

FIRST TOUCHDOWN—Soph End John Schroeder galloped 51 yards for the first Carolina touchdown after this play, eluding Ken Farrell of Wake Forest at the Wake 10. The play started at the Carolina 49 when Jack Cummings threw a pass with the pressure on and Schroeder grabbed it for the score.

Tar Heels Wallop Wake Forest 26-7

Big Second Half Spells Deacs' Doom

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina's torrid Tar Heels rolled over stubborn Wake Forest here yesterday 26-7 for their 4th consecutive victory.

The Tar Heels used the home run type play to great advantage combined with long drives. The defense was tough as usual, allowing the Deacs only one score and forcing them into the air much of the afternoon.

Heels Strike First

After the first quarter had ended in a scoreless tie, the Tar Heels finally got rolling just before the end of the half. On a drive which started from their own 47, the Heels drove 53 yards for their first marker. The big play was a beautiful 51 yard pass from Jack Cummings to John Schroeder. Schroeder grabbed the pigskin at the Wake ten, faked out Ken Farrell, and galloped into the end zone unmolested. The try for two failed and Carolina led at intermission 6-0.

After receiving the kick-off to begin the second half, the Tar Heels struck hard and fast for their second touchdown. From his own 38, Wade Smith broke off left tackle, evaded the entire Wake Forest team, and romped 62 yards into paydirt. Once again the try for two was stopped but Carolina led 12-0 with 13:7 remaining in the third period.

Only Bright Spot

Wake Forest's only bright spot of the day was when they pulled within 5 points. The score came just after the third quarter began on a 56-yard sustained drive. The scoring play was Jim Dalrymple's smash into the end zone from 3 yards out. Neal McClean converted to put the Deacs back into the game at 12-7.

But Carolina came charging back to sew things up with another counter as soon as the Baptists kicked off. From their own 11, the Tar Heels drove 89 yards, the big play being Cummings' toss to Al Goldstein in the right far corner of the end zone. This time the Heels added the extra as Moose Butler split the uprights.

With only two minutes and 17 seconds left in the game, Carolina put the fourth nail into the Wake coffin when Moyer Smith set up the touchdown on a reverse good for a 9 yard gain to the Wake 3; then smashed over from that point. Phil Blazer converted to provide the final margin, 26-7.

The middle of the Carolina line was tremendous all day long, as were the defensive flankers. Neal McClean found the going indeed rough up the middle. McClean wound up with a good average, but gained all his yardage on draw plays.

The great defensive showing of the Heels forced the Deacon quarterbacks to pass fast and furious.

TO PARALLEL SYMPOSIUM

March 8 Tentatively Set For Forum Of Fine Arts

By MARY ALICE ROWLETTE

A Forum of the Fine Arts, intended to parallel the Carolina Symposium, is in the planning stage on the UNC campus.

The weekend of March 8 has been selected as the date for the forum which will offer outstanding speakers in the fields of drama, the novel, poetry, music, painting, philosophy, motion pictures, radio and TV, the dance and musical comedy.

However, if money for the Five Arts Forum is not raised by Dec. 1, plans will have to be altered or abandoned, according to Mark Wilson, chairman of the Planning Committee.

The theme of the forum is "Creativity in Crisis" and the purpose is "to bring together in Chapel Hill some of the outstanding artists of today to share with the University community and with one another, in a week of lectures and open discussions, their ideas on what the arts should mean to the individual in a world in which crisis has become commonplace."

"Though each participant will be asked to give only one major talk, we hope that most of the visiting speakers will be able to remain on the campus throughout the entire week to participate in classroom discussions and roundtable discussions with other speakers," Wilson said.

Tentative plans for the Forum began last spring. Approximately 20 students and faculty members have been meeting weekly this fall to work on it.

The officers of the forum, elected by the planning committee are Mark Wilson, chairman; Jack Rapier, vice chairman; Jane Payne, secretary; Everett James, treasurer and Dr. Wilton Mason of the Department of Music, faculty advisor.

Coeds, Events Now Featured In GM Program

By FRANCES WALTON

The Graham Memorial monthly calendar has a new face, several new faces, in fact.

It is being published once a month and includes the picture of a coed plus more events than in previous years.

This calendar is the work of the GMAB Calendar Committee, headed by Angus Duff. It is compiled of dates from campus organizations Sam McGill's office calendar, GM events calendar, GMAB committee functions, athletic events and other administrative information.

Each month the committee selects an attractive, well-rounded Carolina coed whose picture graces the upper right side of the front of the calendar. The back side includes a picture of Graham Memorial and a list of all 13 GMAB committees.

The calendar is distributed each month to all fraternities sororities, dormitories and other housing and congregation buildings.

The Calendar Committee operates under a yearly budget of $800, which must cover the cost of publishing 3,500 calendars a month.

In addition to Chairman Duff, the committee includes: Benj Seagle, Mike Smith, Boots Baker, Rudy Waldorf and Pete Austin.

Talks Planned On Destruction Of Telephones

Damage incurred to dormitory telephones will be discussed in the near future by J. S. Bennett, director of the Operations Office; Don Furtado, student body president; Rudy Edwards, IDC president, and other concerned students.

Furtado recently called for such a conference in a letter to Bennett. Furtado said much of the damage to telephones occurs when they are dropped, allowed to swing against the wall or left dangling by the cords.

During the proposed conference, discussion will center on the feasibility of placing in the various dorms wall booths of the "hear here" type like those in the Y Building and Graham Memorial.

These additions might decrease damage done to the telephones and at the same time increase quiet in the dormitories, Furtado added.

Bennett said yesterday he will be willing to try such phones in a few places if that is what the students desire.

Right Owners; Wrong Auto - Or Vice Versa?

By CHUCK FLINNER

Two cars were just alike and the right owner drove off in the wrong car or the wrong owner drove off in the wrong car or the wrong owner drove off in the right car or anyway the case is closed.

A car was reported stolen and recovered the same day by the Chapel Hill police department.

Cecil Garret reported to the police that he had parked his car behind the Delta Sigma Pi fraternity house. When he looked for it in the evening it was gone. The car was described as a '54 cream and green four-door model.

Officer C. L. Byrd recovered the car the same evening. The car had been taken by mistake.

world organization, the United Nations, whose birthday anniversary was universally celebrated Friday.

A Y committee, the U.N. Education Committee (UNEC), compiled colorful exhibits of UN countries, such as the matador's cape, in observance of the UN's birthday celebration. The UNEC collaborated with the Collegiate Council for the United Nations (CCUN) and the American Association for the United Nations (AAUN) in presenting the exhibition. Displays were donated by the Cosmopolitan Club.

Some of the many languages were there in pamphlets, posters and books. The tones of music from strange lands filled the Y and drifted outside the building.

Flags representing each of the 82 countries in the UN decorated the main exhibit table, which extended the length of the Y lobby.

On the opposite wall were hung the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the preamble to the UN charter.

A 20-minute film entitled "United Nations and World Disputes" flicked across a TV screen throughout the day.

A beneficial aspect was present in the selling of Christmas cards and cookbooks. The proceeds from the sales will go to aid in the rehabilitation of needy children in all parts of the world.

Children from Chapel Hill schools were entertained by a "Treasure Chest" filled with candy and toys from foreign countries and UN balloons.

The UNEC, just formed this year, will sponsor, in addition to UN day, three seminars to the UN in New York and will work with the CCUN on a model UN assembly here. Schools from various parts of the South will be represented, with each school representing a particular country.

Bill Sugg, president of the YMCA, was elected president of the state CCUN last year. North Carolina has the only state collegiate UN council in the country. The CCUN strives to further knowledge and appreciation of the UN on college campuses and in public school systems.

Betsy May, a co-chairman of the UNEC, said she was not confronted with any "headaches" in setting up the exhibition. She commended the nearby 50 students, as well as the local merchants, who co-operated with the committee in setting up the UN exhibit.

WAC Offers Month Trial For Coeds

The Women's Army Corps (WAC) is offering a one-month trial period this summer for coeds as a sample of a future career as a commissioned officer.

A WAC officer will be here Monday, Oct. 27, at 2 p.m. in Gardner Hall to meet with any interested Carolina coed.

Women over 18 years of age who have completed their junior year are qualified to apply.

Upon selection, women will be called to four weeks active duty at the WAC Center, Fort McClellan, Ala., as a member of the WAC enlisted reserve. For this time $122.30 will be paid each coed at the end of the training.

Classroom work at Fort McClellan consists of eight 50-minute periods five days a week. The curriculum covers four subjects: general military, military operations, management and administration and military techniques.

Summer uniforms will be issued upon arrival at the Center.

Recreation facilities at the Fort include: hobbyshop and tennis courts, golf course and swimming pools, the Officers' Club, and bowling alleys and theatres.

Women who do not complete the course or decide not to apply for a commission as a second Lieutenant will be discharged from the U. S. Army Reserve.

Coeds participating in the training program are not obligated to enlist in the WAC after graduation,

Carolina Air Force ROTC Harps On Lack Of Angels

By MARY ALICE ROWLETTE

The Air Force ROTC needs more angels.

Not necessarily the wings-harp-halo type, but they must have poise, personality and interest in the AFROTC. Also, they must be UNC coeds.

These earthly angels, official hostesses for the AFROTC, are giving a tea Thursday, Oct. 30, for nominees for the 1959 Angel Flight. Prospective members are nominated by the cadets and present members of Angel Flight.

A week after the tea, each girl will be interviewed by top ranking cadet officers, executive officers of Angel Flight and staff members. Only juniors and underclassmen will be considered for membership.

The Angels wear their sky blue Eisenhower jackets, skirts, stewardess' caps, white scarves and gloves all day every Thursday. Meetings, in which they learn military etiquette and rank, are held from 5 to 6 p.m. on Thursdays.

The duties of this honorary group include giving coffees for the cadets, receptions for visiting dignitaries, acting as hostesses at the military ball, riding in parades and participating in reviews.

Each year they participate in the Air Force area conclave in February. The 1959 conclave will be held at UNC. It is a weekend of banquets, coffees, meetings and fun.

The Angels are honorary members of the Arnold Air Society and yearly visit Pope and Johnson Air Bases for tours and luncheons. They correspond with the National Angel Flight and participate in flights twice a year.

These 25 busy "angels," while they don't quite make the AFROTC heaven, do manage to keep the fire and brimstone from being too noticeable.
