

Harrier Hopes High For '58 Team Title

A healthy Wayne Bishop and an ever-improving Dave Scurlock promise Carolina a top cross-country team this year and perhaps a repeat of the Atlantic Coast Conference title the team won last year.

Gone from last year's team is Ev Whalley, but the nucleus of the team is still there, and many have been running most of the summer and are in fine condition.

Coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton look forward to a highly successful year.

Bishop was unbeaten last year in cross country competition and a repeat of that record is in sight.

The person to give Bishop the most trouble may be Dave Scurlock who is during track season a middle distance runner, but who topped second place in last year's ACC competition.

The Harriers have other runners returning. Cowles Lipfert who showed great ability last year will be returning along with Doug Henderson and Alex Coffin.

Joe Friedberg ought to be ready to compete this year, a host of freshman stars are to come back.

Harvey Miller, Worth Sweet, Neal Chappell, Bobby Foxworth, and John Bowles are all returning to make the two coaches life easier.

The strength and depth of the team will be tested early when they face Clemson at Carolina Oct. 4. The dual meet will be followed by another against Virginia here Oct. 10.

Maryland and Wake Forest invade for a triangular meet Oct. 28 to be followed by a dual meet with N. C. State Oct. 22.

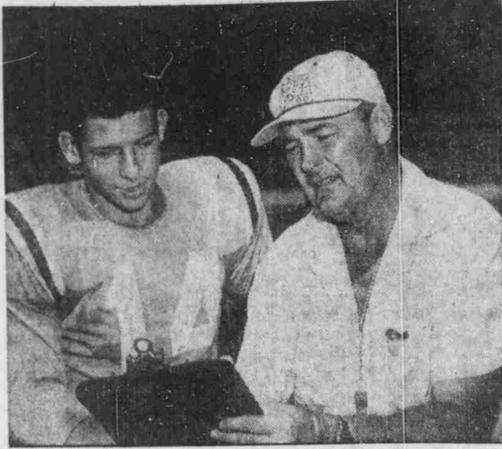

Three New Rules

There are three new rules on the football books that may make for more interesting action on the field this year.

The most controversial of these is the two point rule which enables a team to score two points if it runs or passes for a point after touchdown rather than kicking. A kicked point after touchdown will still count one point.

A second rule which ad many coaches up in arms is the one-armed block rule which is designed to make the game safer and to prevent as many injuries occurring from rough blocking.

Thirdly, teams may substitute more freely, which will probably work as a test of reserve strength during the season. There may be at least a partial return to the two platoon football that was prevalent a few years ago when free substitution was in vogue.

THE COACH AND THE STAR—Jim Tatum going over a play with star quarterback Jack Cummings. Tatum is in his third season coaching the Tar Heels after fourteen years away from Carolina. Cummings is currently having a fight to keep his starting berth from Nelson Lowe.

CU Day First Of Many Festive Football Days

Festivities will highlight all of the Carolina home football games this season.

800 girls from Woman's College in Greensboro will be over for the initial tilt with North Carolina State. State will have a contingent of some 4,500 students to fill the stands for Consolidated University Day.

Both the State Band and the UNC band will perform during the half-time festivities, but the big event of the day will be the choosing of a queen from three candidates selected from each school. Following the game there is a probability of a dance to be held that evening.

A new feature of the game will be the wooden goalposts erected so that both winning and losing sides can vent their emotions without damage to anything of value.

Dave Jones, president of the University Club, and Chuck Erickson, director of athletics are working with people from State to found a permanent trophy between the two schools like the Little Brown Jug of Minnesota-Michigan fame.

The South Carolina game will be Dad's Day, and parents of UNC students are cordially invited to attend, according to Erickson.

The Maryland contest will be a gala Homecoming Day and will have the added attraction that students can bring their dates at half-price. 1000 date tickets will be available at the special rate.

The University Club will sponsor a beauty contest.

The following week Bands from all over the State will participate in band day at Kenan Stadium.

The traditional "Beat Dook" parade sponsored by the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity in which groups from all over the campus make floats and ride down Franklin St. A queen of the parade will be selected as well as the winners of the

Carolina Booters Look To Better 1957 Record

When the Carolina soccer team takes on Lynchburg College at home Oct. 4, the Tar Heels will be looking to better their 2-3-2 record of last year. They are looking possibly to take the Conference championship that was knocked out of their grasp last year by key injuries and close defeats.

Coach Marvin Allen can be hopeful though, for only three regulars were lost from last year's booters and many freshmen who showed up well during the freshman season last year are coming up to the varsity.

Last year's leading varsity scorer Mike Thompson will be back at the center forward position and will probably be better for last season's experience. Coleman Barks, Tom Rand, Charlie Whitefield, Rick Grausman, and Tom Ghanim are all competing for the four other forward slots.

Moreover, they have competition coming up from the freshman team in the person of Joe Perkins, Charlie Lipscomb, Martin Perez, and Dick Hutson.

Jim Rattay will probably be back as goal tender, although he was injured last year.

The back situation is less clear with only two starters back from the 1957 squad. Hugh Goodwin looks like a sure bet for center halfback and Dave Corbey may take over the right fullback chores.

Bob Borden is another holdover from the booters and may play left-halfback.

Coach Allen will have to fill the vacant spots with freshmen and also he hopes to have some newcomers interested in soccer trying out.

Coach Allen has guided the booters for several seasons and has also taught physical education.

The team faces a stiff test after Lynchburg on Oct. 17 when they face Virginia.

After that they go on the road to play Washington & Lee and Pfeiffer College Oct. 20 and 31 respectively, before returning to Carolina.

A three game final home stand pits the Tar Heel booters against Roanoke Nov. 4, against State, trying to avenge their defeat last year, Nov. 7, and against traditionally tough Davidson Nov. 14.

Maryland, perennially the conference kingpin or near kingpin, will be the next test Nov. 17, and the team closes out its season with Duke Nov. 21.

After a year in the doldrums and provided the team stays while, Carolina's booters may do very well this year.

Tar Heels

make life difficult for Tatum's crew, but the North Carolina eleven is a pre-season favorite to take the game on Oct. 11, back in Chapel Hill.

Homecoming day with Maryland is predicted to be happy, for the Tar Heels, anxious to avenge the defeat they sustained last year before Queen Elizabeth, are stronger this year, while the Terps have not improved noticeably.

Wake Forest will be trying to rebound from last year's all-losing season, but may find difficulty here on the last Saturday of the Tar Heel's long home stand.

The Tar Heels are looking for trouble, when they journey to Tennessee, Nov. 1, to meet the single-wing Volunteers. Tennessee beat Carolina last year, and at least one magazine predicts the same result this year.

TAR HEEL COACHING STAFF—The brain trust that makes it possible to turn out a winning team and the trainers who help the players with their every-day-on-the-field needs. Many are UNC alumni and most have either worked under Jim Tatum (left front) as players, as coaches, or both.

Tar Heel Coaching Staff Helps Mold UNC Eleven

It takes many men to mold a winning football team. The coaching staff needs to be competent from top to bottom.

Jim Tatum has assembled a strong coaching staff for this year's team, and the fate of the team rests at least partly in their hands.

Tatum himself perhaps needs no introduction. He graduated from UNC in 1935. He started out as an assistant coach to Carl Snavelly at Cornell, and then returned to UNC as director of freshman athletics and head football coach for one year.

He coached later at Oklahoma, but received his real fame at Maryland where he produced five bowl game competitors and won one national championship.

He has compiled over the years a 94 win, 31 defeat, and 6 tie record and seems destined to go over the hundred with mark this year. Emmett Cheek, an assistant to Tatum at Maryland, is handling a major portion of the scouting of opposition teams.

Cheek also is helping out with the linemen, and handles the players' files.

Ed Kensler was a lineman at Maryland under Tatum, before coming to UNC to help Tatum out with the chore of training linemen. He coached previously at Washington and Lee and at V.M.I.

A former athletic director at of UNC's most able football aides Wake Forest has turned into one in the person of Pat Preston who also starred for Wake Forest in the early '40's.

Ernie Williamson, a UNC graduate, was brought here as a talent scout and head of the Educational Foundation, Inc. He was since helped out during off-season with some of the coaching duties.

Fred Tullai came with Tatum when Tatum made the switch from Maryland to UNC three years ago.

At first he served as freshman coach but afterward he was made an assistant to the varsity coaching staff.

Perhaps the most well known of the coaching staff is George Barclay former football coach of Carolina, who was an All-America at UNC during his playing days. He came out of semi-retirement in private business last year in order to take the coaching duties for the Carolina eleven.

Barclay worked under Tatum for three years at Maryland as well as coaching at Oberlin, Dartmouth, and V.M.I. He was formerly head coach at Washington and Lee, Leon Carson will be coaching the freshman team. Carson is the newest member of the coaching staff and formerly played for Carolina under Carl Snavelly from 1948-51.

Jake Wade as usual is handling the sports publicity for the Carolina eleven.

Head trainer for the team is John Lacey who worked under Tatum for five years at Maryland before coming to Carolina. Lacey will help with the coaching duties.

Morris also assisted Lacey at Maryland.

The senior manager of the team will be Don Buckley and Jim Long, the latter is also chairman of the Student Council in student government work.
