Reunion Here Brings Back Old Memories

Old time UNC track coach Nat Cartmell and eleven of the men he tutored on the cinder path here in 1910-14, have come and gone, and they had a good time.

They were here in a two-day reunion and had an opportunity to see the track Tar Heels of 1958 turn in their best work of the year in flattening Virginia, 89-45.

"You've got some fine runners," Cartmell told Coach Dale Ranson, who had been local chairman of the festivities. "Some of those boys really move in the distance runs, which were my specialty." He especially liked Dave Scurlock and Wayne Bishop, Tar Heel running men.

At a reunion luncheon, Cartmell, a colorful, articulate man of 75 who lives in Forest Hills, N. Y., reminisced over his long coaching career. He retired from coaching a few years ago.

"You fellows I coached at Carolina seemed to want to do something for the college and that's why it was a pleasure to work with you." He added, "I really never coached a bum in my life."

Cartmell said he always felt that "I left a piece of my heart in Chapel Hill," and his wife, who was with him, added, "I think you left all of it here."

About 23 of the men Cartmell coached here are still living, and eleven were able to attend the reunion.

The group consisted of M. E. Blacklock, Sanford; Collier Cobb, Jr., Chapel Hill; Joseph F. Hoffman, High Point; Thomas V. Llorens, Oronofa, Cuba; George B. Mason, Gastonia; William M. Parsley, Charlotte; Earle V. Patterson, Burlington; William H. Patterson, Baton Rouge, La.; Harry M. Solomon, Wilmington; Richard G. Stockton, Winston-Salem; and Daniel McGregor Williams, Durham.

illustrated lecture on "Not So Square A World." His talk will be based on a recent 90-day world tour by which he visited some of the world's troubled spots, addressed cultural groups, talked with the man-in-the-street and gathered material for a new book and background for Pogo's daily doings.

Kelly will discuss the "G. O. Fizzle Year" which he has developed in the Pogo strip.

A particular favorite of American students and faculty groups, Kelly has made more than 200 speeches on college campuses. In his national Pogo-for-President campaign in 1956, over 100,000 students sported "I Go Pogo" buttons.

Kelly is a former two-term president of the National Cartoonists Society and a winner of the coveted "Cartoonist of the Year" award. He is author of 13 books, including "Songs of the Pogo."

Legislature Considers Responsibility

By DAVE JONES

Legislative responsibility was the topic of a policy declaration introduced at Thursday's session of the Student Legislature. Its purpose, according to its authors, Speaker Ralph Cummings (SP) and floor leaders Dave Biren (UP) and Rudy Edwards (SP), is to guide those new legislators who are not familiar with the working of the body.

The declaration asked that all legislators consult with the head of an organization before they introduce anything pertaining to it. It also asked the legislators to consult with the two floor leaders on style and policy and to use the privilege of special orders judiciously.

The first bill of the session, a resolution approving the constitution of the UNC Amateur Radio Club was held in committee. Rules Committee Chairman Neil Boden (UP) reported to the body that there was more work to be done on the club's constitution and by laws before it would be ready for consideration.

John Brooks' (SP) bill giving the legislature a more direct voice in the selection of State Student Legislature delegates, and the last of the previous week's bills, Dennis Rinzler's (SP) resolution asking for the paving of the walk between Lenoir Hall and the corner of Raleigh Street and Raleigh Road, were passed.

Bill Wilson, a freshman from Raleigh, was elected by the body to a three year seat on the Graham Memorial Board of Directors. Harold O'Tuel and Bob Turner were elected to the two year and one year seats on the Publications Board, respectively.

'Battle Of Coeds' Will Be Event Of This Year's Sigma Chi Derby

Kenan Stadium, usually the scene of football games, will see a different type of contest Tuesday when the "Battle of the Coeds" is held.

The event is the 14th annual Sigma Chi Derby which includes pie-throwing events, relay races and other unusual competition.

Climaxing the afternoon will be the "Miss Modern Venus" beauty contest, in which 23 UNC coeds will compete.

The derby will start at 2 p.m. with a parade in downtown Chapel Hill. The actual events are scheduled to begin at 2:30 at the stadium.

Derby entries will come from the seven social sororities on the campus and from women's residence halls.

Mary Cabel Carlan, Candor; Doreen Greenfield, Venezuela, S. A.; Ruth Hoffman, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Nan Schaffer, Tallahassee, Fla.; Betsy Miller, Coral Gables, Fla.; Carolyn Myers, Raleigh.

Sue Voigt, Manhasset, N. Y.; Bonnie Richardson, Atlanta, Ga.; Nancy Evans, Nashville; Linda Watkins, Charleston, S. C.; Martha Fortune, Brevard; Phyllis Kraft, Chicago, Ill.; Beverly Culbreath, Stedman; Hilda Holt, Greensboro; Lynn Merchant, Asheville; Cathy Carden, Burlington and Anne Martin, Atlanta, Ga.

Trophies are given to the organization scoring highest in the overall Derby as well as to "Miss Modern Venus." No admission will be charged and door prizes will be given.

Past derbies have drawn as many as 3,000 spectators since their inauguration at UNC in 1944 by the Alpha Tau chapter of Sigma Chi. The fraternity's chapters throughout the nation stage more than 100 such derbies each year.

Registration will be held Friday morning at Knapp Building preceding the 10 a.m. opening session. Albert Coates, Institute director, will welcome the conferees and Philip P. Green Jr., assistant director, will discuss conference aims.

The relation between state government and local planning will be studied Friday morning, covering such areas as local planning assistance, street planning, school planning, water and sewer planning and economic development.

Five speakers, all from Raleigh and state officials, will be Robert Barbour and J. Edgar Kirk, Department of Conservation and Development; James S. Barch, State Highway Department; John L. Cameron, Department of Public Instruction; and Wilbur E. Long Jr., State Board of Health.

Dennis O'Harrow, executive director of the American Society of Planning Officials, will deliver the conference's principal address on "Planning and the Future" early Friday afternoon.

Planning Conference Planned For May 2

The first annual North Carolina Planning Conference will be held here at the Institute of Government on Friday, May 2. This meeting will bring together public officials and civic leaders interested in the planning and development of North Carolina cities.

Among those invited to the conference are members of planning boards and boards of adjustment.

Local Exhibit Marks Israel Anniversary

An exhibition in observance of Israel's 10th anniversary is currently on display in the foyer of the Wilson Library. It will be shown through May 4.

Arranged under the supervision of Mrs. Myra Lauterer of the library staff, the exhibit was brought together through the efforts of Dr. Reuben K. Gabriel, post-doctoral student in the Department of Statistics, who is on leave this year from his teaching post at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Included are recently published books on Israel; a modern colored scroll "Haggadah" (text of the Passover services); a few of Israel's new ship stamp series and jewelry, figurines and other art objects made in Israel—items which are rarely seen in Chapel Hill.

Mrs. Ruth Fein, wife of Dr. Rashit Fein of the Economics Department, and Mrs. Michaela Gabriel, wife of Dr. Gabriel, contributed a number of the objects.

Misses Jenny Graham, Martha Oliver, June Martin and Ann Rigdins and Russell Norman, Wilbur Ramsey, Edward Riner, Lacy Dilday, William Lytle and Frank Luman.

Iranian World Travelers Now On University Campus

Two young Iranians are here on the UNC campus as part of their ten year motorcycle trip around the world.

Issa and Abdullah Omidvar have completed 65,000 land miles of what promises to be a 150,000 mile tour of the world in an effort to promote peace and cultural understanding among nations.

They are currently staying at the Chi Psi Lodge, and will present a program on one phase of their tour, their arctic expedition, in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial, Tuesday night at 8:30.

Also included in their program is a display of Iranian culture in the Morehead Planetarium starting Monday afternoon and continuing through Wednesday. The Omidvar brothers will also appear in a special taped interview on WUNCTV radio this evening at 7.

The display in the planetarium will include photographs of Iranian architecture, original miniature paintings, handicrafts, carpets, and other items.

These items comprise part of the 400 pound load that they have carried with them ever since they left Tehran four years ago. Included in their pack is much photographic equipment, which they have utilized in making movies, slides, and photographs of the area and people that they have seen.

The idea of the trip was conceived just after the brothers entered college. They subsequently dropped out of school, and proceeded to educate themselves in everything from archaeology to the workings of an internal combustion engine.

Since then, they have run through four sets of tires, and many gallons of gasoline, visited with the heads of state of many countries, climbed many Himalayan mountains, lived with the Bushmen of Australia, visited and lived with the Eskimos in northern Canada and Alaska, and visited many colleges and universities in the United States and other countries.

The majority of their trip is supported by themselves, through their efforts as movie makers, lecturers, and demonstrators. Assistance has been given along the way by people who were interested in them and who offered encouragement for this type of cultural interchange to continue.

The Anglo-Arabian Oil Co. has paid for their gasoline and oil along the way, and the tires have been furnished by a rubber company.

During the trip, the Omidvar brothers have been receiving souvenirs which they have sent back to Tehran in hopes of starting a museum of natural history. However, even when they completed the trip, and have amassed many items from all the countries of the world, there still is a possibility that the museum will not be built for lack of funds. The brothers plan to go on a speaking tour in order to raise funds for the proposed building.

AN AD FOR RAZORS? — No. These are Issa (left) and Abdullah Omidvar while in the Arctic as part of their 150,000 mile, 10-year motorcycle goodwill tour of the world. They will present an illustrated program of their Arctic tour Tuesday from 7:30-9:30 p.m. in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

American And Indian Education Have Resemblance Say Visitors

By EDITH MacKINNON

The higher education system of India bears a marked resemblance to that of the United States according to statements made by Indian educators in a recent visit to UNC.

Winding up a month's stay on the Carolina campus, the three visitors are part of a group of 14 Indian educators making a three-month study of U. S. higher education under the International Educational Exchange Program of the Department of State.

Observing at UNC were Mrs. Mumtaz Jahan Haidar, Dr. M. A. Basir Khan and Mr. Mohibbul Hasan Khan, all of Aligarh Muslim

University in northern India.

The purpose of the exchange program is to promote a better understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries.

UNC is one of eight American institutions playing host to the educators. Other host institutions are Harvard, Princeton, Kansas State, Pennona College, and the Universities of Chicago, Oregon and Michigan.

Following their visit to Harvard, the visitors said they chose Carolina because it was considered one of the best state-supported universities in the South and because of its general college system. While studying the education system in general, the educators planned to concentrate on the general college level.

"The main difference in our systems occurs in the first two years," commented Dr. Basir. He explained that in his university the freshman and sophomore years include a study of the humanities and either social or natural science. At UNC the general college program includes a study of all three fields.

Soft-spoken Mrs. Haidar is principal of Muslim University Women's College and expressed a great interest in the program of the Consolidated University's Woman's College in Greensboro. While visiting Carolina the Indian team made a trip to Greensboro to observe the work at WC. They have also visited Duke University and State College.

Mrs. Haidar commented that they had met quite a few students when she took part in the recent work project sponsored by the University's YM-YWCA. The project took place on St. Helena island in South Carolina.

Dr. Basir is a Reader in Zoology at Aligarh University and said he was looking forward to his forthcoming visit to the UNC Medical Center.

Mr. Hasan is a Reader in history at Aligarh. His particular field of interest concerns the medieval and modern history of India and the field of history and culture of the Middle East.

The Indian team showed a lively interest in the affairs of students on the UNC campus. All three had followed the recent political campaigns closely, and Mrs. Haidar had a favorite in successful student body presidential candidate Don Furtado from Garner.

The campaigns showed a great similarity to the election system of students in their own university, the visitors said. The educators were impressed that UNC political hopefuls put their posters only on bulletin boards and allotted spaces.

"At home they put them everywhere," Dr. Basir commented. "But we let the students do their own cleaning up after the campaigns," he added.

The team asked many questions concerning the relation of students to the administration, the management of student government, sororities and fraternities and political parties.

Commenting on the number of self-help students on the campus, Mr. Hasan asked how this work influenced the academic work of the students.

Although Aligarh University has athletic programs including such games as cricket and rugby, the educators seemed surprised at the amount of time spent in American universities on football and other sports. "Do these football players have to keep their grades up too?" Mr. Hasan asked.

The team was especially interested in the coeducational program in this country. At their own university, coeducation is a fairly recent addition and is now instituted only on the graduate level.

Following their UNC visit, the Indian educators will visit the In-
