

IDC Court Revision Proposals To Have Fate Decided Tonight

Passage Of Bill To Put Two Courts In Operation

The Interdormitory Council meets tonight in special session to decide the fate of the dorm court revision proposals.

Instead of one IDC Court to try all violations of dorm rules, the court revision proposal calls for two types of courts. One is the IDC Court and the other type is the Dormitory Council Court (DCC) in each men's dorm.

If the bill is passed, the IDC

Court will have original jurisdiction in cases where the violation of dorm rules was committed by a person residing in another dorm other than in the one where the violation took place and by dormitory officers.

For the most part, the IDC Court would have appellate jurisdiction. Membership on this court would be seven IDC members during the regular school session and five during the summer.

The significant part of the proposed revisions is the Dormitory Council Court. In each dorm, a DCC will have original jurisdiction over dorm rule infractions committed by residents of the particular dorm.

Membership on the DCC will consist of the four executive officers of the dorm and three members of the dorm to be selected before each court session. These three dorm members will act as a jury.

In both the IDC Court and Dormitory Council Courts, decisions must come from a majority of those voting.

For the most part, the procedure for both courts will be the same.

GM Board May Act On Employees

The Graham Memorial Board of Directors is expected to act today on recommendations from the Personnel Policy Committee concerning the status of student government employees.

This problem, according to Student Body President Don Furtado, could develop into a threat to student autonomy.

Generally, what must be decided today by the GM Board of Directors is: should these student government employees be subject to University control or student control. But the decision expected today will be much more complex and detailed than a mere selection of who will control the employees.

Other business on the agenda for the Board of Directors includes: appointment of the Building, Budget and Space committees. The Building Committee will work on recommendations for a new student union building.

What Is O.G.H. Said Related To Geetus Ads

What is it? A printed sign certainly, but what does it mean and where does it come from? All printing shops in Chapel Hill deny printing the signs. The Duplicating Dept. knows nothing about them.

The Buildings Dept. reports that no one has asked permission to hang the signs. The posting is therefore illegal.

An anonymous source said "O.G.H." is related to the "Geetus" ads that have been currently running in The Daily Tar Heel. The "Geetus," to appear Nov. 21, has been variously described as "unexplainable, something that must be experienced existentially" and "a new innovation."

Others have suggested that "O.G.H." has either to do with the problem of organization on campus or with "Our Great Homecoming."

Police Action Includes Four Arrests, Charges

Chapel Hill police action last weekend included the following arrests and charges:

Gerald G. Reynolds, 20, was charged with public drunkenness and resisting arrest. A second and separate charge was filed against Reynolds for malicious damage to property and forcible trespassing by breaking glass and entering a rest room at the University Service Station.

Lee M. Weinstein, 18, was charged with reckless driving Saturday.

John A. Knight, 18, was charged Sunday, with tampering with an auto.

Peter Townsend, 18, was charged with speeding in a 20 miles-per-hour zone Sunday.

INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

NOT ALL CROCUSES BLOOM IN SPRING—Most people think of crocuses as plants that bloom in the spring, but several species are at their best when the leaves begin to fall. Miss Iva Lee Brooks of Chapel Hill examines some of the 2,500 fall-blooming crocuses in Coker Arboretum.

SAYS SCHOOL OFFICIAL HERE

U. S., Russia Swap Education Theories

Russia's educational system is moving toward more freedom and recognition of individual differences, while the U. S. system heads toward greater rigidity and uniformity, a Virginia school official reports here Monday.

M. Lester Carper, superintendent of schools in Martinsville, Va., addressed the annual banquet of the Associated Public School Systems' zone meeting at UNC.

CAN'T BE MOLDED
Reporting on a month's tour of European schools which he made this summer with a Columbia University group, Carper reported that Russian educators realize now that an individual cannot arbitrarily be molded to step into just any occupation and perform satisfactorily.

After several decades of rigid classification, the Russians have begun to recognize the ability differences of the individual student. "event though he remains a pawn to serve the state," Carper said. Testing and grading systems are used in the schools along with counseling to guide youngsters to vocations or professions for which they have talent.

Carper added however that the basic aims of the USSR and American educational systems remain far apart: U. S. goals come from the people and work upward to the decision-makers, while in Russia the goals are decided upon at the top and then "push down to the people."

"We must recognize that the educational system in any society is aimed at (1) perpetuating that society, and (2) improving that society to help it meet its goals," Carper said.

British schools are the prime example of perpetuating the society, he said, while in Russia the principle of society improvement is foremost and in the U. S. development of the individual is considered first, as a means to help society's advancement.

Microscope Worth $400 Said Stolen From Hospital

A binocular type microscope worth $400 apparently was stolen Monday from the UNC Medical School.

The instrument—enclosed in a black wooden box—was reported taken from the north hall of the hospital. Hospital authorities valued the microscope at $400.

Local police had found nothing on the disappearance as of Tuesday afternoon.

AIMS OF ENTIRE GROUP IMPORTANT

Bernard Speaks At UP Meeting

By DEE DANIELS

The purpose of a political party is to put into effect what its candidates to be the principle aims of the group stressed Charles Bernard, acting director of admissions, at the first meeting of the University Party last night in the Rendezvous Room at GM.

Mr. Bernard brought out that a political organization should have a central committee with the purpose of directing the whole group. "The main thing you want to do is to have your organization express the aims of the whole organization," he remarked.

Mentioning that many officers have lots of questions after they get into office he expressed the need for needing, but in the process some needlers are also necessary. So he continued, "Utilize every individual you can."

He further stated that a political party must be concerned with certain things, particularly the "candidates you propose and the issues you decide."

In selecting candidates, he said to be sure they are the best the party has to offer as "We don't want domination by one particular group." He said this is true in national politics as well as local.

Further business on the agenda was the presentation by the Executive Committee of a motion that the prerequisite of a petition signed by 25 persons for new members be dispensed with. It was decided to present this to Legislature.

John Minter gave a report on the changes made in the election laws. Membership cards were distributed after the meeting and refreshments were served.

Summer Gone Fall Crocuses In Arboretum

The fall-blooming crocuses are prolonging the summer at Coker Arboretum.

Over 2,500 bulbs of crocus zonatus which is a rose-lilac, free-blooming species, were planted August 6th and are at the height of their beauty right now.

Prof. C. Ritchie Bell, director of the Arboretum, points out that the autumn crocus is an innovation in keeping with the new botanical policy of having something blooming in all parts of the garden as a plant that blooms in the spring. But there are several species that are, at their best at the time the leaves begin to fall from most of the trees.

Bell said the fall crocuses came in the nick of time. Usually the thousands of spider lilies can be depended upon to add fall color along the paths of the Arboretum. However, the cold and rain of last winter have kept the lilies from blooming. The crocuses which come in the fall help to make up the deficiencies.

Coed Released From Hospital Snakebite O.K.

A UNC coed who suffered a poisonous snake-bite Thursday evening was released from Memorial Hospital Monday.

Sandra Carlton, a freshman dental hygienist from Lexington, was bitten when returning from supper with two classmates about 6:30 p.m. They were walking up the usual path through Kenan Woods used by students housed in Nurse's Dormitory when Sandra felt a sharp pain in her leg. The pain immediately became so severe that she couldn't walk.

Peter Foley, who happened to be nearby, placed a handkerchief tourniquet above the bite and rushed her to the emergency room of Memorial Hospital. Dr. Mauro, who administered emergency treatment, said Foley's quick action saved her life.

Hospital staff members said Thursday that the bite was definitely from a poisonous snake and from the size of the marks, appeared to be a large copperhead. None of the witness saw the reptile at the time nor has any sign of snakes been seen in the vicinity.

Glen Watkins To Play Organ Tuesday Night

Glen E. Watkins, new faculty member of the UNC Music Dept., will make his first public appearance in Chapel Hill in an organ recital set for Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in Hill Hall.

London and Oxford as a Fulbright. The concert is the second on the Tuesday Evening Series sponsored by the UNC Music Dept. The programs are given bi-monthly and are open to the public without admission charge.

Dr. Watkins was appointed to the Music Dept. faculty to succeed Dr. Jan Schinhan who retired in June. He comes to Chapel Hill from Southern Illinois where he was assistant professor and university organist from 1954 to 1958.

A graduate of the University of Michigan and the Eastman School of Music, Dr. Watkins has also studied with Nadia Boulanger in Fontainebleau. While in France he was an organ pupil of Roland Falcinelli and Jean Langlais.

In addition to his studies in France, Watkins spent a year in London and Oxford as a Fulbright scholar in musicology. At present he is working as co-editor of the Complete Works of Carol Gesualdo.

Dr. Watkins, who is now assistant professor in organ and theory at the Consolidated University of Music, will play a varied program of music by German composers Buxtehude and Bach; French composers Daquin, Langlais and Dupre; and American musicians Searle, Wright and Edmund Haines.

Plans Begun For Student And Merchants

Plans are under way to have a student representative present at the full meeting Monday night of the Chapel Hill Merchants Assn. Election of officers will be held at this meeting.

Anyone interested in the position has been asked to contact Miss Julia Sattles, executive secretary of student government, to schedule an appointment with Student Body President Don Furtado. Duties of the non-voting representative will be to keep the president and student body informed of plans and actions of the association.

The position does not require a knowledge of merchandising or accounting, according to Furtado. But the student must possess the desire to be a link between the downtown merchants and UNC students.

Queen Contest Entries Must Be In By Tonight

Tonight is the deadline for submitting entries in the Homecoming Queen Contest.

Final plans for the contest have been released by University Club President Dave Jones.

Mrs. William C. Friday, wife of the Consolidated University president, will serve as hostess and as a judge for this year's contest. Her home will be the scene of the judging Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The other judges for the contest are Mrs. Kay Kysner, Margaret Carmichael, Ty Boyd and Don Furtado, University Club President. In announcing these plans, said, "I am grateful to Mrs. Friday for offering her home and her time."

I am sure that UNC will have a charming queen this year because we already have a large slate of charming coeds."

The choice made by the five judges from among the entrants submitted by the men's dorms and fraternities will be announced Friday night at the Homecoming Dance. The dance, co-sponsored by GMA and the University Club, will be held in Woolen Gym from 8 until 12.

The queen will be crowned and her court presented at halftime at the game Saturday afternoon.

N. C. Memorial Hospital Needs Child's Toys

Toys are needed for the children's playroom at N. C. Memorial Hospital.

Persons having toys that are no longer needed are urged to donate them to the hospital. Civic, religious and fraternal groups also are invited to participate in this project. Toys or money for the purchase of toys will be welcomed.

Individuals or groups who wish to make donations are asked to contact Mrs. Viola Jacobs at the hospital.
