AUBREY BROOKS

Scholarship Finalists Convene Here Saturday

By WINDHAM HEWITT

Brooks Scholarship finalists were announced Thursday. Finalists are from 11 counties in "The Old Imperial Fifth District."

The candidates will come to Chapel Hill Saturday to appear before the Central Committee. The interviews will be held in the Morehead Building. The winners will be announced at a 1 o'clock luncheon, to be held at the Carolina Inn.

Winners may attend any three branches of the Consolidated University.

This will be the third class to receive benefits of the scholarship set up by the late Aubrey Lee Brooks, of Greensboro. The scholarship was established December 1955.

Criteria for the award are scholarship achievement, need, evidence of character and leadership.

University Party

Opens Headquarters

The University Party has opened campaign headquarters in the Yack office in the basement of Graham Memorial.

Syd Shuford, Party chairman, announced that the office will be open daily from 1 to 4 p.m.

Hook Unable To Make Scheduled Trip Here

By DAVIS YOUNG

Today will mark the termination of the 1958 Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs with the appearance of Harry Ashmore at 10 a.m. in Carroll Hall. He will be immediately followed by Benjamin Fine, after a short intermission to allow students having 11 a.m. classes to leave.

Fine is speaking this morning to make up an address he was scheduled to give last night. His plane was grounded at the Washington Airport.

Ashmore will be speaking on "Education for Survival in the South Today." Fine will address Carolina students and friends on "Major Problems Facing American Education."

Fine will speak again at 8 p.m. This time he is talking on "The Responsibilities of Citizens for Education." This address has been changed from Memorial Hall to Hill Hall.

Ashmore is one of America's best known newspapermen and has served as editor of the Charlotte News as well as the publication which he now heads — The Arkansas Gazette.

During the fall when the Little Rock crisis erupted, he was the leader of the anti-Faibus faction. He is the author of two books, "The Negro and the School" published in 1954 by the UNC Press and "An Epitaph for Dixie" which was published this year.

Born in South Carolina in 1916, Ashmore has had a rapid rise to the position he now enjoys. He is a graduate of Clemson College. Following college, he entered the war and is a much decorated veteran of the Second World War. During 1955, he served for a year as a personal assistant to Adlai Stevenson in his campaign for the Democratic nomination.

Fine has been selected to give this year's Weil Lecture. He is presently serving as Dean of the Graduate School of Yeshiva University in New York and is a former Education Editor of the New York Times.

He is a product of the public school system of New York City and received his undergraduate degree from Rhode Island State University. He also holds three degrees from Columbia University.

He started his journalistic career in 1933 when he worked as a reporter on the New York Post. He went to the New York Times in 1937 and became Education Editor in 1941. He resigned this post last month. In 1943, he was awarded a Pulitzer Prize.

U.S. Participation

Frazer said our participation in the international treaty arrangements is for several reasons.

1. To have a trip wire for early warning of any aggressive action being started against us.

2. To have friendly arrangements with countries across the oceans where we can base counter-forces in close proximity to any would-be aggressors.

3. To enable us to make the best use of powerful moving military platform, Strategic Air Command and the Atomic Navy.

4. To keep the battle line away from our greatest potential, the U.S. Mainland.

5. To defend the vital areas of the world against aggressors and the chaos which occasionally arises from their own weak government organization.

Only Answer

Frazer thought the only answer for peace in the tri-polar world of Russia, the U.S. and the newly freed forces of Africa, India and others was in the formula of regional alliances.

After the address Frazer answered questions from the floor.

"How do you feel about recognizing Red China in the U.N.?"

"Some nations feel the admission of Red China is in order, but most free nations still feel the Communists must make some more open reparation for their action in Korea before they can be admitted to an organization which professes peace above all," he responded.

"Do you think the U.N. is an effective organization?"

"In some instances we have used the U.N. for an open forum in which to trade blows with the Soviet. This action has driven some smaller countries into an even more resigned position of neutrality, he maintained.

Election Petitions

Must Be In Today

Petitions from all independent candidates in spring elections must be in by 5 p.m. today. Elections Board Chairman Bob Furdado has announced. The deadline include all nominations for the parties and selection boards. They either may be turned in personally to the elections board chairman or to the student government office.

Weil Lecture

Fine has been selected to give this year's Weil Lecture. He is presently serving as Dean of the Graduate School of Yeshiva University in New York and is a former Education Editor of the New York Times.

He is a product of the public school system of New York City and received his undergraduate degree from Rhode Island State University. He also holds three degrees from Columbia University.

He started his journalistic career in 1933 when he worked as a reporter on the New York Post. He went to the New York Times in 1937 and became Education Editor in 1941. He resigned this post last month. In 1943, he was awarded a Pulitzer Prize.

Sonny Hallford, chairman of this year's Symposium program, stated yesterday that he was very well pleased with the result of Symposium Week up until now and strongly urged students to make a strong turnout for the last day.

He stated: "The attendance has been good at all sessions this week and we are particularly pleased with the widespread participation in seminars. We are certainly looking forward to a large crowd for Ashmore and Fine today."

"We regret that Sidney Hook was unable to be here as scheduled yesterday morning. However, it was through no fault of his own as he was grounded at the Washington Airport due to adverse weather conditions."
