Sen. W. Kerr Scott Dies In Burlington

BURLINGTON, N. C. (U. S. Sen. W. Kerr Scott, former governor, champion of the farmer and a colorful political figure in North Carolina for the past decade, died here yesterday, from a heart attack. He would have been 52 tomorrow.

Death came at about 4:55 p.m. in Alamance General Hospital, where the tobacco-chewing Junior Senator has been a patient since last Wednesday when he suffered a heart attack.

Scott, noted for his wisecracking ability, apparently had been making good progress in his recovery. Dr. G. W. Blair, his physician, said the attack came without warning.

Scott, in good spirits yesterday, had looked forward to a birthday celebration tomorrow in his hospital room.

The only persons in the room when death occurred were Scott's private duty nurse, Mrs. Ethel J. Shoe, and the hospital supervisor of nurses, Mrs. Esther R. Painter. They said the senator was lying quietly in bed and the only indication that death had occurred was they noticed he had stopped breathing.

Dr. George Smedburg, the physician on duty in the hospital at the time, was summoned. Dr. J. B. Lee, Dr. Blair's associate, said oxygen, artificial respiration and stimulants were administered in an effort to revive him.

Daily Papers Subject Of Press Speech

The small daily newspaper was the theme of Howard White, managing editor of the Burlington Daily Times-News, when he spoke to the Press Club Monday night.

White, graduate of Catawba College and veteran newspaperman, pointed out that a small daily must please the people as well as print the news.

"A newspaper must have a personality like a neighbor or close friend, or it won't be welcomed into the homes of friends," he stated.

He added that the small city paper must be interested enough to cover the smallest story as well as the sensational one if it is to be successful.

In commenting on duties of reporters on small papers, he said that the biggest job was knowing the city, its people and working constantly at keeping confidence in the newspaper.

"Newspapers are printed records. Their chief business is other people's business, and successful coverage depends upon faithful coverage of everything that interests man," concluded White.

Business of the Press Club included plans for a Junior-Senior softball game, reports on formulation of a Journalism professional fraternity and voting on new officers.

The meeting, held at Dean Luxon's home, was the final meeting before annual Press Club banquet which will be held next month. At that time results in the election of new officers will be announced.

GM SLATE

The following activities have been scheduled for today at Graham Memorial:

Student Council, 7-11 p. m., Grail Room; University Party, 6:30-7:30 p. m., Woodhouse Conference Room; Rules Committee, 4-5 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Women's Honor Council, 6:45-10 p. m., Council Room; Jury Interviews, 4-6 p. m., Council Room and 7:30-9:30 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Student Party Caucus, 7-7:30 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge I; Dance Lessons, 7-8 p. m., Rendezvous Room; Chess Club, 6:30-7:30 p. m., Roland Parker Lounge II; Sound and Fury, 8-10 p. m., Rendezvous Room.

Expressions of sympathy began to pour in from throughout the state and nation. In Raleigh, Gov. Hodges said "North Carolina has lost a great and distinguished citizen and public servant."

Hodges said Scott's "vital leadership has been a part of the life of North Carolina for many years. He was a man of strong convictions, a staunch friend of the people of North Carolina and served them well."

Mrs. Scott was in another part of the hospital visiting a sick grandchild at the time of death.

Dr. Lee said Scott's death was "unexpected because of the good progress he had been making." He added the Senator had no pain, no shortness of breath or other indication of a heart seizure.

On Wednesday last week, Scott left his Haw River dairy farm to go to Burlington to get his driver's license renewed. He was accompanied by Mrs. Scott and their son, Osborne.

During the license examination, Mrs. Scott noticed that her husband was perspiring profusely and breathing with difficulty. She suggested that they stop by a doctor's office, where the heart attack was diagnosed and the Senator sent to the hospital.

The backwoods branch-heads and the country crossroads of North Carolina were a political fortress for William Kerr Scott. Surprise, controversy and accomplishment were his trademarks in the public offices he won with the help of loyal farm voters.

He repaid the debt as a free-spoken champion of rural people over a 20-year span as state agriculture commissioner, governor and U. S. Senator. The big, black-haired dairyman from Alamance County gave the state a network of rural paved roads, a new awareness of its farm population, and some memorable political campaigns.

Scott was one of the commanding figures of recent Tar Heel public life. He attracted a legion of steadfast followers, and a host of die-hard enemies.

His character was marked by the strong grain of his Scotch Presbyterian ancestors.

Some called it stubbornness; others said it was loyalty. His speech was native and salty, as apt to sting as to delight. His

University Club Plans Carnival For Freshmen

Committee appointments and an address by Orientation Committee member, Ruth Hoffman headed the agenda of Tuesday's meeting of the University Club.

Miss Hoffman presented the club with the Orientation Committee's plans for a carnival during freshman orientation. She presented a diagram of the floor of the Tin Can as it will look during the Carnival. She explained the system of prizes and told how this could be integrated with the club's program of acquainting the new students with its work. The club was invited to take part.

A committee composed of Walter Keck and Paul Woodard was appointed to work with Miss Hoffman and the Orientation Committee to formulate plans.

Further committee appointments made by President Dave Jones were: Sportsmanship Committee Chairman, Bob Adams; Publicity Committee chairman, Frank Elkins; Beat Dook Co-ordinating Committee co-chairman, Frank Martin and Carter Jones; and 1958 Handbook editor Al Smithson.

Items brought under discussion in addition to the above include, the possibility of having a Caravan weekend, the care of the Victory Bell at the football games next year, and working out a schedule of pep rallies and dances.

IDC Court Rulings

The IDC Court, at a meeting Tuesday night, found eight defendants guilty. The following decisions were rendered: two students were given official reprimands; four were placed on indefinite probation for at least one semester; one was placed on probation for one year; and one was restricted from residing in a particular dorm for one semester.

The first part of his program is usually devoted to serious performance of the classics; the later portion of improvisations, impersonations and a variety of original musical compositions.

As a composer, Templeton is known for both serious and lighter works. He has written two astring quartets, songs, and other works for various instruments. He is also well known for humorous modernizations of the masters as "Bach Goes to Town," and "Mozart Matriculates."

Templeton is not only a classical pianist, but also one of the most tasteful improvisors in the American jazz field. He is one of the few who are associated with both the classics and jazz.

He was blind at birth and has never seen a piano key or any other object, yet today he is one of the foremost concert pianists, having played with the principal symphonies of the world.

At Least Three Carolina Lovelies Trying For Miss Chapel Hill Title

Carolina ladies are renewing the struggle against the rumor passed around by Carolina gentlemen that there is more than a little wanting in coed pulchritude.

And the coeds are entering the battle with weapons that stand a good chance of making liars out of the men students. So far three women students are seeking the title of Miss Chapel Hill in the local eliminations for the Miss America Pageant.

According to Roland Giduz of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, there will probably be more in the race before the contest closes.

The ninth annual Jaycee-sponsored Miss Chapel Hill Pageant will be held here a week from Thursday—on April 24—at 8 p.m. in the Chapel Hill High School auditorium.

Pageant Co-Chairmen Lyman Wilkins and Ted Barnes said about a dozen entrants are expected. The

Rules Discussion Continues; Council Has 'Re-evaluation'

Poll Reveals Coed Majority Against Rules

The first Daily Tar Heel poll revealed that over 56 per cent of women who did not go to Carolina during their freshman and sophomore years do not approve of the new coed rules.

As revealed Tuesday 84 per cent of those women tapped in the poll felt that the new rules needed revision.

The prime points of contention were the rules which dealt with study halls and lights out regulations, although a majority were opposed to limiting weekend permissions.

Some of the comments that the coeds had about these rules included:

"I think that these rules under-

Council Will Not Hear Opposing Side

In its meeting Tuesday night the Women's Residence Council reconsidered at length its previous action on rules changes for freshmen women entering the University. It was specifically the controversy aroused by the proposed changes that led the Council to hold another meeting on them.

The major part of the meeting was spent in "re-evaluation" of the changes, but no concrete action was taken. The Council plans to continue sampling campus opinion among the residents of the women's dorms in an attempt to find out how the women feel about the measures.

The reason given for this approach was that the rules were originally formulated by the outgoing members of the Council, and that therefore the new members, who just took office, are not well acquainted with the background of the changes.

At one time during the meeting there was a motion on the floor to allow a group of opposition women to speak before the WRC on their objections to the changes. The motion was defeated by the members of the Council, and the opposition women were not allowed to speak. It is expected that some final action will be taken on the rules changes at the WRC meeting next week.

Live Muskrat

By AL RESCH

It has been reported that a live muskrat is trapped in the outdoor swimming pool at Woolen Gym.

In view of the fact that we do not like the idea of this little creature being trapped, The Daily Tar Heel is offering a $1 reward to the brave student who will bring the muskrat to this office.

The muskrat may be wet but must be alive when he reaches the Tar Heel office.

The Tar Heel plans to turn this wet animal over to Swimming Coach Pat Earey, and enter him as the newest addition to the swimming team.

In making the announcement, George Ragsdale, former chairman, stated that Patterson was the first man in many years to be elected chairman as a rising junior.

"Patterson has been a member of the Council for two years, having been elected a few weeks after he entered Carolina as a freshman," he added.
