Pressure On Tar Heels For Four More Games

By RUSTY HAMOND
Asst. Sports Editor

With the 1958 ACC baseball season rapidly drawing to a close, the standings show two teams all alone at the top of the heap. Clemson, now in first place with a 10-2 record, and Carolina, number two in the loop with an 8-2 mark, will fight it out from now until the end of the season, Duke, in third place with a 6-4 mark, has only a percentage chance of winning, and the rest of the teams are out-of-it, so to speak.

Clemson has only one game remaining, and that is with weak sister South Carolina who has taken only 3 ACC decisions all year. The Gamebirds are, however, the team that put Duke out of contention last week with a win over the Devils. Another factor is the well known rivalry between the two South Carolina schools, similar to that of Carolina and Duke. Clemson had one game rained out, with Duke, last week. In the event that Carolina won all of her remaining games, this game would be replayed because it would directly reflect upon the conference standings.

Pressure On Carolina

The pressure is once again upon Carolina. The Tar Heels are faced with the fact that they must win all four of their remaining games in order to contend for the pennant. The schedule: Duke is here Wednesday, the Tar Heels journey to Virginia Saturday, and Maryland and Wake Forest are on tap for next week.

For Carolina fans who haven't realized how much their presence at a baseball game can help, we offer this bit of info: The Tar Heels have yet to lose a home game to anyone. They have won eight games and lost none in Emerson stadium, while they have dropped six on the road. The Heels have a 16-6 record in all games.

True Tar Heels

On the origin of the species—Other schools may rant and rave to their hearts' content about members of Carolina teams being predominately from out of state, but this situation just ain't so when it comes to baseball. Of the team that usually takes the field for the Tar Heels, all nine are native North Carolinians.

Quigg Case Decided Fairly

Joe Quigg, towering center on the Tar Heels' National Championship basketball team was turned down last week by the ACC in his appeal for two more semesters of play. Quigg entered school four and a half years ago, and played basketball three and a half of these. Last fall, an unfortunate accident in a scrimmage game forced him to lose an entire year of eligibility. So Quigg has but one semester remaining in his career as a Tar Heel, and it must be the first semester of next year. The conference allows an athlete five full years in which to complete his four years of eligibility, and the clock runs out on Quigg next fall.

It is an unfortunate case, unfortunate enough to give Dr. O. K. Cornwell sufficient reason to appeal the conference. Cornwell is faculty chairman of the Athletic Department and was authorized to make the appeal by the faculty committee on athletics. The committee meets again this month, and should they decide to authorize Cornwell for another appeal to the ACC in their fall meeting of next year, which is highly unlikely, Quigg would have a chance. But it would be a very slim one, for most feel that it would only be a replay of this year's decision.

Conference Must Draw Line

The Quigg case is one to cause sympathy and it is a shame that such a fine athlete and gentleman cannot wear the blue and white but one more semester. At the same time, it must be recognized that the conference had no choice in their impartial ruling, that there is nothing dirty or under the table about the decision. The case is an exception, certainly, but when the conference begins to make exceptions, where can the next line be drawn?

The rule remains from the old Southern Conference from which Carolina withdrew with seven other schools to form the ACC. The rule, however, is neither strict or antiquated, as it is used in the same form by most of the leading conferences in the nation, such as the Southwest Conference. The Big Ten allows only eight semesters.

ACC Doesn't Need VPI

It is our opinion that the ACC acted wisely in refusing to admit VPI as the ninth team in the conference. The Gobblers are not especially noted for strong athletic teams, and the ACC stands now as one of the strongest conferences in the nation. A ninth team would also create a hazard in the round-robin rules in football, and make the basketball tournament unwieldy.

Langley And Helms Ranking Players In ACC Tournament

WINSTON-SALEM.—Wake Forest puts its ACC golf championship on the line here Friday and Saturday when firing in the two-day event is staged over the Old Town club links.

The tournament, being staged at Old Town for the fifth consecutive year, is expected to draw entries from all eight members of the conference.

As in past years, team and individual championships will be determined over 36 holes of play with 18 holes slated each day. The team championship is decided on the 36-hole score of the four low individual players from each school.

A new individual champion will be crowned since John Gerring of Wake Forest, who pocketed the title

Tennis Trophy Established To Honor Kenfield

—The John F. Kenfield Memorial Award which has been set up and donated by the Atlantic Coast Conference tennis coaches will be awarded for the first time this year at the conclusion of the tournament which opens here Thursday at 9 a.m.

The trophy was established in memory of the long-time Carolina coach who died this year.

Coach Whit Cobb of Duke University, who is chairman of the conference's tennis committee, said the trophy will be awarded to the team which accumulates the highest number of points in the tournament, based on the one point for each singles and each doubles victory.

In the past singles and doubles champions have been crowned in the tournament. The team winner is determined by the seasonal record. Carolina is team champion for 1952 with six wins and no defeats.

The annual conference tourney will last three days, with the finals scheduled Saturday.

Northern Swing Wind-Up
Harvard And Yale Mar Netters Perfect Record

By ELLIOTT COOPER

Rain and Harvard and Yale prevented the varsity tennis team from having a perfect northern trip.

Rain, the first factor, caused cancellation of three of the six scheduled matches which were to have been played while the team was on the trip. After beating Maryland 9-0 two Saturday's ago the Tar Heels traveled to Williams-town, Mass., to meet the rain. Although the Carolina netters had posted Williams 13-0 in a match at Chapel Hill, the descending waters saved the Ephraim from having to try to even the score.

Tuesday the Carolina team traveled over to Amherst to try again, but the second day in a row the rains beat the Tar Heels. Still undefeated, but quiet wet, coach Vladimir Cernik's netters prepared themselves for their third match in Massachusetts the next day.

Harvard Wins

At Cambridge the weather cleared but as things turned out it would have been just as well for the Heels if the rain had continued. Determined not to be beaten by Carolina twice this season the Harvard netters hung an 8-1 loss on the Tar Heels and dropped them from the ranks of the unbetaten. For the Crimson it made up for the 8-7 match they had lost in Chapel Hill. Only Ben Key's singles victory prevented a shutout.

The next day at Yale it was the same story but a different score; this time 6-3. On this day the Carolinians played much better tennis and with a couple of brakes could have taken the Bulldogs. Five of the six singles matches went sets, but only Steve Bank and Dick Makepeace could pull out a win.

In the number one singles Tar Heel captain Bob Bortner took the first set from Donald Dell- 6-0 but lost the next two and the match. The other win of the day same in Phooey On Mrs. Whistler — Your Mom's A Lively Chick!

Year after year your old book-seller repeats this message, and year after year somebody's mom stops in to thank him.

Don't try to smother mother in moth balls, just because it's her day.

Mom's a lively chick, and she'd like to know that you know it. The old facade may be draped with a bit of embompoint these days, but the same dame that stepped a corrid Big Apple just yesterday is still behind it.

When you look at our Mother's Day cards you'll find we've picked lively, impudent ones-cards that say "Keep off the shelf, kiddo. You're still our candidate for Mrs. North Carolina!" And if you can afford to buy a book, we try to lure you into buying something zippy - and we gift-wrap it tender as all get out.

Save your lavender and old lace for Confederate Memorial day. Mom's dish is firecrackers and fun!

Frosh Batmen Edge Blue Imps

Carolina's freshman baseball team held off a last inning threat and edged Duke's Blue Imps 5-4 in a game here yesterday.

Tar Babies Jerry McNeil pitched the Carolina frosh through eight innings but ran into trouble in the ninth and had to be relieved by John Stott, McNeil was given credit for the win which now gives him a 4-0 record.

McNeil walked two in the ninth before being relieved. Stott came in, loaded up the bases and saw two runs cross the plate before he could bear down and retire the side.

The victory brings the Tar Babies record to 14 wins against 3 losses. The two teams have met twice before. The Tar Babies won the first one, but the second ended in a tie. The same squad will meet Wednesday at Duke.

WAA To Hold Picnic And Watershow

The Women's Athletic association will sponsor two activities today, the annual WAA picnic, and the annual "splash" club water show.

The picnic will be held this afternoon at 5:30 beside the outdoor swimming pool at Woollen Gym. All of the individual awards that are won during the year are presented. Awards are also given to the outstanding seniors, and the outstanding representatives from the dorms and sororities. The highlight of the picnic will be the presentation to the dormitory and sorority that have compiled the most points in WAA this year.

The "Splash" club will present its annual show beginning at 8 p. m. in the indoor pool. The theme of the show is, "WPOOL TV pre-ents splash, splash, splash - the slogan show".

"WPOOL TV" will carry the program live from hotel Bowman Grey. The club has 25 members and is headed by president Ka Smith. No admission will be charged.

An example of what's in store can be seen by the titles of some of the skits. "She ain't sharp enough", "Play it cool", Jackie swims good like a cold should", and the "The ham what am".
